TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends; and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

Caucus.

The caucus held at Town Hall, last Thursday evening, was necidedly a cut and dried afiair The weather was drizzly and extremely disagreeable, which, with the entertainment of the Odd Fellows, kept away a large number of our prominent citizens who should have been present. However, the hall was packed full, mostly by our adopted citizens. The meeting was called to order by Wm. F. Wiley, and Amos Merrill was chosen Chairman, and Frank C. Merrill, Secretary.

Frank E. Farnham, moved that the candidates for Selectmen and Assessors, Overseers of the Poor, Trustees of Peabody Institute, Water Board and School Committee, be chosen by ballot, instead of having a committee retire and nominate, as was the custom; this would give, as he said, a fair expression of the caucus. This led to a short discussion, and it was finally adopted.

It was voted, on motion of Wm. F. Wiley, to recommend to the town that the Board of Selectmen and Water Board hereafter consist of five members each, instead of three. It was then voted that a recess of ten minutes be taken to prepare ballots for candidates for Selectmen. This was when the "racket" commenced. This was where the fair (?) expression of the caucus came in. As the Farnham-Bancroft faction pulled the printed ballots from their pockets and commenced to distribute them, not one was absent when they were wanted. Everybody that was posted was there. The various club rooms were well represented as usual. It was a beautiful sight to see such an array of innocent, modest and instructed crowd of voters, impelled by a stern sense of duty, walk up to the polls and deposit those printed ballots.

It was moved by Frank T. Arnold to adjourn to Saturday evening, but the motion, after discussion, was lost. During this discussion Messrs. Bancroft and Farnham participated. Unparalleled excitement! Every speech was encored—by the instructed. The retiring of a few gentlemen from the hall was the occasion for the cry of "bolt" by the Farnham-Bancroft crowd. The balloting was commenced, and those who were not instructed to stay (with few exceptions, including the newspaper scribe) quietly retired and left everything in the hands of the instructed. The result of the balloting was as follows. Those marked with a star declined serving:

Town Clerk and Treasurer—Nathan H. Poor.

Selectmen and Assessors — Nathan H. Poor, Levi Preston, *John G. Walcott, S. Augustus Southwick, *Nicholas M. Quint.

Collector of Taxes—Levi Preston.

Overseers of Poor—A. W. Bancroft, James P. King, James Fallon.

Trustees of Peabody Institute—*C. C. Pike, Geo. A. Osborne.

Water Board — D. S. Littlefield, *Horace Merrill, Geo. C. Pierce, Geo. K. Wiggin, C. G. Folsom.

School Committee — D. M. Elliott, Stephen S. Littlefield.

Board of Health — T. J. Relihan, George M. Frost, John Ruth.

Constables — Stephen Upton, John Ruth, Charles A. Weare, Thos. Riley, W. W. Reed, Thomas W. Peasley, Othernial Ferren, W. H. Larrabee, G. W. Jones, T. N. Barnaby, F. O. Parker, W. H. Pingree, E. Littlefield, A. J. Hayes, D. Rahilley, John Perkins, Henry Farnham, A. J. Wiggin.

On motion of S. C. Bancroft, a Citizens' Town Committee, whose duty shall be to call future citizens' caucuses, was appointed as follows:

Frank C. Merrill, S. A. Southwick, W. F. Sumner, George E. Lewis, John E. Herrick, Michael Kelley, Edward Trask, F. E. Farnham, L. S. Peabody, John J. Bartlett, Charles G. Folsom, Stephen F. Blaney, Nathan H. Bushby.

The following were appointed a rallying committee to serve town meeting day:

Frank E. Farhnam, Starr C. Hewitt, Edward Trask, James H. Thomas, W. F. Sumner, Michael Cummings, Thos. H. McGrath, John J. Bartlett.

Before the meeting closed it was voted to extend thanks to the Chairman and Secretary for the faithful performance of their duties.

POLICE NOTES. — Feb. 5th, Ann Sweeney, for assault, was fined $7.85. She appealed.

Feb. 7th, John McPoland, for assault, fined $4.35.

TOWN MEETING.

One of the inscrutable things of this world is that good citizens who desire the best results in town elections do not more promptly and more generally rally to prevent the success of the machinations of men who take advantage of their apathy to gratify their pique or their ambition. The election on Monday was a telling illustration of the result of this stay-at-home policy. While we are glad to be able to say that as a whole the successful ticket gives us a board of town officers who will serve the town well, in some instances the best interests of the town are subverted. Without specifying each case, the defeat of Mr. Merrill upon the Water Board and School Committee deprives the town of his services from two places where his past experience, good judgment and thorough knowledge of the duties of the positions would have been of great value to the town. The town has lost a good opportunity to place upon the Board of Trustees of the Institute Mr. Francis H. Appleton, a person peculiarly well adapted for the position, a gentleman who is liberal, cultured, and fitted by education and tastes to be of eminent service in such a position.

The meeting was called promptly to order at the appointed time by Nathan H. Poor, Town Clerk, and after the reading of the warrant voting began for Moderator.

Whole number of ballots, 143.

George Randall,	64
S. C. Bancroft,	77

Mr. Bancroft was declared elected. The close vote indicates how little exertion was needed to have changed the result.

Prayer was offered by Rev. L. L. Wood, after which the following officers were chosen by hand ballot:

Fence Viewers — John G. Walcott, John F. Pickering, Lewis Brown, Abraham C. Osborn, Bowman Viles.

Surveyors of Lumber—Chas. G. Folsom, John Hackett, Edward Giddings.

Field Drivers—Chas. E. Brown, Robert G. Buxton, Geo. Brown, Daniel Haskell, Hugh Owens, Robert P. Brown.

Pound Keepers—Robert P. Brown, Lewis Buxton, Henry A. Bodge.

The following articles were referred to the Finance Committee:

7th. To determine the amount of money that shall be raised for the necessary and usual expenses of the Town, when it shall be paid into the treasury, and the rate of interest to be charged on delinquent taxes.

8th. To appropriate money for the payment of State Aid to Soldiers and their families.

9th. To determine what compensation shall be allowed to town officers and firemen, the ensuing year.

10th. To determine the manner of repairing the highways and bridges.

11th. To determine what sum of money shall be raised for the repairs of highways and bridges, and how it shall be appropriated.

13th. To see if the Town will appropriate money for a day and night police.

14th. To determine what sum of money shall be appropriated for the support of schools.

15th. To determine in what manner the money arising from the surplus dog fund, and the Town's portion of the income of the Massachusetts School Fund, shall be disposed of.

16th. To see if the Town will authorize the Town Treasurer to hire money.

Finance Committee — Amos Merrill, John Pinder, Stephen F. Blaney, Geo. C. Peirce, Wm. P. Clark, Geo. F. Sanger, Wm. P. Wiley.

Art. 12, to see if the town would appropriate money for lighting the streets, Mr. S. F. Blaney moved that the sum of $3000 be approdriated. A spirited discussion ensued, in which Mr. Blaney and Messrs. James P. King, Jonathan King, C. B. Farley and John Linehan took part, the remarks at times furnishing much matter for merriment by their rather direct and sharp thrusts. Mr. Jonathan King favored keeping near the old sum ($200), Mr. J. P. King proposed $2400, but the sum suggested by Mr. Blaney was finally voted.

Voted, That the bells be rung at noon and at 9 P. M.

Voted, That the list of jurors be accepted.

Voted, That the report of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute be accepted and printed.

Voted, That the report of Trustees of Cedar Grove Cemetery be referred to the Finance Committee.

Voted, That the report of the Water Board be referred to the Finance Committee.

Voted, That the Selectmen be authorized to purchase land for the purpose of procuring material for the repairs of highways, if expedient so to do.

Voted, That the Water Board in future consist of five members, to hold office for one year.

Voted, That the free use of the town hall be granted to all political parties to hold caucuses.

Voted, That the petition of Edward E. Taylor and others, to raise the grade of Brown street, deepening the gutters of County street, be referred to the Selectmen, to report at adjournment.

Voted, To appropriate $200 for Decoration Day.

Voted, That the petition of Frank E. Farnham and others, requiring the town to provide at the Alms House, or elsewhere within the limits of the town, suitable accommodations for the confinement, discipline and instruction of truant children, be referred to the following Committee: F. E. Farnham, Amos Merrill, James P. King, D. M. Elliott, Edward Trask.

Voted, That the petition of George Upton and others, to establish a Telephonic Fire Alarm, be referred to the Board of Engineers, to report at the adjournment, and that they be instructed to give the petitioners a hearing.

Voted, That the petition of Charles E. Hoag and others, to have the By-Laws of the town revised, be referred to the Selectmen, to report at adjournment.

Voted, That the Committee on Town House be continued, and that they report at the next annual meeting.

Mr. S. F. Blaney made a speech in favor of a new Town House, but thought it better to postpone action in the matter. Although no general discussion took place, the exclamations of the assembly indicated a strong feeling in favor of the project.

Voted. That the further consideration of the report of the Committee on high service water be deferred to the adjournment.

At 11.35 P. M. the votes given in for the several offices being assorted, counted and declared, it was voted to adjourn to Monday, March 21st, at 9 o'clock, A. M.

All of the Constables on the Independent Citizens' Ticket were elected; also the members of the Board of Health, and one member of the Overseers of the Poor—Mr. Sanger. The parties were about equally divided, Mr. Winchester needing only 40 votes to defeat Mr. Galeucia for Selectman, and Mr. Appleton 27 to defeat Mr. Farnham for Trustee of the Peabody Institute. The vote was the largest ever cast for town officers.

Among the Farms.

NO. 2.

It does not seem expedient to go out of town to examine farms, in order to gain a knowledge of their general management from their owners or superintendents, while we have so many excellent ones at home. Last Saturday afternoon, in company with our genial friend (the Phosphate man), we paid a visit to the farm owned by Henry Gardner, Esq., of Salem, and managed by that peerless farmer, Mr. Andrew J. Hayes. Here we received a cordial welcome, with the earnest request that we make ourselves entirely at home, and whatever information we desired, it should be freely given. The farm house is situated on Gardner Street, Peabody, an avenue leading from Liberty street to the North Salem road. This street is particularly distinguished for its Democratic proclivities.

This farm is one of the largest in the County, and is conducted almost exclusively as a milk farm. Hay enough is cut, together with the other kinds of fodder raised upon the farm, to fill the two large barns, and supports the entire stock through the year. There are now upon the farm thirty-five superior cows, four large oxen and six horses. We were informed that the average production of the cows was seven quarts each per day, for the year, a very good showing for so large a herd. In addition to the hay, a large amount of roots of different kinds are produced upon the farm, and fed out to the stock. Several acres of corn are raised and consumed by the animals. It requires an enormous amount of manure to dress this farm, and Mr. Hayes is not slow in procuring it. When the barn cellar and compost heap fail to meet his wants he supplements his supply with Superphosphates, from the factory of A. L. Ames. Mr. Hayes gives preference to this commercial fertilizer over any that he has used, for the purity of its manufacture, and the good effect it has upon the crops where it is applied, as evidenced by some corn he showed us. The milk route connected with this farm is the oldest in the county if not in New England. Its age, if not quite coeval with the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock, is anterior to the war of the Revolution, as the figures upon the milk wagon will bear testimony. In those days of "ye olden times" the milk business was an untried experiment; now, it is a fixed fact. Then, one milk wagon entered Salem alone in its glory; now, there are hundreds of stars striving to eclipse its brilliancy.

At this stage of the preceeding, my friend who accompanied me, asked the communicative foreman what constituted a well appointed modern milk route. His answer was as follows: One horse and wagon, one man and boy, three Jersey cows, whose pedigrees are recorded in the last edition of the "American Jersey Herd Book." A good supply of milk pails and cans, two wells, "Tubular" or "Artesian" it matters not which, one located in the barn, the other in the milk room. With these equipments, you have as good a thirty can milk route as enters the city of Salem. After the information we desired, we left Mr. Hayes, grateful for his generous welcome, and the kind attention he had shown us, hoping the next time we visit him, we shall have the pleasure of seeing that indespensable concomitant of the farm, A "SILO."

Poet's Corner.

The Crowded Street.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Let me move slowly through the street,
Filled with an ever shifting train,
Amid the sound of steps that beat
The murmuring walks like autumn rain.

How fast the flitting figures come!
The mild, the fierce, the stony face,—
Some bright with thoughtless smiles and some
Where secret tears have left their trace.

They pass—to toil, to strife, to rest;
To halls in which the feast is spread;
To chambers where the funeral guest
In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair,
Where children, pressing cheek to cheek,
With mute caresses shall declare
The tenderness they cannot speak.

And some who walk in calmness here
Shall shudder as they reach the door
Where one who made their dwelling dear,
Its flower, its light, is seen no more.

Youth, with pale cheek and slender frame,
And dreams of greatness in thine eye!
Go'st thou to build an early name,
Or early in the task to die?

Keen son of trade, with eager brow!
Who is now fluttering in thy snare?
Thy golden fortunes, tower they now,
Or melt the glittering spires in air?

Who of this crowd to-night shall tread
The dance till daylight gleams again?
Who sorrow o'er the untimely dead?
Who writhe in throes of mortal pain?

Some, famine-struck, shall think how long
The cold, dark hours, how slow the light;
And some, who flaunt amid the throng,
Shall hide in dens of shame to-night.

Each where his tasks or pleasure call,
They pass and heed each other not,
There is One who heeds who holds them all
In his large love and boundless thought.

These struggling tides of life that seem
In wayward, aimless course to tend,
Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its appointed end.

The Housekeeper's Soliloquy.

To move, or not to move; that's the question.
Whether 'tis nobler (in your mind) to suffer
The pressing duns of an outrageous landlord,
Or take up carpets with a world of trouble,
And then by moving, spoil them. To move—to rest—
No more; and by such move to then begin
The backache and the most unnatural shocks
That flesh is heir to—'tis a consummation
Profanely to be hissed. To skip—to fly—
Ay, there's the rub! For in that sudden flight
What aches will come when we have bundled up
Our household goods, must make us pause. For who Would bear the feather-bed and looking-glass
Adown the steep and zigzag stairs,
And with a rusty stovepipe filled with soot
Go gallavanting down the crowded street,
The shrinking cynosure of evil eyes?
And who would bear the jibes from mocking mouths,
The stinging sneers, the scornful lips, and yells
From those who have no business of their own,
But that the thought of landlords in pursuit,
From whose exacting clutch none e'er escape,
Gilds the pills, and makes us fly to other ills
Than rather bear the ones we have. Thus he Doth make expressmen of us all, and thus
The hateful hue of one year's rent unpaid
Is sicklied o'er with, "You must get right out,"
And the hegira of our blasted hopes
Takes up the name of action.

Selected Story.

THE DEMON ARCHITECT.

In connction with the recent great opening ceremonial at Cologne Cathedral, the following legend, as suggesting its plan, will be found of interest:

Mighty was the Archbishop Conrad de Hochsteden, for he was lord over the chief city of the Rhine, the City of Cologne; but his thoughts were troubled and his heart was heavy, for though his churches were rich beyond compare in relics, yet other towns not half so large or powerful as his had cathedrals whose fame extended over Europe, and whose beauty brought pilgrims to their shrine, profit to the ecclesiastics, and business to the townspeople. After many sleepless nights, therefore, he determined to add to his city the only thing wanting to complete it, and sending for the most famous architect of the time, he commissioned him to complete the plan for the Cathedral of Cologne.

Now, the architect was a fine man, but he was more vain than clever. He had a dreamy notion of magnificence, which he desired to achieve without a clear conception of how he was to do it, or without the will to make the necessary sacrifices of labor, care and perseverance. He received the commission with great gladness, and gloated for some days upon the fame which would be his as the builder of the structure which the archbishop desired; but after this vision of glory, when he took out his crayons to sketch out the design, he was thrown into the deepest despondency. He drew and drew, and added and erased, and corrected, and began again, and still did not succeed. Not a plan could be complete. Some were too mean, others too extravagant, and others, when done and examined, were found to be good, but not original. Efforts of memory instead of imagination, their points of excellence were discovered to be copies—a tower from one, a spire from another, an aisle from a third, and an altar from a fourth, and one after another they were cast aside as imperfect and useless, until the draftsman, more than half crazy, felt inclined to end his troubles and perplexities by a plunge into the Rhine.

In this mood of more than half despair, he wandered down to the river's edge, and seating himself upon a stone began to draw in the sand with a measuring rod, which served as a walking-stick, the outlines of various parts of a church. Ground-plans, towers, finials, brackets, windows, columns, appeared one after another, traced by the point of his wand, but all, one after another, were erased as unequal and insufficient for the purpose, and unworthy to form a part of the design for a cathedral of Cologne. Turning round, the architect was aware that another person was beside him, and with surprise the disappointed draftsman saw that the stranger was also busily inventing a design. Rapidly on the sand he sketched the details of a most magnificent building, its towers rising to the clouds, its long aisles and lofty choir stretching away before the eye of the gaze, until he mentally confessed it was indeed a temple worthy of the Most High. The windows were enriched by tracery, such as artist never had before conceived, and the lofty columns reared their tall length towards a roof which seemed to claim kindred with the clouds, and to equal the firmament in expanse and beauty. But each line of this long-sought plan vanished the moment it was seen, and, with a complete conviction of its excellence, when it was gone not a portion of it could the architect remember.

"Your sketch is excellent," said he to the unknown; "it is what I have thought and dreamed of—what I have sought for and wished for, and have not been able to find. Give it to me on paper and I will pay you twenty gold pieces."

"Twenty pieces! Ha! ha! Twenty gold pieces!" laughed the stranger. "Look here!" and from a doublet that did not seem big enough to hold half the money, he drew forth a purse that certainly held 1,000.

The night had closed in, and the architect was desperate. "If money cannot tempt you, fear shall force you;" and, springing towards the stranger, he plucked a dagger from his girdle and held its point close to the breast of the mysterious draftsman in the attitude to strike. In a moment his wrists were pinioned as with the grasp of a vice, and squeezed until he dropped his weapon and shrieked in agony. Falling on the sands, he writhed like an eel upon the fisherman's hook, but plunged and struggled in vain. When nearly fainting, he found himself thrown helpless upon the very brink of the stream.

"There! Revive and be reasonable. Learn that gold and steel have no power over me. You want my cathedral, for it would bring you honor, fame, and profit; and you can have it if you choose."

"How? Tell me how?"

"By signing this parchment with your blood."

"Avaunt, fiend!" shrieked the architect. "In the name of the Saviour I bid thee begone!" And, so saying, he made the sign of the cross; and the Evil One (for it was he) was forced to vanish before the holy symbol. He made time, however, to mutter, "You'll come for the plan at midnight to-morrow."

The artist staggered home, half dead with contending passions, and muttering: "Sell my soul," "to-morrow at midnight," "honor and fame," and other words which told the inward struggle going forward in his soul.—When he reached his lodgings he met the only servant he had, going out, wrapped in her cloak.

"And where are you going so late?" asked her surprised master.

"To mass, for a soul in purgatory," was the reply.

"Oh, horror! horror! no mass will avail me. To everlasting torments shall I be doomed!" And, hurrying to his room, he cast himself down in tears of remorse, irresolution and despair. In this state his old housekeeper discovered him on her return from her holy errand; and, her soul being full of charity and kindly religion, she begged to know what had caused such grief, and spoke of patience in suffering and pardon by repentance. Her words fell upon the disordered ear of the architect with a heavenly comfort, and he told her what had passed.

"Mercy me!" was her exclamation. "Tempted by the fiend himself! so strongly, too!" and so she left the chamber without another word, and hurried off to her confessor.

Now, the confessor of Dame Elfrida was the friend of the abbot, and the abbot was the constant counsellor of the archbishop, and so as soon as the housekeeper spoke of the wonderful plan he told her he would soon see her master, and went at once to his superior. This dignitary immediately pictured to himself the hosts of pilgrims that would seek a cathedral built with skill from such wonderful sketches, and (hoping himself one day to be archbishop) he hurried off to the bewildered architect.

He found him still in bed, and listened with surprise to the glowing account of the Demon's plan.

"And would it be equal to all this?"

"It would."

"Could you build it?"

"I could."

"Would not pilgrims come to worship in such a cathedral?"

"By thousands."

"Listen, my son! Go at midnight to the appointed spot; take the relic with you;" and so saying the abbot gave him a holy morsel of one of the Eleven Thousand Virgins. "Agree to the terms for the design you have so long desired, and when you have got it, and the Evil One presents the parchment for your signature, show this sacred bone."

After long pondering, the priest's advice was taken, and in the gloom of night the architect was seen tremblingly hurrying to the place of meeting. True to his time, the Fiend was there, and with a smile complimented the artist on his punctuality. Drawing from his doublet two parchments, he opened one, on which he traced the outlines of the cathedral, and then another written in some mysterious character, and having a yellow brimstony space left for a signature.

"Let me examine what I am to pay so dearly for."

"Most certainly," said the Demon, with a smile and a bow that would have done honor to the court of the Emperor.

Pressing it with one hand to his breast, the architect, with the other, held up the holy thumb-bone, and exclaimed, "Avaunt, Fiend! In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Virgins of Cologne, I bid thee, Satan, all defiance;" and he described the sign of the cross directly against the devil's face.

In an instant the smile and the graceful civility were gone. With a hideous grin he approached the sacred miracle, as though he would have strangled the possessor; and yelling with a sound that woke half the sleepers of Cologne, he skipped round and round the artist. Still, however, the plan was held tightly with one hand, and the relic held forward like a swordsman's rapier with the other. As the Fiend turned, so turned the architect; until, bethinking himself that another prayer would help him, he called loudly on St. Ursula. The Demon could stand the fight no longer; the chief of the Eleven Thousand Virgins was too much for him.

"None but a confessor could have told you how to cheat me," he shrieked, in the most cynical voice; "but I will be revenged. You have a more wonderful and perfect design than ever entered the brain of man. You want fame—the priest wants a church and pilgrims. Listen! That cathedral shall never be finished, and your name shall be forgotten."

As the dreadful words broke upon his ear the cloak of the tempter stretched out into huge black wings, which were flapped over the spot like two dark thunder clouds, and with such violence that the winds were raised from their slumber and a storm rose upon the waters of the Rhine. Hurrying homeward, the relic placed at arm's length over his head, he reached the abbot's house in safety. But the ominous sentence still rang in his ears: "Unfinished and unknown."

Days, months, years passed by, and the cathedral, commenced with vigor, was growing into form. The architect had long before determined that an inscription should be engraved upon a plate of brass, shaped like a cross, and be fastened upon the front of the first tower that reached a good elevation. His vanity already anticipated a triumph over the Fiend whom he defrauded. He was author of the building which the world could not equal, and in the pride of his heart defied all evil chances to deprive him of fame. Going to the top of the building to see where his name should be placed, he looked over the edge of the building to decide if it were lofty enough to deserve the honor of the inscription, when the workmen were aware of a black cloud which suddenly enveloped them, and burst in thunder and hail. Looking round when the cloud passed away, their master was gone, and one of them declared that amidst the noise of the explosion he heard a wail of agony, which seemed to say, "Unfinished and forgotten."

When they descended the tower, the body of the architect lay crushed upon the pavement. The traveler, until lately, beheld the building as it was on the morning when he fell there, and thousands have sought in vain to learn the name of the architect of Cologne.

Miscellaneous.

NATURAL HISTORY OF THE BOY.—The original noise producers and nerve destroyers of the time.

And yet in themselves a most interesting study. For instance:—

The best boy—Every mother owns him, every father is proud of him, and yet it takes a great deal of the "corrective" to keep him at his best.

The worst boy—Belongs to the next door neighbor every time, and is the hatefullest, meanest, homeliest, stuckupest boy that ever stole a fellow playmate's skates and broke the side rails off from your boy's sled; and how ridiculously they do dress that boy!

The funny boy—Is always cutting some rusty to bring a laugh. He turns himself inside out, and if he makes a hit he keeps at it until he winds up his career in the circus ring retailing thousand-year-old jokes.

The saucy boy—Calls his mother a "squint-eyed logorithm," twigs his fingers on his nose at his father, invents astonishing nicknames for all the cranky people in the neighborhood, and with his hands in his pockets stands on the street corners and yelps his "sass" right in the face and eyes of everybody—yet he never seems to reap his reward.

The wicked boy—Works on the sly. He wanders forth after dark, breaking in all the skating ponds, sprinkling ashes on the coasting grounds, setting logs of wood against back doors and ringing the bells. Essentially mischievous, with a tinge of ugliness, he holds court with a reign of terror, and every boy stands in fear of him. But he is the sleekest, quietest looking boy on the street.

The scholarly boy—Pores over school books when he ought to be out getting snow-balled. He corrects his mother's grammar, improves the style of his father's conversation, and with an air of superiority kindly allows his parents to exist under the same roof with him, and be proud of his attainments. The chances are that he will one day teach a district school at $12 a month, and really think he is moving the world.

The tough boy—Reads dime novels, smokes a clay pipe, frequents the "nigger heaven" in theatres, steals from the apple stands on the corner, is up nights, goes home in a beastly state of intoxication by the time he is fourteen, and at twenty stands on the corner in checked pants, "loud" ulster, plug hat and low-neck shirt, a living picture of dissipation. Boys, don't think it "smart" to be tough.

The newsboy—Take one whiff of him as he stands sixteen deep to buy his papers. The world over, the newsboy carries a distinctive odor, reeking with tobacco smoke, onion soup and the results of a changeless shirt. But he can give an intelligent answer to any question you ask him, and is the longest distance from a fool of any of the boys. He eats great quantities of taffy, and delights in "giving it away."

The boy in "gig lamps"—Is seldom met, but the unfortunate little coot always looks like some miniature book agent with sore eyes.

The farmer's boy—Wears the biggest boots he can persuade to stay on his feet, has a sturdy, rugged, little frame, hard muscle, lots of red blood in his face, can race over the fields, ride a wild colt, drive a boss cow and snare more partridges and rabbits than the best sportsman. He says "gosh" occasionally, and looks with wondering eyes at everything town bred. But he is the boy who works his way to the city and replenishes its dissipated life with his physical vigor and quick perceptions, and is the motive power that moves the business of the world. He inhales the spirit of progress in the air he breathes up on the old farm.

Boys, yes, boys. We were all boys once, with exceptions in favor of girls, of course, and don't let us forget it. Let us remember that the world was once a distant panoramic show to us, as it is to boys nowadays, and let us encourage boys in their boyishness, that they may never entirely work out of their system the good spirits and jollity that was born in them. Let us be old boys ourselves. We shall feel better for it.—N. H. Register.

DOGS.—The attachment felt by the majority of people for dogs is hardly to be wondered at. Dogs alone, of all the animal creation, forsake the society of their own species for the companionship of man. To be with his master is a dog's summum bonum of happiness. Their disinterested attachment and unswerving fidelity has been sung by poets from Homer to the American, who touchingly remarks:

"When fickle friends and fickler fortune fails, dogs, unfickle still, for you will wag their tails."

Nothing you do will alienate the affection of your faithful dog. Bill Sikes, ruffian as he is, can possess a true canine friend as well as the best of mankind. You may make shipwreck of your worldly prospects, and your faithful animal will cling to you, like the little dog of Mary, Queen of Scots, which was found nestling in her own gown after her execution. As a companion a dog is admirable. Every one who is given to sedentary pursuits ought to keep one. The necessity for giving exercise to his favorite would prove a most healthful practice for many a literary man. Miss Mitford has charmingly described the delights of a country walk with a dog as companion. The delight of the creature at getting out is pleasant to watch. If his master is disposed to conversation, how thoroughly the animal will enter into his views, with what joyful alacrity will he dash afte sticks and stones, returning with wild gambols and joyous barks. If, on the other hand, the master is engrossed in his own reflections, the dog has too fine a sense of good breeding to obtrude his attentions. He will find amusement for himself in hedgerows and ditches; poking his nose inquiringly amid heaps of dead leaves, dashing impotently after sparrows which he never comes within a yard of; all the while ready to rush back with joyful alacrity to his master's side thoroughly disengaged, and ready to enter into any scheme propounded to him. People who can keep dogs, and do not, certainly miss a great amount of enjoyment.

☞ To keep the blood pure is the principal end of inventions and discoveries in medicine. To this object probably no one has contributed more signally than Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., in the production of a medicine which has become famous under the title of the Favorite Remedy. It removes all impurities of the Blood, regulates the disordered Liver and Kidneys, cures Constipation, Dyspepsia, and all diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females. Sold by your druggist, $1 a bottle.

MATCH MAKERS.—The big fish eat up the little ones, and among men the great enterprises absorb the small. The making of matches is a late instance. The Boston companies, it is reported, have consolidated, and it is stated that this is a part of a plan for the union of all the large match makers in the country to control prices, and they are bound to break up competition and retain the one-cent revenue stamp on all packages of a hundred matches. The Boston makers are said to have consolidated with the Diamond Match Company, which represents thirty factories, employing 3500 persons, and turning out annually twenty-one million gross of matches. The wood for matches is principally cut and prepared in New Hampshire and Michigan, and the dipping and packing is done by the manufacturers, who want the stamp retained as an aid to their monopoly of the business. The amount of stamps furnished last year was $3,166,975, of which to Massachusetts makers the quota was $236,300. The stamp brings far less revenue to the government than expense to our people and profit to the great companies.

A DETECTIVE'S STORY.—There is a story told of a lady and gentleman traveling together on an English railroad. They were strangers to each other. Suddenly the gentleman said:—

"Madame, I will trouble you to look out of the window for a few minutes; I am going to make some changes in my wearing apparel."

"Certainly, sir," she replied with great politeness, rising and turning her back upon him. In a short time he said:

"Now, madame, my change is completed, and you may resume your seat."

When the lady turned she beheld her male companion transformed into a dashing lady, with a heavy veil over her face.

"Now, sir, or madame, whichever you are," said the lady, "I must trouble you to look out of the window, for I also have some changes to make in my apparel."

"Certainly, madame," and the gentleman in ladies' attire immediately complied.

"Now, sir, you may resume your seat."

To his great surprise, on resuming his seat, the gentleman in female attire found his lady companion transformed into a man. He laughed and said:

"It appears that we are both anxious to escape. What have you done? I have robbed a bank."

"And I," said the whilom lady, as he dexterously fettered his companion's wrists with a pair of handcuffs, "I am detective J——— of Scotland yard, and in female apparel have shadowed you for two days—now," drawing a revolver, "keep still."

THE TRUTH PAYS.—A few weeks ago a train over one of the railroads running west ran over a cow just beyond the Grand Trunk Junction. The matter was reported at headquarters, but the owner of the mangled bovine was not heard of until Tuesday last, when he entered the president's office and remarked:

"I guess we'd better settle up now for that cow."

"Ah! you owned that cow killed by one of our trains in November, did you?"

"I expect I did."

"And what did you value her at?"

The man scratched his head, hitched around on his chair, and finally replied:

"Well, I dunno. My brother-in-law said I had the company tighter'n blazes, and he told me to say she was a new milch cow and lay damages at $70."

"Yes."

"But my wife said that I better say that the cow was not worth over $50."

"Yes. Well, how was it?"

"That's where the stick comes in, you see. I want all she was worth, and yet I don't want to swindle anybody. Fact is, she was an old cow, dry as a bone, and worth about $15 for boarding-house beef. Yet she was took away kinder sudden, and it made a bad muss around the place, and I reckoned you might add a little extra."

"Let us say $25."

"That's plenty. I s'pose I might have had fifty jest as well as not, but I didn't want to lie about it."

"No; never tell a lie."

"Oh, I wouldn't have lied, 'cause I knew you sent a man out there to git all the facts of the case!" replied the man as he received an order on the treasurer for his check.

All well regulated newspapers now keep standing in type this headline:—"A banquet to Gen. Grant."

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth Street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.

SOLID WORDS.—Expect nothing from him who promises a great deal.

It is a difficult thing for a dog without a tail to show his master how much he thinks of him.

"Bridget, I cannot allow you to receive your lover in the kitchen any longer." "It's very kind of you, ma'am, but he's almost too bashful to come into the parlor."

☞ "PROFOUNDLY GRATEFUL TO GOD."—"I have been using your Compound Oxygen Treatment," writes Judge S. L. Bryan, of Salem, Ill., "for nearly two months, and am profoundly grateful to God and you for the benefits derived from its use. I have been for more than thirty years a sufferer from nervous disorders. Overwork and sedentary habits as a college student brought me into difficulty. Later in life professional labors added dyspepsia to my nervous calamity, and I have been a great sufferer for many years.—My sleep has been bad, and I have had much irregularity in the action of the heart. . . . . The gas has nearly relieved the disturbed heart-action, and my sleep is becoming as sweet and protracted as in early life. . . . . I shall always remember you with gratitude, and appreciate the blessings of a progressive investigation which brings such results. I think you may congratulate yourselves that you stand in the front of a new medical advance that is to effect a permanent revolution in the treatment of disease." "Inquirer" asks: "Is the Great Eastern the largest vessel ever built?" An impression has got abroad that she is, but such is not the case. The Mayflower, in which the Pilgrim fathers came to this country, was the largest ship that ever ploughed the waters.—The old furniture scattered over this country brought over by the Mayflower would fill the Great Eastern a dozen times or more.

☞ AN HONEST MEDICINE.—J. H. Northrup, of Lansingburg, formerly captain of the Troy police, writes: "I firmly believe that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a great, good, honest preparation; one that may be depended upon." And this is the testimony of thousands. Capt. Northrup suffered from liver derangement for years, and was cured by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It is an honest medicine, and sold by all honest druggists at the honest price of One Dollar.

"An anxious mother" writes to the Tribune for something that will reassure her and her three frightened children who are scared by Mother Shipton's prophecy and the Pyramid measures. The Tribune dryly rejoins, "Our correspondent probably reads her New Testament, and can find in the Gospels the distinct declaration, 'Of that day and that hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels which are in heaven,' and can surely satisfy herself and her children that Mother Shipton's prophetic intuitions are as uncertain as the aerial flights of the old woman in the nursery rhyme who sweeps the cobwebs from the skies."

An ingenious mother who has long been bothered by the fastidiousness of her children at table has at last discovered a method of circumventing them. She places what she wants each child to eat before his neighbor at table, and of course each cries for what the other has, and the ends of justice are promoted.

A Telophon.

AN INGENIOUS INVENTION AND ITS SUCCESSFUL TRIAL.

A man living near Nashville, Washington county, Illinois, has recently invented an apparatus to take the place of whistles for railroad signals, steamboats, fire alarms, factory calls and the like. He calls it the "Telophon," but the popular name is "steam jackass." The inventor is a stock farmer, and has devoted much of his time to raising mules, whose habits and anatomy he appears to have studied carefully. On his farm there was a mule of more than ordinary vocal power, whose voice could be heard a distance of four miles in every direction, when he once got warmed up to his work. The owner computed that if he could set in motion all the air in a circle of eight miles in diameter or twenty-five miles in circumference, or an area of fifty square miles, or thirty-two thousand acres, a hundred horse-power jackass could, all other things being equal, rival any other noise yet discovered. He established the fact that the power of an ordinary ass is about one-twelfth of an indicated steam power. A steam engine of one thousand horse-power would therefore be equal to the power of 12,000 asses.—Wherefore, if one as can fill a circle eight miles in diameter, 12,000 jackasses or one 1000 horse-power jackass would fill a circle of 95,000 miles in diameter.

The inventor thought all this over carefully, arriving at the deduction that if he could take nature's vocal apparatus and apply it to a greater power, he could produce a larger and more satisfactory volume of sound. Filled with this idea, he put the mule to death, and carefully severed the head from the body. He then injected solutions of chloride of zinc and arsenic into the veins and arteries of the head and neck, to prevent decay of the flesh. India rubber was dissolved in sulphuric ether, and the solution forced through the trachea or windpipe and through larynx or throat. The other evaporated, leaving a film of rubber on the membranes, and the injection and evaporating were continued until the rubber film was found of sufficient thickness. These organs were then subjected to a vapor of sulphur, heated to 300 degrees, by which process the rubber was vulcanized, its elasticity increased, and the membrane rendered impervious to steam. These preparations completed, a short piece of rubber hose was attached to the windpipe and connected with a steamboiler.

It was a moment of agony to the inventor, as he placed the ass-head in the hands of an assistant, and slowly pulled the valve open; a moment of thrilling interest. As the steam was turned on, it passed into the windpipe, expelling the air and producing a sigh, followed by a groan, a snort, a chuckle, then a violent coughing and sneezing. As a full head of steam was turned on, the most fearful noise, the most frightful guffaw, the most vociferous bray that ever assailed mortal ears, was produced. The lips contracted, disclosing a terrible array of teeth; the features developed a satanic grin; the jaws rose and fell, as the steam crowded the passages and the ears participated in the general movement, giving to the head of the ass an animated and excited appearance. The man who was holding the head gazed upon it a moment with dilated eyes, colorless cheeks, knocking knees and protruding tongue; then, suddenly losing all interest in the performance, he emigrated. As for the inventor, his success exceeded his most sanguine anticipations. For an instant he contemplated the head, his countenance working with every manifestation of delight; then he, too, started, probably to learn the greatest distance to which that voice would penetrate, leaving it still in operation, and all steam on. The head had now got fully warmed up to its work, and that bray went hurtling through the universe. It was an accoustic earthquake; a sky-shake; it was a storm, a hurricane of sound, a tornado, a cyclone of noise, it was a donkey carnival, a jackass Fourth of July. It was the greatest success the world was ever known.

NOTIONS OF THE FIRST SETTLERS. Mr. W. H. H. Amidon, one of the first settlers in the town of Gilmantown, Wis., and one of the most industrious and hard-working men in the county, has been very severely troubled with rheumatic pains during the past few years, so much at times, that he was disabled from performing manual labor. Learning of the wonderful cures effected by the use of St. Jacobs Oil he procured a few bottles and experienced immediate relief. Many others of our acquaintances have used it and express themselves as highly gratified with the relief it has afforded them. This king of medicines can be bought everywhere. —*Mondovi, (Wis.) MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE NEW YORK
EVENING POST
FOR 1881.
In Its Eighty first Year.

The character and objects of the Evening Post are so well known, that it would be enough, as a prospectus of the coming year, merely to announce that it will endeavor to maintain its position as the leading evening journal of the city of New York, but its proprietors hope, by renewed energy and enterprise, to render it still more worthy of the generous support which it has hitherto received from the public.

1. The Evening Post, for more than fifty years, has been devoted to that theory of politics on which our institutions are built, and which regards the government as the organ and representative of the whole community, and not of any class. By the fundamental law of its corporate organization it is bound to contend for the decentralization of power, for freedom of exchange in trade, for just and impartial taxation, for a sound hard-money currency, for economy and purity of administration, and for a reformed civil service, and to these principles it will continue to give an earnest, enlightened and unfaltering support.

2. In 1854 it took an active part in the formation of the Republican Party, to the measures and candidates of which it has since generally adhered; but it is in no sense the slave of any party organization. It holds that the highest duty of a good journal is to the community at large, and to parties only as they are subservient to the general good. While it has decided political preferences, therefore it has no political prejudices; and is determined to be fair and impartial toward all parties, and independent in its judgments. It means to make vigorous war, as it always has done, upon all public jobs, all corruption, all extravagance, all peculation, all rings, and all class legislation.

3. But the chief aim of the proprietors of the Evening Post is to render it a first-class family newspaper, which shall not only provide the latest and fullest news of each day, but lend a special aid to all the best elements of civilization, to Literature, to Science, to Art, to Education, and to Innocent Amusements. Accordingly, it maintains intelligent correspondents, not only in our two political capitals, Washington and Albany, but in all the great cities of the Christian World. Its reviews of books have long since made a name for themselves; its theatrical and musical criticisms are full, discriminating, instructive and just; its financial and market reports are noted for their completeness and accuracy; while its miscellaneous departments have no superior for variety, freshness and general interest.

4. Every Saturday, to accommodate our advertisers, who are more numerous than those of any other New York daily journal except the Herald, we publish a supplement, which contains tales, poems, correspondence, extracts, and miscellanies of various kinds, and which is intended to anticipate the Sunday editions of the morning papers. It is furnished to our subscribers without increase of price.

5. The best things of our daily edition are specially prepared for our Semi-Weekly and Weekly editions, which supply to country readers all the news, with an abundance of other matter, up to the day of their date. We do not believe that any better papers for country reading are issued from the city of New York.

The Peabody Press.

Wednesday Evening, March 9, 1881.

The New Town Officers.

Two of the new Selectmen—Messrs. John E. Herrick and Allerson Galeucia—are well-to-do-farmers. The former lives in West Peabody, near the Lynnfield line; the latter in South Peabody. Both bear a good reputation. Mr. S. Augustus Southwick is a leather manufacturer, doing business on Grove St. In politics he is a Democrat, and has taken a leading part in the councils of the party. He is also a prominent Mason, and has been Master of Jordan Lodge. He will make a good officer.

Daniel M. Elliott, on the board of School Committee, is a physician. He is also on the Board of Health. He has had experience in school matters as well as his profession, and no doubt he will make a good public servant. Mr. S. S. Littlefield is the head clerk in Munroe & Arnold's express office. He is foreman of the Excelsior Steam Fire Engine Co.; is a good executive officer, active and intelligent. In politics he is a Democrat, but ought to be a Republican.

Mr. James Fallon, the new Overseer of the Poor, is in the employ of the Eastern Railroad, and, we believe, is the Superintendent of the St. John's Sunday School. He is intelligent and capable, and no doubt will fill the position to which he has been elected to the satisfaction of the public.

Mr. F. E. Farnham, the new Trustee of the Peabody Institute, is a lawyer by profession, finishing his studies with S. C. Bancroft, to whom he seems much attached. He is also a member of the School Board, and Union Post G. A. R. With an active and persistent temperament, and entertaining a good opinion of his ability and judgment, he is, like all such make-ups, capable of doing much good as well as much mischief. In politics he is erratic, but is recorded on the canvasser's book as a Garfield voter. In religion—well, he has none; or, to put it plain, he is an infidel; disbelieving in the divine institution of Christianity and the inspiration of the Scriptures. But notwithstanding these idiosyncrasies, he seems bound to rise and soar, and it would not astonish his friends if, under the peculiar workings of our caucus system, he finally filled some of the highest offices in the nation. Peabody will soon be too small for him to operate in;—New York city opens golden opportunies to him.

On the Water Board four of the five are new members. Charles G. Folsom is a master carpenter, and, it is safe to say, has built more fine houses than any man in town. He is also on the Board of Engineers. George K. Wiggin has charge of an important department in the Bleachery, and is said to have had considerable experience in the construction of water works. Stephen F. Blaney, of the firm of Winchester & Blaney, is well-known, having represented the town in the House of Representatives two terms, and the district in the Senate two terms. He has been on many important committees, and has always done the work assigned him faithfully and satisfactorily. Geo. C. Peirce is also well-known, having been connected with our Fire Department for a quarter of a century — perhaps more. Has been Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, and foreman of the Volunteer Engine Co. for many years. He possesses excellent executive ability, as well as rare good judgment, and will make a very efficient member of the board.

Chas. C. Pike, the new member of the Board of Health, is a physician.—He has filled the position before—ably, impartially, and fearlessly — and will continue to do so.

Thomas Riley, the only new constable elected, is employed at the Bleachery. He is an active member of Union Post, G. A. R., and has held the position of Junior Vice Commander.

THE RESULT of the "Citizens' Caucus," last Thursday, reminds us of a picture we saw many years ago in a comic almanac. Two spinsters desiring the company of a militia captain, invited him to tea. He came with his entire command and surrounded the little tea-table — set with dishes for three only—with his militiamen, to the consternation of the two spinsters, and the equal surprise of the captain, who explained: "Ladies, you requested the presence of my company to tea, and here they are, rank and file." The gentlemen who called the caucus were situated somewhat similar to the two spinsters. Moral—Be careful how you give out invitations.

GENIUS AT HOME.—Some, at least, of our readers must have noticed placards at our bookseller's, announcing a book of poems by our sometime townswoman, Miss Charlotte E. Ricker, but unless they have already provided themselves with copies of the work, they may not be aware of the unusual merit of this verse, or of the high standing accorded it by the literary world, and we select some extracts from the encomiums which "Buds" called forth, for general perusal. Mr. Longfellow send-Miss R. an unusually kind and flattering letter in which he thanks her for "her grateful and gracious dedication," and says "you could not have discovered or invented a more felicitious stanza for your purpose," referring to the introductory poem.

The Sunday Courier notices "Buds" with discriminating and friendly criticism. The Sunday Gazette quotes an entire poem "Sympathy," and says, "Their aim is not ambitious, but they are exceedingly dainty in thought, delicate in fancy, and natural in sentiment. The versification is smooth, flowing and spirited, and the diction is very graceful. That Miss Ricker has genuine poetic feeling is made amply manifest here.

THE advance sale of Mr. Jefferson Davis's book has not been helped by the statement that much of the first volume is a defense of the right of secession. That question is played out in this country. Folks do not want to hear about it. The nation has got beyond even interest in it. You might as well try to force a full grown chicken back into the shell as to try to get up a secession revival.

IT has been figured out that New Hampshire only produces bread enough in a year to feed her population twenty-eight days, Massachusetts enough for one day, and Rhode Island does not raise enough in one year to give her people a breakfast.

WISCONSIN will soon be one of the first tobacco growing States in the Union. The yearly product of the four counties of Dane, Rock, Jefferson and Green, is valued at over $2,000,000.

A COMPANY of capitalists have taken the contract to reclaim 12,000,000 acres, or 18,750 square miles, of lake bottom and marsh land in South Florida.

SENATOR MAHONE of West Virginia, has selected a seat on the Republican side of the Senate.

IMPROMPTU.

We hail this great, eventful day,
When FREEDOM shall assert her sway,
When million voices shall consent
To welcome Garfield president.

GRANDMA.

SALEM ITEMS.—The Coffee Party of Hose Two, on Thursday evening last, was largely attended as usual, and after a pleasant social time, all departed in excellent spirits. A Chocolate Party is the next in order, which will take place on Thursday evening, March 17th.

The Salem Light Infantry will hold an assembly at their Armory to-morrow evening.

"Sweets to the sweet" is the old saying, but Mr. Foster of the Philadelphia Candy Store, shows no partiality whatever, but dispenses a pound of his U-N-X-L-D old-fashioned Molasses Candy or delicious caramels with as cheerful alacrity to one as to another.

Mr. E. V. Emilio advertises an excellent chance to purchase fine pianos and organs at very low prices. Call and examine when you wish to obtain bargains.

The Salem Cadet Band will give a concert at Mechanic Hall next Monday evening, when they will be assisted by Miss M. F. Marchington, the talented soprano, of whom the Boston Journal says: "She sang, with much sweetness and fine taste, songs by Bevignani and Guglielmo, both of which were encored." The Boston Herald says:—"She has a singularly pure soprano voice, one capable of great achievements, and her audience gave her a generous encore."

AN IMPORTANT POSTAL ORDER.—Postmaster General Maynard issued on Monday to postmasters throughtout the country an important order, which has gone into effect. It revokes a regulation made by Postmaster General Key in April, 1879, and in effect requires that all commercial documents wholly or partly in writing, shall be subject to the ordinary letter rates of postage (3 cents per half ounce), instead of the third class rate (1 cent per half ounce) to which Gen. Key's order assigned it. The operation of this order will increase the revenue of the New York post-office alone to the extent of about $1000 a day. The statute of March 3, 1879, defining mail matter of the first class, places within that category "all matter wholly or partially in writing" excepting certain specified objects. The revocation by Postmaster General Maynard of sec. 232 of the postal regulations will subject to first class, or letter rates, an immense amount of correspondence forwarded by railway and insurance companies, partly in writing and partly in print, "prices current" with the quotations filled out in writing, deeds of all kinds on printed forms with blanks filled in writing, way bills, insurance policies, vouchers, cash checks, drafts and the like.

In our legislature Gen. Wm. Cogswell of Salem, holds the highest post of honor—the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, the duties of which he performs in a manner honorable to himself and his constituents. He is the marked man of Essex county in the House, and the one whom now rests the greatest promise for the future.—With an army record most meritorious, and a home popularity which has made him mayor, and time after time a member of the legislature, with a good standing at the bar, and a fitness for political action, every day exhibited, he may look to the future with the hope of attaining almost anything he may desire. As a leading Republican he is running neck and neck with Dr. Loring and Col. E. F. Stone. Apparently he is the next man to come. — Merrimac Journal.

The Cabinet Nominations were sent in on Saturday afternoon and confirmed without reference to a committee, viz.:

JAMES G. BLAINE of Maine, Secretary of State.

WILLIAM WINDOM of Minnesota, Secretary of the Treasury.

SAMUEL J. KIRKWOOD of Iowa, Secretary of the Interior.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN of Illinois, Secretary of War.

WILLIAM H. HUNT of Louisiana, Secretary of the Navy.

THOMAS L. JAMES of New York, Postmaster-General.

WAYNE MCVEAGH, of Pennsylvania, Attorney-General.

Authority is given for the statement that the New York & New England railroad will make connection with the Harlem railroad at Brewsters by March 1, which will give a through line between New York and Boston, and that the branch to Fishkill will be built by May 1, giving through connection, via the Erie railroad, to the West.

To make shoe pegs enough for American use, there are consumed annually 100,000 cords of timber, and to make lucifer matches, 300,000 cubic feet of the best pine timber are required every year. Lasts and boot trees take 500,000 cords of birch, beech and maple, and the handles of tools 500,000 more.

D. Lothrop & Co. have invited American artists to compete for prizes, worth in all $1500, for book-cover designs, colored frontispieces and magazine illustrations.

PEABODY.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., have received and accepted an invitation from Rev. Geo. Walker, to attend the Episcopal Church on Memorial Sunday, May 29, 1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 2, 1881.

To Commander of Post 50, Peabody:

SIR,—In compliance with request of George W. Creasey, Commander Department of Massachusetts, Grand Army of the Republic, a chart of Army Corps Badges and the following Maps of Battlefields of the late war are sent to you by to-day's mail, for the use of the Post:

Armies of the Potomac and James, (in sets.)
Atlanta Campaign, sheets 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5.
Atlanta, operations in front of.
Blakely. Chattanooga.
Corinth and Montery. Fort Fisher.
Fort Fisher and vicinity. Franklin.
Gauley Bridge. Gettysburg, (3 sheets.)
General Grant's Campaigns in Virginia.
Hagerstown, Falling Waters, etc.
Knoxville. Nashville. Sherman's Marches.
Shiloh. South Mountain. Vicksburg.

By direction of Chief of Engineers:
Very respectfully, your obt. servant,
H. M. ADAMS.

We have been asked why we did not give our opinion on the extension of the Lynn and Boston Horse Railroad track to Peabody. The reason why we have said so little about it is, that we thought the projectors of the movement did not mean business, but wished to secure the right that they might use it when they saw fit. It is our opinion that the building of this road will be of immense benefit to the town, will increase the value of property along the line, and must inevitably open up a large amount of real estate for building purposes, which probably would never be reached in any other way; and further it seems to us that the patronage would be very liberal, and the result would be a financial success for the company.

Another social party, under the auspices of the Universalist Society, will be given in Upton's Hall, on Thursday evening, March 17th. Ice cream, cake and coffee will be for sale. Tickets, at 50 cents, can be procured as before.

The following from a Marblehead paper shows the success in that town of Baird's Minstrels, who appear at Peabody Institute, Tuesday evening next:

"The best minstrel performance that was ever given in Marblehead," was what everybody said about the entertainment given by Baird's Minstrels at Abbott Hall on Saturday evening, Feb. 12. All day long the rain pelted down as if the last and overwhelming deluge had set in and the chances for much of an audience seemed dubious. But the reputation of the Troupe had preceded it, and an audience of seven hundred, despite the severe storm, assembled to enjoy a first class entertainment. The tone was far above that of the ordinary run of Minstrel Troupes, many of which seem to imagine that in order to gain success, the broadest and most suggestive allusions must be indulged in.—There was nothing of this in the performance of Saturday night. From first to last, in unbroken succession, without a delay or a "stage wait," there was a continual flow of song, dance and burlesque. We have never seen the "Order of Full Moons" performed as well, and in fact it is difficult to say which part of the whole performance was best, where each individual number was so perfect. Special mention is due to the artistic excellence of "the four invincibles," whose exemplification of the poetry of motion was a new revelation in clog-dancing. The company is billed for a time on the New England Circuit and is meeting with crowded houses as is fit and proper.

A young man who knows says that rom court to caught is but a short step.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

All hail, Bancroft!
do do, Farnham!

"Gentle spring" has arrived.

Choice Salt Mackerel at Schollar & Donnell's. adv.

The election agony is over and the ins are happy.

It is useless to kick against the pricks.

English Dunn Fish, for table use, at Schollar & Donnell's. adv.

We couldn't have picked out a better day for town meeting ourselves.

Last Friday was a field day for "ducks." It rained nearly all day.

Merchants who plant their spring advertising in the PRESS will reap a golden harvest.

The circulation of the PRESS is steadily increasing. The people appreciate a live paper.

If this weather continues one will have to overhaul his wardrobe in search of spring clothing.

Owing to the severe storm last Friday evening, the meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was not held.

Our public school teachers, to the number of forty-seven, have drawn money from the town treasury the past year.

Rev. Mr. Wood will lecture in the Baptist Church next Sunday evening, upon the places of entertainment that it is proper to attend.

Barnum is sending advance circulars to this town, from which fact we judge he intends visiting this vicinity the coming season with his great show.

Dr. C. C. Pike and wife left Tuesday afternoon, for a visit to Philadelphia and Washington. They will return Thursday or Friday of next week.

"Elect Sid Moderator, and keep him off the floor," was the cry Monday morning. If he is not fit to be on the floor, he certainly is not fit to be Moderator.

Rev. Mr. Wood's fervent and impressive prayer immediately following the election of the Moderator, was eminently fitting for such a solemn occasion.

We are sorry that Mr. F. H. Appleton was defeated for Trustee of the Institute, for it would be difficult to find a person in town better fitted for the position.

Mr. Geo. C. Prescott, the harness maker in Allen's Block, has won an enviable reputation for excellent work and fair dealing. Almost anything in the line of horsefurnishing goods can be bought at his store.

Rev. Mr. Colwell will preach at the Chapel, South Peabody, next Sabbath afternoon, upon Intemperance in its relations to crime, and the methods which should be employed to eradicate the evil. Services commence at 2.15.

The alarm of fire this noon was caused by the burning of a load of hay near the residence of Mr. Stephen Blaney. It was the property of Mr. John Brown of Ipswich, and was set on fire by some bad boys. The services of the department were not needed.

Messrs. Schollar & Donnell announce the greatest bargains this week ever offered by them. This enterprising firm, by strict business principles, are building up a large business, and guarantee the community genuine bargains in everything in their line.

The neighborhood meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held with the Lynn Union at their hall, corner of Oxford and Washington streets, Friday, March 11th, at 2 o'clock. The weekly meeting of the Peabody Union will be omitted.

The next Universalist party takes place at Upton's Hall, Thursday, March 17th, and if you and your lady friends want to enjoy an evening, secure your tickets. Good music, good order, good company; in fact, if you don't have a good time you are surely out of joint.

Our friend Arthur Elliot has gone and made a benedict of himself. The happy transaction was performed last Wednesday evening, by Rev. Mr. Hudson. We of the PRESS congratulate you Arthur upon this new departure, and wish you and your bride joy, a long, happy and prosperous life.

Old Boreas seems to be taking a holiday.

What can't be cured must be endured.

Everybody admires a nice cup of Coffee, and those who want can find Genuine Java Coffee at Schollar & Donnell's for 25 cents lb. adv.

We have a reply to our correspondent x on the license question, which will appear in our next.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., have received a number of charts and maps, accompanied by the following letter, which will explain itself:

Bushby & Co., the leading grocers, advertise apples this week. Being the largest dealers in groceries in town, they are enabled to give bargains.

Mr. Farnham informs us that he was nominated for Trustee by a rallying committee at the Citizens' Caucus, of which he was chairman. The list is given in another place.

Carpenters and masons, though not especially crowded with work just now, are all preparing for lively times as soon as spring opens. Plans and estimates are now in order, and it would not be surprising if as many new houses were built before cold weather as were built last year and the year previous.

The political slate for the future on the part of the Fusionists is said to be as follows: Sidney C. Bancroft to represent the town in the General Court for the next two years; then Farnham for two years. Ex-Representative Trask is young and zealous, and can afford to wait for the extra year he is entitled to.

One of the meanest and most contemptible acts of deviltry that has come to our notice, is that of cutting or slashing with a knife, leather that is hung upon poles or fences by our manufacturers. Last Saturday night Mr. Henry C. Torr had a lot of leather damaged in this way. If the police could only find out the guilty parties and make an example of them, it might have a beneficial effect. We understand Mr. Torr will pay a liberal reward for the conviction of the culprit.

The new temperance society, called the Father Mathew Catholic Total Abstinence Society, has taken rooms over Newman & Symonds' store. The following officers have been elected: President, James Fallon; Vice President, Richard Lyons; Cor. Secretary, Thomas Hutchinson; Rec. Secretary, Thomas F. Kennedy; Collector, John B. Mahoney; Librarian, John Kennedy; Treasurer, John Ruth; Directors, David O'Keefe, Edward McCarthy, Thos. O'Shea, John Hanrahan, Charles Carlan; Board of Investigation, John Fitzpatrick, Timothy Hanrahan.

An attempt was made last Monday morning to burn the large two-story dwelling house, 129 Washington street, owned by the Danvers Bleachery. At about half past one o'clock, Mrs. Geo. Wiggin, who lives next door, heard somebody run across the yard. This was immediately followed by a flash, which proved to be the fire in the other house. She aroused her husband, who hastily dressed, and taking a pail of water, dashed it upon the flames, which were soon extinguished. The fire had been set in a closet, and a bottle supposed to have contained kerosene and had exploded was found. No alarm was given. There was no insurance on the house.

The closing entertainment of the Odd Fellows' Course was given in the Institute, last Thursday evening, by Miss Emma S. Howe, Soprano; Miss Ella M. Chamberlain, Whistling Soloist; Mr. Elmore A. Pierce, Elocutionist; Mr. Frank Gilder, Pianist. The vocal portion of the entertainment by Miss Howe was very fine, fully justifying the excellent reputation she has earned. Miss Chamberlain's success was assured from the commencement, and each of her numbers was received with repeated encores. "Patterson's Waltz Song," a very difficult piece, was delivered with ease and precision. Mr. Pierce's readings were well received, though to our mind a little toning down of the voice on the lighter pieces would be a change for the better. A genuine surprise was given the audience by the piano playing of Mr. Gilder, his numbers being enthusiastically received. He is undoubtedly the best piano player that ever appeared in that hall, and it is to be regretted that he did not have a better piano to use, as he was obliged to lift up, after pressing it down, one of the keys, or lose the note.

The whole course has been under the management of gentlemen who are in every way competent to arrange an excellent course, and we hope that Holten Lodge, if they decide to give another course next year, will bear in mind that this committee has given the best course of entertainments ever held in this town.

RACE DIFFERENCES.

You have heard to-day a great deal about the Latin race, their wondrous qualities, their peculiar destiny, their possible danger. It is a new idea, or rather a new phrase, that I observe is now getting into the political world, and is probably destined to produce consequences. No man will treat with indifference the subject of race. It is the key of history, and why history is often so confused is that it has been written by men who were ignorant of this principle and all the knowledge it involves. As one who may become a statesman and assist in governing mankind, it is necessary that you should not be insensible to it; whether you encounter its influence in communities or in individuals, its qualities must ever be taken into account. But there is no subject which more requires discriminating knowledge, or where your illustrating principle, if you are not deeply founded, may not chance to turn out a will-o'-the-wisp. Now, this great question of the Latin race, by which M. de Vallombrosa may succeed in disturbing the world—it might be well to inquire where the Latin race is to be found? In the North of Italy, peopled by Germans and named after Germans, or in the South of Italy, swarming with the descendants of the Normans and Arabs? Shall we find the Latin race in Spain, stocked by Goths, and Moors and Jews? Or in France, where there is a great Celtic nation, occasionally mingled with Franks? Now, I do not want to go into the origin of man and nations—I am essentially practical, and endeavor to comprehend that which I have personally to deal, and that is sufficiently difficult. In Europe I find three great races with distinct qualities—the Teutons, the Slavs and the Celts, and their conduct will be influenced by those distinctive qualities. There is another great race which influences the world, the Semites. Certainly, when I was at the congress of Vienna, I did not believe that the Arabs were more likely to become a conquering race again than the Tartar, and yet it is a question at this moment whether Mehemet Ali, at their head, may not found a new Empire in the Mediterranean. The Semites are unquestionably a great race, for among the few things in this world which appear to be certain, nothing is more sure than they invented our alphabet. But the Semites now exercise a vast influence over our affairs by their smallest though most peculiar family, the Jews. There is no race gifted with so much tenacity, and such skill in organizations. These qualities have given them an unprecedented hold over property and illimitable credit. As you advance in life, and get experience, the Jews cross you everywhere. They have long been stealing into our secret diplomacy which they have almost appropriated; in another quarter of a century they will claim their share of open government. Well, these are races; men and bodies of men influenced in their conduct by their particular organization, and which must enter into all the calculations of a statesman. But what do they mean by the Latin race? Language and religion do not make a race—there is only one thing which makes a race, and that is blood.—Earl of Beaconsfield.

CRUELTY AND CIVILIZATION.

The mutilations of prisoners exhibited on Assyrian sculptures, are not surpassed in cruelty by any we find among the most bloodthirsty of wild races; and Rameses II., who delighted in having himself sculptured on temple walls throughout Egypt as holding a dozen captives by the hair and striking off their heads at a blow, slaughtered during his conquests more human beings than a thousand chiefs of savage tribes put together. The tortures inflicted on captured enemies by red Indians are not greater than were those inflicted of old on felons by crucifixion, or on suspected rebels by sewing them up in the hides of slaughtered animals, or on heretics by smearing them over with combustibles and setting fire to them. The Damaras, described as so utterly heartless that they laugh on seeing one of their number killed by a wild beast, are not worse than were the Romans, who made such elaborate provisions for gratifying themselves by watching wholesale slaughters in the arenas. If the numbers destroyed by the hordes of Attila were not equaled by the numbers which the Roman armies destroyed at the conquest of Selucia, and by the numbers of the Jews massacred under Hadrian, it was simply because the occasion did not permit. The cruelties of Nero, Gallienus, and the rest may compare with those of Zingus and Timour; and when we read of Caracalla, that after he had murdered twenty thousand friends of his murdered brother, his soldiers forced the Senate to place him among the gods, we are shown that in the Roman people there was a ferocity not less than that which deifies the most sanguinary chiefs among the worst of savages. Nor did Christianity greatly change matters. Throughout mediæval Europe political offenses and religious dissent brought on men carefully devised agonies, equaling, if not exceeding, any inflicted by the most brutal of barbarians.—Herbert Spencer, in Fortnightly Review.

As one through a window sees not the window, but that which lies beyond; as one through a glass sees not the telescope, but the worlds outside of it, so through Jesus Christ, through the physical and the instrumental, let us see the heart of God, the source of universal life, of love, of recuperation, of perfection and of final salvation.

Miscellaneous.

HOW LONG WILL THE SUN LAST?

How is the heat of the sun maintained? How long has it lasted already? How long will it continue? Are there any signs of increase or of diminution? After affirming that, in the present state of science, only somewhat vague and unsatisfactory replies are possible. Prof. Young holds that, so far as observation goes, we can only say that the outpouring of the solar heat, amazing as it is, appears to have gone on unchanged through all the centuries of human history. The author thinks that there is some truth in each of the two theories which have been proposed to account for the sun's fire.

As to the first, the impact of meteoric matter, it is quite certain that solar heat is thus produced; but the question is whether the supply of meteoric matter is sufficient to account for any great proportion of the whole. After giving Sir William Thompson's calculation of the amount of heat which would be produced by each of the planets falling into the sun from its present orbit, by which it appears that Jupiter would maintain the sun's present expenditure of energy for 32,254 years, and Mercury for six years and 219 days, and that the collapse of all the planets upon the sun would generate sufficient heat to maintain its supply for nearly 46,000 years; and after estimating that matter equal to only about one-hundredth part of the mass of the earth, falling annually upon the solar surface, would maintain its radiation indefinitely. Prof. Young thinks it improbable, from astronomical reasons, that any such quantity of matter can be supposed to reach the sun. So large a quantity of matter would necessitate a vastly greater quantity circulating around the sun, between it and the planet Mercury. But if there were near the sun meteoric matter equalling, for example, the mass of the earth, it ought to produce an observable effect on the motions of Mercury, and no such effect has yet been detected.

Astronomers, therefore, failing to find a full explanation of the cause of solar energy in this hypothesis, have adopted a second one, which is, that the sun's diameter is slowly contracting, and that the gaseous mass is gradually liquefying and becoming solid. The conclusion is drawn that, if this theory be correct, there must come a time when there will be no solar heat, as there has also been a time when it began. How far forward is the end, how far backward the beginning? Newcomb is authority for the statement that, with the present radiation, the sun will shrink to half its present diameter, in about five million years. Reduced to this size, and eight times as dense as now, it would cease to be mainly gaseous, and its temperature would begin to fall. Hence Newcomb assigns as the term during which the sun can supply heat enough to supply life on the earth, as we know life, a period of ten millions years.

The writer somewhat more confidently casts his eye backward, and concludes that the sun cannot have been emitting heat at the present rate for more than eighteen million years if its heat has been generated in the manner described. If the sun has contracted from a diameter even many times larger than that of Neptune's orbit to its present dimensions, as is probably true in the main, "we are inexorably shut up to the conclusion that the total life of the solar system, from its birth to its death, is included in some such space of time as thirty millions of years; no reasonable allowance for the fall of meteoric matter," &c., "could raise it to sixty millions." The possibility of collision with wandering stars, and the suggestion of ways as yet unconceived of for restoring wasted energy, are followed by the statement that "the present order of things appears to be limited in either direction by terminal catastrophes which are veiled in clouds as yet impenetrable."—Popular Science Monthly.

SNAKE AND FROG.

Many years ago, while in Ceylon, I lived in a house in "Slave Island," raised on a high platform. The steps up to the door had become loosened, and behind them a colony of frogs had established themselves. One morning I watched a snake (a cobra) creep up, insert its head into a crack, and seize a frog, which he then and there swallowed. But the crack that admitted the thin flat head and neck of the ophidian would not permit of the same being withdrawn when the neck was swollen with the addition of the frog inside it. The snake tugged and struggled, but in vain, and after a series of futile attempts disgorged its prey and withdrew its head. But the sight was too tantalizing. Again the head was inserted in the crack and the coveted morsel swallowed, and again the vain struggles to withdraw were renewed. I saw this repeated several times, till, gaining wisdom by experience, the snake seized the frog by one leg, withdrew it from its coigne of vantage, and swallowed it outside.—Nature.

THE RESULT OF A MARRIAGE.

The bridegroom of a Waukegan wedding was a Baptist and the bride a Methodist. They had agreed that immediately after the ceremony they would decide by chance should embrace the other's religion. The officiating clergyman declined to toss up a cent, partly because he would not countenance such a proceeding, and partly because, being a Methodist, he might be accused of fraud if the bride won. The bride herself finally threw the coin and lost. When she went to join the Baptists, however, they rejected her because she did not believe in close communion. That displeased the bridegroom, and he went over with her to the Methodists.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT,

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with "wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment, and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

Eastern men visiting the Rocky Mountains generally underestimate the strength and ferocity of cinnamon bears of that region, and lives are frequently lost in consequence. Lemuel McGee, on his way to work in Vicksburg, said to his companions: "I'm dry, and I ain't got a cent; but I'm going to have some whiskey if I die for it." Jim Lyon, who was killed in a barroom fight at Millard, Neb., was found to be clad in a complete though penetrable suit of armor. Major Thomas L. Butler died at 91, in Louisville, recently. His father and four uncles distinguished themselves in the Revolution. Frank Bury was robbed and hanged by some Chinamen several years ago, near Gold Hill, Nevada. Soon afterward he met one of the rascals and killed him. A clever and plucky use of his own knife had severed the rope in time. A later exploit increased his reputation on the Pacific coast. He froze the fingers of one hand, and a physician told him they would have to be amputated, at a cost of $100. He decided to save the money by doing the job himself. He fastened one blade of a pair of sheep shears in a vise, stuck in his hand, and struck the other blade a hard blow with a sledge. It was a successful operation. These episodes in his history are culled from his obituary, for he has just been killed in a barroom row.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

STRANGELY FULFILLED.

On the night of May 11, 1812, Mr. Williams, of Scorrier House, near Redruth, in in Cornwall, woke his wife, and in great agitation told her of a strange dream he had just had. He dreamed he was in the lobby of the House of Commons, and saw a man shoot with a pistol a gentleman who had just entered the lobby, who was said to be the Chancellor. His wife told him not to trouble about the dream, but to go to sleep again. He followed her advice, but presently woke her again, saying he had dreamed the same dream.

Yet another time was the dream repeated, after which he was so disturbed that, despite his wife's entreaties that he would trouble himself no more about the House of Commons, but try to sleep quietly, he got up and dressed himself. This was between one and two o'clock in the morning. At breakfast Mr. Williams could talk of nothing but the dream, and early the same morning he went to Falmouth, where he told the dream to all of his acquaintances whom he met. Next day Mr. Tucker, of Trematon Castle, accompanied by his wife, a daughter of Mr. Williams, went to Scorrier House on a visit.

Mr. Williams told Mr. Tucker the circumstances of his dream. Mr. Tucker remarked that it could only be in a dream that the Chancellor would be found in the lobby of the House of Commons. Mr. Tucker asked what sort of a man the Chancelor seemed to be, and Mr. Williams minutely described the man who was murdered in his dream. Mr. Tucker replied:

"Your description is not at all that of the Chancellor, but is very exactly that of Mr. Perceval, the Chancellor of the Exchequer."

He asked if Mr. Williams had ever seen Mr. Perceval, and Mr. Williams replied that he had never seen him or had any communication of any sort with him; and further, that he had never been in the House of Commons in his life.

At this moment they heard the sound of a horse galloping to the door of the house; immediately after a son of Mr. Williams entered the room, and said that he had galloped from Truro, having seen a gentleman there who had been in the lobby of the House of Commons on the evening of the 11th, when a man called Bellingham had shot Mr. Perceval. After the astonishment which this intelligence created had a little subsided, Mr. Williams described most minutely the appearance and dress of the man whom he had seen in his dream fire the pistol at the Chancellor, as also the appearance and dress of the Chancellor.

About six weeks after, Mr. Williams, having business in town, went in company with a friend to the House of Commons, where, as has been already observed, he had never before been. Immediately that he came to the steps of the entrance of the lobby, he said: "This place is as distinctly within my recollection, in my dream, as any room in my own house," and he made the same observation when he entered the lobby. He then pointed out the exact spot where Bellingham stood when he fired, and also that which Mr. Perceval reached when he was struck by the ball, where he fell. The dress, both of Mr. Perceval and Bellingham, agreed with the description given by Mr. Williams, even to the most minute particulars.

A Scotch clergyman, who lived near Edinburgh, dreamed one night, while on a visit to that town, that he saw a fire, and one of his children in the midst of it. On awaking he instantly got up and returned home with the greatest speed. He found his house on fire, and was just in time to assist one of children, who in the alarm had been left in a place of danger. The second story runs as follows:

Two sisters had been for some days attending a sick brother, and one of them had borrowed a watch from a friend, her own being under repair. The sisters were sleeping together in a room communicating with that of their brother, when the elder awoke in a great state of agitation, and roused the other to tell her that she had had a frightful dream.

"I dreamed," she said, "that Mary's watch stopped, and that when I told you of the circumstance, you replied, 'Much worse than that has happened, for ——'s breath has stopped also,'" naming their sick brother.

The watch, however, was found to be going correctly, and the brother was sleeping quietly. The dream recurred the next night, and on the following morning, one of the sisters, having occasion to seal a note, went to get the watch from a writing-desk in which she had deposited it, when she found it had stopped. She rushed into her brother's room in alarm, remembering the dream, and found that he had been suddenly seized with a fit of suffocation, and had expired.—Abercrombie's Intellectual Powers, pp. 289, 302.

NICE NEIGHBORS.

A man named Matthews, living in Mowryville, Iowa, rises early every morning, and rings a big bell at five o'clock to awaken his workmen. One Mr. Pinney, who lives close by, likes to sleep late, and he begged Matthews in vain not to sound the bell. He never goes to bed until twelve o'clock, and now at midnight he fires a cannon to disturb the slumber of Pinney. Between the midnight gun and the five o'clock bell, the inhabitants of Mowryville curse both Pinney and Matthews.

The good which you do may not be lost, though it may be forgotten.

IT CURES NIGHT SWEATS.

We earnestly invite the co-operation of physicians in the dissemination of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, for it is all that we recommend, and we shall be glad to show the formula to any regular physician on application. The cures being effected by its use are more wonderful.

JOHN K. STICKNEY—now and for the past eleven years Treasurer of the town of Watertown, Mass.—says: "I was recently confined to my house with sore lungs and a racking cough—and an attack of Pneumonia. A neighbor sent me a part of a bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam which gave me almost immediate relief, and I was soon able to attend to my business. I heartily recommend this Balsam to all sufferers from Coughs and Colds."

S. E. BROWN, of No. 8 Walden street, Cambridge, and 299 Washington street, Boston, says: "I earnestly recommend Faith Whitcomb's Balsam for Coughs and Colds. It is the best cough remedy in the market."

GEORGE ELLIS, the veteran crockery importer, who lives in Charlestown, says: "My physician pronounced my wife to be in consumption. She commenced the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam in October, and the effect was wonderful. It is the best lung remedy I ever knew, and I recommend it to every one inclined to that terrible disease, Consumption."

J. B. F. GATELY, of Gospel Hill, Hudson, Mass., says: "In regard to the value of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, refer pulmonary invalids to me. I use it as a family medicine, and for the diseases subject to childhood, it is of inestimable value."

Compensation for Loss of Anchor and Cable on Account of Telegraph Cable: The sum of $100 was received by Collector Babson on Wednesday, from the U. S. Direct Cable Co., as compensation to Mr. Geo. Steele for the loss of anchor by Sch. Oliver Eldridge, Capt. John Scott. The schooner was at anchor on Brown's Bank, and had drifted during a high wind and fouled the telegraph cable. Upon ascertaining the fact, Capt. Scott cut his cable and reported the case to Collector Babson, who sent on the evidence, and the company promptly paid the damages. This is in accordance with the provisions of the company's circular, issued September, 1879. The honorable manner in which the company proposes to deal with our fishermen should entitle it to the most careful consideration when they are fishing in the vicinity of the cable, by using every precaution to avoid fouling it, and when fouling, to cut at once rather than run the risk of injuring the cable.—Cape Ann Advertiser.

The Salem Oratorio Society gave a grand rendering of "St. Paul" on Thursday evening, at the First Baptist Church, and the large audience appeared to enjoy the performance very highly. The choruses were beautiful, and some of the solo parts were especially fine. The only discount was a slight break in the bass in one of the duets, which might have been avoided by a little closer attention; and that was probably more noticed by the singers than the hearers. Mr. Hay and Mr. Fessenden added much to their high reputation as interpreters of classical music. Mr. Fessenden called forth most hearty and prolonged applause by the exquisite manner in which he rendered "Be thou faithful unto death." Miss Dalton and Miss Pitman may be justly congratulated upon the marked success which they achieved. It is pleasant to recognize home talent of a high order. The Oratorio Society has every reason to be proud of its last concert. The enthusiasm of its members promises well for its future prosperity. —Register.

Mr. Wm. Sawyer has invented a machine for measuring leather, which is said to be different from anything ever got up for that purpose. The frame is to be of cast iron, with wheels and rollers attached, and as the leather passes through it gives the exact measure in square feet, or it can be adjusted so as to give it in inches. Mr. Sawyer has a small model in his shop, made of wood, and he would be pleased to have any one call in and see the working of it.

The doors of the Putnam Hose House were found frozen into the ice at the bottom and had to be broken down in order to get the carriage out Monday night. The floor is being raised, which will prevent such a thing happening again.—Danvers Mirror.

STRANGE FATALITIES. — James F. Hodgs, the Eastern railroad brakeman, who was crushed by the cars at Somerville last Friday afternoon, and who afterwards died in the hospital, was the most intimate friend of William E. Crockett, who was killed on the same road a few weeks since, being employed on the same train, and almost constantly in young Crockett's company, and one of the delegation of railroad men who attended Crockett's funeral.—Newburyport Herald.

The place of honor in The Art Amateur for March is occupied by Frederick A. Bridgman, whose industry have won him, at the early age of thirty-three, a high repute in two hemispheres. An entertaining sketch of the artist by Edward Strahan, a fellow pupil in the atelier of Gérôme, is illustrated by a portrait and a number of drawings by the artist, while the frontispiece, drawn by Camille Piton, represents Bridgman's "Lady of Cairy Visiting." A special feature of the number is Caryl Florio's long review of "Billee Taylor," the new English comic opera, giving the vocal score of the four principal songs, some of which are likely to become as popular as the airs of "Pinafore." There is also a page of sketches of the leading characters in the opera drawn by Geo. R. Halm. In the department of "Decoration and Furniture," the achievements of Alfred Stevens, an eminent English art worker, are described and illustrated, and numerous practical articles for making the home beautiful are given. In "Ceramics," "Needlework" and "Industrial Art," there are, as usual, profusely illustrated articles. Full size designs for outline embroidery for a tea cosy in crewel work, and for a large and remarkably beautiful plaque of birds and flowers for china painting, are given in the supplement, together with smaller designs for panels and borders. (Price $4 per annum; single numbers, 35 cents.—Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, N. Y. City.)

A man never attains true greatness by being perfectly satisfied with the result of each day's work as it is done.

A SCATHING DENUNCIATION.—Judge Johnson, of California, in passing sentence upon a murderer who was drunk when the deed was committed, gave his opinion of dram-selling in the following vigorous language:

"Nor shall the place be forgotten in which occurred this shedding of blood. It was in one of the thousand antechambers of hell, which mar, like plague spots, the fair face of our state. You need not be told that I mean a tippling shop, the meeting place of Satan's minions, and the foul cess-pool which, by spontaneous generation, breeds and nurtures all that is loathsome and disgusting in profanity and babbling, and vulgarity and Sabbath-breaking. I would not be the owner of a groggery for the price of this globe converted into precious ore. For the pitiful sum of a dime he furnished that poison which made the deceased a fool, and this trembling culprit a demon. How paltry the price of two human lives! This traffic is tolerated by law, and therefore the vendor has committed an offence not cognizable by earthly tribunals. But in the sight of God, he who deliberately furnishes the draught which inflames men to anger and bloodshed is particeps criminis in the turpitude of the deed. Is it not high time that the sinks of vice and crime should be rigidly accountable to the law of the land, and placed under the bar of an enlightened and virtuous public opinion?

HORSESHOES.—The argument against horseshoes seemed to me so strong, and the convenience of doing without them so great, that I resolved to try the experiment. Accordingly, when my pony's shoes were worn out, I had them removed, and gave him a month's rest at grass, with an occasional drive of a mile or two on the high road while his hoofs were hardening. The result at first seemed doubtful. The hoof was a thin shell, and kept chipping away until it had worn down below the holes of the nails by which the shoes had been fastened. After this the hoof grew thick and hard, quite unlike what it had been before. I now put the pony to full work, and he stands it well. He is more surefooted, his tread is almost noiseless, and his hoofs know no danger from the rough hands of the farrier, and the change altogether has been a clear gain without anything to set off against it. The pony was between four and five years old and had been regularly shod up to the present year. He now goes better without shoes than he ever did with them.—Sir George Cox.

THE THREE PLANETS.—The spectacle presented by Venus, Jupiter, and Saturn grows more attractive every evening. Venus and Jupiter on Monday night were in conjunction, shining only a little over three degrees apart. Old Saturn looked as if he had fallen behind in the race, and he has dropped out of line with the others. Next week, however, he will assume such a position that the three planets will mark the corners of a little triangle.

With the telescope the view of these planets is exceedingly beautiful. Venus begins to show the crescent form, and may be watched with a low magnifying power long before sunset. A slight turn of the tube, and Jupiter with his attendant moons sails into the field of view. Another turn brings Saturn upon the scene. His splendid rings are opening wider every month. The narrow division between them looks like a black line of enamel upon a golden band.

Those who wish to study these wonderful planets should not let slip the present opportunity, for before the spring is over they will all have disappeared from the evening sky.

A RARE TREAT.—W. H. Thompson & Co., of Boston, Mass., have secured from the American Publishing Company of Hartford, Ct., (as per advertisement in another column) the agency of the new book which has just been issued under the title of "My Wayward Pardner," from the pen of the popular author, Josiah Allen's wife, who has heretofore so pleased the public with her spicy books "My Opinions and Betsey Bobbet's," and "Samantha at the Centennial," over which many a hearty laugh has been had. This new book excels in many respects the previous works of the same writer, and we with other readers may expect a rare treat when the volume reaches us.

INTERESTING TO MANUFACTURERS AND MECHANICS.—In our columns will be found the advertisement of the New England Manfacturers and Mechanics Institute, managed by well-known and active business men of New England, whose object is the erection of a permanent exhibition building and the holding of an annual exhibition of the products of New England industry, the development and stimulation of which is so important to her pre-eminence. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.

Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

The Steam Whistle Nuisance.

Messrs. Editors:—The fact that another and more diabolical voice has been recentlo added to the chorus of steam-whistles which we endure many times daily, and even at unseasonable morning hours, prompts me to ask a few questions.

Why should any of these whistles be let off at half past five in the morning? Cannot factory workmen wake as other people do, from habit? I believe they would soon learn to be as prompt without such alarms; though the whistles are doubtless convenient substitute for clocks or for the trouble of consulting clocks; but clocks are cheap. At any rate, the factory owners should bear the burden of waking up their servants, and not the general public. The Cotton Company, most of whose operatives live near by, may have some excuse for a morning alarm; but for some reason, possibly out of regard to the public, that company uses a bell, querulous in tone, but bearable.

Why should whistles blow for so long a time?—some of them hanging on like lovers' kisses, two or three long blasts, when one short blast would answer every purpose, excepting that of notoriety; so that the proprietor or director may say, "There, hear that; That's our whistle. You can hear that in Ipswich!" So much the worse for Ipswich. Why not have one on your dwelling that could be heard in Rowley?

But the all embracing question is, Why blow them at all? In case of fire, or when the hands are in doubt whether the factory will run, they would have their proper use. Would not a gong to each room or series of rooms tell the men when to quit work? And, if they must loaf out-doors till the last moment, would not one or two strokes upon a small bell call them in as effectually as a fog-bell blown for half a minute.

This passion for steam whistles does not belong to progress. Glory, if you please, in your manufactories and productions, but blowing whistles does not increase your merit or that of your goods, or the public's appreciation of them.

We Americans (and in Salem something is being done), notwithstanding the tunnel "improvement," are finding out the secret of pleasing the eye and cultivating mind and heart by form and color in art. Our aim will be more and more to remove from sight the unsightly and ugly. So, by means of the ear, we are striving and aspiring with our Oratorios, our Schubert clubs, our piano-forte recitals. Then let us by no means endure distressing shrieks, moans and bellowings when they are unnecessary, and if they are not unnecessary, I hope some one who is in the secret will tell the reason why. No tan in the street prevents the whistles from breaking the sleep of the sick. I am no old fogy. I like guns and bells in their season, and the sick must grin and bear the racket for the sake of the rising generation. But it is high time for a vigorous and general protest against this nuisance. B. G. W., in Salem Gazette.

THE DANCES IN STYLE.—The dances of the upper ten this winter are the waltz (danced in quick time), the polka and the "heel-and-toe polka," with now and then a lancers thrown in as a sop to many fast-dying Cerberi, whose dancing days are supposed to be over, but who hang on tenaciously from year to year, and for the decorous delight of the very few maidens who have been brought up in the still fewer households where round-dancing is yet considered an abomination and an invention of the enemy. The "German" is simply a combination of figures, which allows each couple dancing it a turn every time, and permits them to choose other partners and give favors, but only the three round dances alluded to above are permitted. In certain sets two very popular dances, last winter and this, have been and are the "Racket" and "Society" waltzes. They need little description, for there are few who have not seen with a shudder the wild jumpings, the frantic see-sawings and apparent mad frenzy of those who participate in them. Upon the floor of the Academy of Music, or other places at public balls, their devotees can be seen transforming the beautiful waltz, its slow, gliding movement, into a dance worthy only of a low concert-room, and which certainly affords to those objecting to round dances sufficient and strong arguments against them. The fact that they are generally tabooed in respectable drawing-room shows their true nature, and a lady who has once danced them seldom cares to repeat the experiment. Their seeming continued popularity is inexplicable, but most condemning to those who still indulge in them.—Andrew's American Queen.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Items Clipped from our Exchanges.

THE HEAVY STORM of the 4th inst. drew a large number of people to the shore to witness the turbulent tossings of the sea. The waves did considerable damage at Deer Cove. The planking that abuts the embankment of the Reed estate was smashed into kindling wood, as was also the fence inside it for a space of several rods. The embankment, thus shorn of its protection, was exposed to the full fury of the sea, and many tons of earth washed away, the summer-house at its top being nearly undermined. The new and substantial walk, midway of the heavy inclined planking abutting the Isaigi estate, was also injured, the waves ripping up and breaking the stout plank in the center, which is from twelve to fifteen feet above the ordinary sea level, the whole structure being also partially shielded by a rip-rap of heavy stones at its base. Some idea of the force of the sea can be gathered from this even by those unacquainted with the locality. — Lynn Transcript.

A meeting of the Firemen of this town, held at Armory Hall, Thursday evening last, resulted in the formation of an organization to be known as the "Relief Association of the Beverly Fire Department," with officers as follows: President, Chief Engineer Levi K. Goodhue; Vice President, John F. Masury; Secretary, Henry S. Parker; Treasurer, Thomas F. Whiting; Executive Committee, Engineer Geo. Swan, John H. Larcom, Steamer 1, Josiah Woodbury, Hook and ladder 1, Frank W. Woodbury, Hose 1, Frank Marshall Hose 2, Robert H. Grant, Hose 4, Horace P. Woodbury, Hose 5. Owing to the severe storm several companies were not represented, but the interest manifested by those present is a sure guarantee that at the next meeting, to be held at Armory Hall, on the first Tuesday in April, the number of members will be doubled.—Beverly Citizen.

We find in the current number of Our Folks, Mr. V. M. Simons's church paper, the following "Short Sermon," which will not look bad in the columns of the JOURNAL:

It is possible for boys and girls who play jackstones and marbles, and fox-and-geese, and twelve-men morris, and grown-up folks, who pitch quoits, and attend huskins and candy pulls and paring bees and quilt shakings, to get to heaven, and even be welcome there, but for gads and gossips and back-biters and slanderers and busy-bodies in others' matters, and grumblers and fault-finders and stuck-up and straight-laced pretenders, who profess everything and do nothing—for these there isn't the ghost of a chance. The city that lieth four-square has twelve gates, but none of them are wide enough for the strain-at-a-gnat and swallow-a-camel sort of people to get in at.—Woburn Journal.

A GENEROUS OFFER.—The building committee of the new Universalist Church lacking $6,000 of the amount necessary to erect that structure, Mr. H. Brooks Hooper has stepped forward and magnanimously offered to raise that sum. As a beginning he will visit every family in this and neighboring towns and cities, requesting them to purchase a paper of needles. With every paper sold he will present two of Prang's beautiful bird cards. The cards are really artistic pieces of work, and the reason Mr. Hooper can afford to give them away is because the advertisements printed on them cover the cost. Mr. H. will be in town but three weeks and we bespeak for him a continuance of the generous patronage he has met with thus far.

Boston parties have secured the contract to build Mr. Tilden's cottage on the neck. It will cost $7,000 and is intended to be one of the prettiest cottages there. Richard Peach of Marblehead, will do the blasting and grading, and John Manning the mason work. The architects are Howe & Dodd of Boston.—Marblehead Messenger.

Major Ben: Perley Poore, the "father" of the reporters' gallery, went to Washington in 1827. He was born in Georgetown, now known as West Washington, and he was very young when he began in the national legislature to report the news of the capital for a New York newspaper. He has lived in Washington almost constantly ever since. He has a very distinct recollection of every inauguration from the time of John Quincy Adams.—Monthly Union.

GENERAL PUTNAM'S DUELS.—A good story is told of General Putnam, the Revolutionary hero, in Forney's "Anecdotes of Public Men." "He accepted a challenge and fixed the time, and as his antagonist approached he was greeted with a shot from Putnam's gun at thirty rods. As Putnam was reloading his piece, his adversary approached and said, 'What are you about to do? Is this the conduct of an American soldier and a man of honor?' 'What am I about to do?' was the reply of the general; 'A pretty question to put to a man you intend to murder! I am about to kill you; and if you do not fight in less time than it takes old Heath to hang a Tory, you are a gone dog.' Of course the other turned and ran away. The second affair was with a British officer, who challenged him. Putnam accepted, fixed the time and place; and when the Englishman found him he was seated near a barrel, apparently containing powder, smoking his pipe. The general requested him to take a seat on the other side of the cask, and then set fire to a match communicating with the contents of the barrel. The officer looked at the burning fuse and retired. As he moved off, the general said, "You are just as brave as I took you to be; this is nothing but a barrel of onions with a few grains of powder on the top, to try you by; but you don't like the smell."

A COLUMN OF HOT WATER ONE HUNDRED FEET HIGH.—One of the singular natural phenomena known in this section of Montana, is the formation of two geysers in the strip of country known as the "Sag," about a mile and a half from Mr. Patterson's ranch, on the Shonkin. It was first seen about a month ago, but not until lately has it assumed proportions which constitute its wonderful formation. It is situated in a small canon running out from the wall of rocks on the east of Alkali Lake. Two geysers have appeared, one of them being of monster proportions, throwing up a column of hot water and steam over 100 feet high, the other spouting about fifty feet, but with a larger proportion of water; diameter about four inches. They are intermittent in character, and are active during the morning hours, about eight or nine o'clock. The formation of the country is a sandstone and gneiss, and has all the appearance of being an ancient river bed.—What has produced this curious phenomenon it is of course useless to speculate, as there is no evidence of ancient volcanic activity, and no hypothesis can be formed which will account for it.—North Montana River Press.

Says the Court Circular, after condemning certain society papers, "The Baroness Burdett-Coutts should have been spared the cruel comments which have been made upon her marriage, if only on account of the large-hearted charity which has made her name a household word throughout the length and breadth of the land. She not only gave munificently even for a woman of her fortune, but she bestowed her charity wisely, with a care and discretion under proper administrators which rendered it doubly valuable. Nor is there the least foundation for the malicious suggestion that the baroness's large charities will cease now that she is married. The testimony borne to Mr. Bartlett's character by Rev. H. White, as well as the past life of the baroness, forbid us to believe such a thing. Lady Burdett-Coutts has every claim on the world's love and respect, and we wish her all possible happiness in her married life."

AN UNCONGENIAL CLIMB.—Supt. Wallack of the Indiana telegraph section, in a late stormy night found that a wire was dislocated, and the testing instrument located the trouble at the first pole west of Lewisville. He at once telegraphed to the operative there:

"Go up the pole and fix the wire."

"I can't," was the reply; "it storms too bad."

"Storm or no storm, go up."

"Well, I've got no ladder here."

"Then 'shin up' without a ladder."

"I can't do it."

"Why can't you?"

"Because, I am a woman."

Wallack had forgotton that he had a female operator in that office, and he thereupon said no more about climbing the pole, but telegraphed for the nearest repair-man.

Mr. Daniel Buxton has a choice lot of Clark's seedling potatoes for sale. They are said to be superior to the Early Rose.

Persons interested in fancy, business or ornamental cards are informed that the Peabody News Company has a large and varied assortment.

At a meeting of the School Committee on Monday evening, Rev. J. W. Hudson was chosen Chairman, and Rev. W. G. Sperry, Clerk pro tem.

It is understood that the Holy Name Society, a Catholic organization in town, will secure the services of Rev. C. H. McKenna, for one or more lectures, in a short time.

The House Judiciary Committee has reported a bill to incorporate the Peabody Institute in Peabody with the right to hold real and personal property to an amount not in excess of $600,000.

The neighbors in the vicinity of Berry's court, on Elm street, have been visited by a plague the past week, but feel easier now, as Mr. Frank Wilson has taken the matter in hand and shot five of the black and white mephitic animals.

To-morrow is St. Patrick's day. It will be celebrated very quietly. The parades of former days are fast disappearing, the Irish people seeming to think that it is useless to continue them. Mass will be held in the morning in St. John's Church.

We wish some friend would loan us a copy of a printed poem written by Mr. F. E. Farnham in the spring of 1877. It was in answer to a poem written by Mr. P. J. Cody, and was refused publication in the PRESS because it reflected very hard against our adopted citizens. It is rich reading for those fellows who helped to boost him into office.

Mr. C. L. Walker, of Salem, gave a charming sciopticon entertainment, in the Baptist Vestry, on the 7th inst., for the benefit of the Sunday School. It was very entertaining to the children, and every way acceptable. Mr. W's terms are very reasonable, and are made to accommodate both public and private entertainments.

Mr. Farnham misapplies the term "Rump" to those who left the "Citizens' Caucus." The Rump Parliament was a small remnant of the Long Parliament, who were allowed by Cromwell to represent the farce of legislation after two-thirds of the original members had been expelled; so the term really applies to the crowd Mr. F. led. A LOOKER ON.

It is wrong for the small town of Peabody to monopolize the effusions of such a writer as Mr. Farnham. He should have had his latest literary effort put upon the outside of the paper, and then it would have appeared simultaneously in perhaps five hundred different papers in all parts of the Union. With free scope for the exercise of his immense abilities, he would undoubtedly make his mark.

The tickets for the Volunteer Ball are selling rapidly, and a very efficient committee are making every preparation for a good old-fashioned Volunteer Ball, such as has not been held for some years. They have engaged Ryan's Band of Boston, (six pieces) which guarantees fine music. In fact, they are "Able and Willing" to do all that they can to make this the best held for many years.

Rev. H. L. Hastings, editor of The Christian, gave an interesting lecture on Temperance at the Universalist Church, Saturday evening, and delivered two effective sermons on Sunday—at the Baptist Church in the afternoon, and at the Methodist Church in the evening. Ancient and modern infidelity were analyzed and contrasted with Christianity. "The dead words of the old philosophers and the living words of Christ." Mr. Hastings has grand oratorical powers and a strong desire to save souls.

The beautiful thaw follows the beautiful snow at this season.

Blifkins says the weather last week was good to collect in—collect umbrellas.

The Senior Class in the High School have voted to hold no reception this year.

Mr. H. M. Osborn is giving his customers a fine line of gilt advertising cards.

We publish on our second page today a very interesting communication from Rev. L. L. Wood, over his own signature, in reply to our correspondent "X" upon the license question.

We learn that as soon as arrangements can be completed, Mr. J. Frank Baxter will give another entertainment under the auspices of the Spiritualists of this town.

A large and splendid assortment of Easter Cards, including fringed and many other beautiful designs, at Geo. Stevens'. Call and see them, and you won't leave the shop without one.—Adv.

One more good time for the lovers of the dance will be enjoyed in Upton's Hall, to-morrow evening, when the Murray Association hold their second assembly. A horsecar will run to Salem free, at the close.

The water pipe on Walnut street, opposite Fulton, connecting Harrington's tannery with the main pipe, burst last Sunday, making a dangerous place in the road. It was repaired the first thing Monday morning.

The entertainment by Baird's Minstrels, at the Institute last evening, was the best ever given in this town. We hope they will come this way again, and give those who could not attend last evening a chance to hear them.

The drama, "My Brother's Keeper," was rendered in fine style last evening, in the Universalist Vestry, by members of the Murray Association. Although the attendance was not so large as was expected, those who attended were fully satisfied with the rendition.

Mr. B. M. Hills, the popular Peabody and Salem expressman, lost the horse called "Old Bill" last Sunday, at the age of 34 years. Mr. Hills has owned the horse for twenty-seven years, during which time he has always slept in the same barn and worn the same halter.

The Ladies' Benevolent Society will hold what is called a paper sociable at Upton's Hall, next Wednesday evening, March 23d. Supper will be served at 7 o'clock, after which toasts and responses appropriate to famous characters of fiction and history will be given. See advertisement.

Sarah B., widow of the late John B. Peabody, of Peabody, Mass., died at the residence of Dr. O. D. Abbott, 16 Walnut street, Manchester, N. H., Sunday, of cancer of the stomach, aged fifty-three years. The deceased was a lady of large personal worth, and distinguished alike for her exemplary Christian character and great kindness toward all with whom she became associated. She leaves a wide circle of friends who will sincerely mourn her loss.

We have received from our old townsman, Mr. Wm. H. Pingree, a copy of the Reports of Selectmen, Auditors and Water Committee of the town of Peabody for the year 1881. Mr. Pingree is janitor of the new $30,000 engine house at Peabody, and has the care of two steam fire engines with their hose carts, and a hook and ladder truck, at a salary of $800 per year. His engine house is as innocent of dirt as the finest parlor, and the fire apparatus resembles an immense piece of polished jewelry. — Georgetown Advocate.

THE SCORE for March is an especially enjoyable number. In spite of a fire which destroyed its printing office, and occasioned a delay of three days in its appearance, it comes out enlarged to ten pages of literary matter, and nineteen of music. Its criticisms of musical events are from the pen of its editor, the well-known journalist and critic—Louis C. Elson. Although they are entirely reliable and analytical, Mr. Elson does not effect the pedantic style of art review, and his remarks are rather in the feuilleton style of the French reviewers.

Poet's Corner.

The Little Conqueror.

BY CHAS. F. ADAMS.

"It was midnight; not a sound was heard;
Within the"—"Papa! won't 'ou 'ook
An' see my pitty 'ittle house?
I wis' 'ou wouldn't wead 'ou book—"

"Within the palace, where the king
Upon his couch in anguish lay—"
"Papa! Pa-pa! I wis' 'ou'd tum
An' have a 'ittle tonty play—"

"No gentle hand was there to bring
The cooling draft, or bathe his brow;
His courtiers and his pages gone—"
"Tum, papa, tum, I want 'ou now."

Down goes the book with needless force,
And, with an expression far from mild,
With sullen air and clouded brow,
I seat myself beside the child.

Her little trusty eyes of blue
With mute surprise gaze in my face,
As if, in its expression stern,
Reproof and censure she could trace.

Anon her little bosom heaves,
Her rosy lip begins to curl;
And, with a quivering chin, she sobs,
"Papa don't 'uv his 'ittle girl."

King, palace, book—all are forgot;
My arms are round my darling thrown—
The thunder-cloud has burst, and lo!
Tears fall and mingle with her own.

A Song for the Boys.

Strive to learn—strive to learn!
Time is marching on, boys;
Summer days have passed away,
Youth will soon be gone, boys.
Seize the moments as they fly,
Make the most of time, boys;
"Onward! onward!" be your cry.
Bravely labor till you die!
Don't despair—don't despair,
'Tis a glorious way, boys!
Make the highest point your aim
And you'll win the day, boys!

Don't you know—don't you know,
Honors crown the wise, boys?
And if you work with all your might,
You will gain the prize, boys!
Lives of great and noble men
Examples are for you, boys;
You may make your lives the same,
And renown and glory gain!
Don't despair—don't despair,
'Tis a glorious way, boys!
Make the highest point your aim,
And you'll win the day, boys!

Persevere—persevere
In the path of Truth, boys;
Labor hard to store the mind
In the days of Youth, boys.
There are spirits great and true—
Join the noble band, boys;
Let not trifles conquer you,
Ever keep the goal in view!
Don't despair—don't despair,
'Tis a glorious way, boys!
Make the highest point your aim,
And you'll win the day, boys!

Selected Story.

THE CRAZY COUNT.

On the fourth day of October, 1829—I love to be particular in dates—a coach and six drew up before the shop of the well-known jeweller, M., Rue St. Honore. The equipage was covered with a profusion of gilding and heraldic devices, and the liveries of the footmen indicated high rank in the possessor. The steps being adjusted, a lady, splendidly dressed, descended, and entered the shop, where all the attendents, and even M. himself, were profuse in their attentions; anticipating every look and step, and displaying before her the most costly diamonds and pierreries.

The lady, with the most lofty nonchalence, selected jewels to the amount of about £5,000, which were immediately placed in a casket by the obsequious attendants, when, handing her purse to the jeweller, he found it contained a sum somewhat exceeding £3,000, and short of the requisite amount. The lady, with many graceful apologies, and a momentary flush of vexation, begged pardon for the mistake—desired M. to lay the parcel by until she should call again with the money, and, giving her name as the Comtesse de L., departed with all the ceremony and splendor that marked her first appearance.

The coach passed up the Rue St. Honore in the direction of the Barriere Neuilly, turned by the Place de Louis Quinze, and finally stopped at the house of a celebrated physician in the splendid Rue de Rivoli. The lady alighted here, and was shown into the presence of the well-known Dr. N., who, arising from his seat at a table covered with anatomical preparation, saluted her with his usual courtesy, and begged to know why he was honored with this unexpected visit.

The lady, assuming an air of settled melancholy, replied:

"I can hardly command my feelings to tell you the cause of my unhappiness. My dear husband, the Comte de L., during the early years of our marriage, was all that a fond wife could desire; my slightest word, hint or sign was sufficient inducement for him to obtain any object of my wishes; but latterly the scene is changed" (here her voice became nearly inarticulate through grief); "he has become moody, sullen and reserved; at times breaking forth into violent fits of rage without any apparent cause, thus making my life a perpetual scene of misery—in short, my dear Doctor, I more than suspect he is touched with insanity, and it is on his account that I now visit you to obtain your advice, which I consider of more weight than that of any other member of the profession" (here the Doctor made a low, disclaiming bow); "especially as the dreadful secret has been concealed from all his family, not even his brothers and sisters having the slightest intimation of it.

"The following circumstance has especially influenced my present visit, Doctor. My dear husband, the Comte, wishing to support the honor of his house, sent me last spring to the noted jeweller, M., Rue St. Honore, with a carte blanche to select ornaments to wear at the approaching festival. I at first hesitated, but finally, urged by his earnest protestations, went to-day and chose a few, to a trifling amount, more to please him than myself, as he delights, the dear Comte (here the lady sobbed), in seeing me splendidly dressed and supporting my rank. But, from the many similar instances I have observed, I have not the least doubt that, on being reminded of the fact, he will pretend utter incredulity, and, on being assured of its truth, burst into those terrible paroxysms which but too clearly indicate the cause of his disorder.—Therefore, dear Doctor, favor me with your best—kindest advice—and—and—excuse the feelings of a wife" (here the lady applied her handkerchief to her face and was silent).

The Doctor, crossing his legs and supporting his chin upon his gold-headed cane, began to cogitate, with his eyes half closed and his body inclining forward at an angle of forty-five degrees.

"Hum—madame, confine him—yes, madame, we must—a clear case, madame—the humors, which, had they been pituital or salivary, would have been expectorated, having become sanguineous and melancholic, having retrograded upon the cerebellum—hem—n—but excuse me, madame, while I make the necessary preparations."

So saying, the Doctor arose, rung a bell, and directed his valet to see his chariot at the door, and to order Jean le porteur and Francois le cocher to attend him immediately, "and, hark ye," said he in an undertone, "tell them to bring all my apparatus des lunatics, depechez, and let them follow in my chariot. I will avail myself of the carriage of the Comtesse," (the lady made a bow in grateful acknowledgement,) "and be careful to remain in the anteroom till I call aloud."

The servant retired, and in a few minutes announced everything ready.—The Doctor entered the carriage of the comtesse; his own chariot followed at a short distance behind. During the ride he used every argument to assuage the grief of the lady, which would burst forth at times with increased vehemence, until the honest medicin himself, hardened as he was to the details of his profession, became affected by a sympathy. It seemed as if every tranquil moment only added to the violence of the succeeding paroxysm.

Passing down the Rue St. Honore, they reached the jeweller M., before mentioned, when the lady pulled the string of the coach and alighted. Upon entering the shop she desired M. to take the packet of jewels, and accompany her in the coach, assuring him of his pay as soon as he reached the hotel of the Comte, adding, with a fascinating smile, that he could have no apprehensions, since the jewels were still in his keeping. The jeweller, with a smile of flattered vanity, took the parcel into his hands, insisted upon handing Madame la Comtesse into the coach, sprang in himself, and the coachman snapping his whip, the equipage rolled magnificently down the Rue St. Honore.

After a drive of a mile and a half, and crossing the Boulevards, they stopped at a splendid hotel in the Place du Trone, celebrated in history as the site of the Bastile. The jeweller with his packet alighted first, then the Doctor, and lastly the Comtesse. The Doctor making a sign to his myrmidons, they remained in the hall, while the lady ushered the jeweller into an ante-room until the Comte should be apprised of the arrival of his visitors. After a short interval she returned and directed them to follow her. Ascending a splendid flight of stairs, she pointed to the apartment of the Comte, at the same time receiving from the jeweller the package of diamonds, hinting to him to present his bill to the Comte, who was ready to satisfy nim.

Upon entering the room, an elegant chambre carree, they found a fashionably dressed gentleman engaged in writing at an escritoir. He arose at their approach, and seemed to regard them with a look of astonishment.

"Symptoms to a hair," ejaculated the Doctor, in an undertone.

"To what am I indebted," said the Comte, "for the honor of this visit?"

"I believe I am addressing the Comte de L.," said the Doctor.

"The same," replied he, with a slight bow.

"My name is N.," rejoined the Doctor, after a pause.

"I have not the pleasure of knowing you," said the Comte.

To be so cooly and sensibly received by a madman was a circumstance beyond the Doctor's comprehension. The Comte shrank not from his fixed gaze, which, from custom immemorial, had been known to enthrall the insane, nor did any "gaucheries" betray the "compression of his cerebellum." However, the Doctor determined to persevere until some symptom should manifest itself to justify calling in his posse comitatus.

"Were you never—that is to say, have you ever been—hem—Monsieur le Comte, afflicted with a violent vertigo, or headache, proceeding from—ahem—pressure of the cerebral particles? Indeed, sir, you look pale—let me feel your pulse—there it is—unsteady—tremendous acceleration—ah!"

"Sir," said the Comte, who had yielded his hand in passive astonishment, "your language is entirely incomprehensible. Explain yourself, sir, or I shall order my servants to show you the door."

"Now, don't be getting warm," replied the Doctor, cooly, delighted at what he considered equivocal symptoms. "Don't fly into a passion—a little touched (pointing to his head), just as your wife, the Comtess, said—very sensible at times" (aside to the jeweller).

"My wife!" almost gasped the Comte; "this is beyond all endurance. I have no wife, and, sir, let me tell you—"

"Poor man—poor man! Just as she said, forgets his mother's friends and relations. I suppose, then, M. le Comte, you do not remember the jewels you ordered for the Comtesse against the coming fete of M. M.? nor your repeated solicitations against her will? nor—"

"Mon Due! que deviendrai-je!" almost yelled the Comte, leaping up and throwing down his chair in his fury, as the jeweller advanced obsequiously, with his bill a foot long in his left haud, making a sweeping courtesy with his right.

"Now, now," said the Doctor, first in a deprecating, then in a violent tone, as the incensed Comte approached him, "you had better be quiet—all ready to sieze you in the ante-chamber;" then, as he rushed to the bell and rung it furiously—"no use, no use—servants know your situation—won't come."

And the Comte, fairly exhausted by passion, sunk into a chair.

"By what authority do you invade my house? and who are you!" he exclaimed.

"You'll know soon enough—got 'em outside—straight jacket, all here!" cried the Doctor, stamping his foot.

The men stationed without burst in with cords, canvas and all the apparatus for confining lunatics, and made a rush upon the astonished Comte, who at the moment of their entrance, drew a concealed pistol and fired at the Doctor. The ball grazed the left side of his head, carried off a curl of his perriwig and so jarred his "cerebral developments" that he fell completely stunned.

The rest rushed upon the defenceless Comte and overpowered him. They then slipped a straight-jacket upon him and bound his legs with ropes, preparatory to carrying him to the Doctor's maison de sante.

The Doctor himself recovered immediately from the stunning effects of the shot, and superintended the operations with all professional precision, "bearing," he said, "no ill will to the pauvre Comte for what he did, mente non compote, and laboring under a 'plethora of sensibility.'"

But the cries of the Comte were long and loud; he roared, fumed and grinned at the benevolent Doctor, and was in a fair way to occupy a cell of any maison de sante with due lunatic propriety, when the neighbors and passers-by, alarmed at the outrageous cries, poured into the chamber from all quarters, and among them his intimate friends, the Duke de C. and Vicomte de S.

On seeing them, the Comte suddenly burst into tears, and entreated them to free him from from his confinement, assuring them of his sanity of mind in such convincing terms that the Vicomte could hardly be restrained from drawing his sword and making an example of the Doctor on the spot.

"Ecoutez moi donc! ecoutez moi!" was all the terrified man of physic could utter.

His story was told—the jeweller's coincided; but where were the lady and the casket?

* * * * * * *

About two weeks afterwards I made an official visit to the conciergerie to attest the dying confession of a female whe had been arrested by the police as an agent of the Carlists, and had taken poison at the moment of her apprehension. She was evidently sinking fast, yet her eyes seemed to grow more lustrous, and her speech more articulate and pathetic, as the lividness of death overspread her beautiful countenance. There was a wild and fearful energy in her manner, as if she dreaded that life would fail ere she could unburden her conscience of its secret load.

She began: "My name is Madeline Alaine, otherwise Jeanne Patigon, otherwise the Comtesse de L.!"

Prohibition vs. License.

MR. EDITOR,—Your issue of the 2d inst. contains an article, over the signature "X," favoring a liquor license law as preferable to a strict prohibitory statute, according to statistics taken from the minority report of the Legislative Liquor Committee, given by Representative Bugbee. Who "X" is I do not know. I will take it for granted that, like you and myself, he desires only the truth, but some of his statements are so erroneous and most of his figures are so misleading that I venture the present intrusion in your columns as a reply. Even at this late date there are, no doubt, some who honestly think that legalizing and endorsing the liquor traffic is the best way of dealing with this vexed question, a view which the kindest charity must impute to ignorance of the principle and expediency of license, a view which applies to hydrophobia just as reasonably as to the liquor traffic, and an argument which is never applied to other evils—the licensing of poisons not being a parallel case, as every honest man knows. In reading the articleof "X," my thoughts arranged themselves under three heads:

I. Were the statistics of license ten times as favorable as Mr. Bugbee's report makes them, it would still be just as wrong as ever for the State or municipal governments to legalize, sanction and endorse that evil to which the highest authorities and the fairest estimates attribute seven-eighths of the pauperism and crime and three-fourths of the taxes of this country.

II. Some of the statements which "X" deduced from the report of Mr. Bugbee are entirely wrong. First, the State of Massachusetts was not "under the prohibitory law" during most of the years from which he quotes statistics. Second, "rum crimes" have never "increased" while the State has been under a strict prohibitory law, but the history of temperance legislation in Massachusetts—which covers almost the two hundred and fifty years of the existence—has invariably shown thar any form of licensing the liquor traffic promotes instead of retards that traffic, as compared with prohibition, and that a liquor license law is essentially free rum. Third, the figures which he quotes in favor of license do not represent the facts, and prove nothing, as I will presently show.

The State was under fairly enforced prohibition in 1867, but has not been since that year. In the spring of that year, during six weeks' times, six hundred rumsellers in Boston sent their names to Judge Sanger—who was then District Attorney for Suffolk County—promising to go out of the business. In 1868 the prohibitory law was defeated by what was known as the P. L. L. movement, and in one-quarter of that year there were eight thousand more arrests and lodgers in the station houses of Boston than in the same quarter in the previous year. The State was not "under the prohibitory law for the five years, from 1869 to 1873, inclusive." The Legislature of 1869 and '70 passed what is known as "the infamous beer law of Massachusetts," which was signed by Gov. Claflin, notwithstanding the experience of the English Beer Act of 1830, which Parliament passed as a temperance experiment; on which a Parliament Committee, some twenty years afterwards, reported that "the beer shops of England have caused more prostitution and done more to brutalize the English laborers than all other causes combined, and are the nurseries of crime and pest houses of society;" upon which act, also, the Convocation of Canterbury, comprising both houses of the English Church, in its report laid before the Queen in 1869, gave testimony from 1478 towns, provinces and hamlets and 253 witnesses, all of which testimony was "clear, decided, unanimous and conclusive" in favor of Prohibition and in opposition to the Beer Act; also in 1874, the Convocation of York collected testimony on the same subject, embracing judiciary reports, presenting the thoughtful and deliberate convictions of 2711 intelligent and unprejudiced witnesses, and describing the beer shops as "nests of corruption and the source of unmitigated mischief."

The Massachusetts Beer Law of 1870 was submitted to the popular vote in August of that year, but the vote was so unsatisfactory that it was again submitted in May, 1871, when some forty of the 342 cities and towns of the State voted on the act. At a convention held in Tremont Temple, in the spring of 1872, official testimony, to an almost unlimited extent, was given from all parts of the State. The report of that convention lies before me as I write. It shows an increase of drunkenness and crime, on every hand, under the Beer Act. This act was repealed by the Legislature of 1873 and '4, and eighteen months afterwards there were found to be 500 less rum shops, in Boston, than when the act was repealed.

During 1874 the State was only under nominal prohibition, but not actual, and that during only a fractional part of the year. Gov. Talbot nobly defended Prohibition during the fractional part of that year, in which he served out the unexpired term of Gov. Washburn, who was sent to the National Congress to fill the chair, made vacant by the death of Charles Sumner. The Legislature elected in 1874 revoked the prohibitory law, (as it was well understood that it would) and the present license law went into effect May 1, 1875, since which time the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts has been making progress backwards. During the first year of this law the 660 eating saloons, in the nineteen cities of the State, increased to 2594—nearly five-fold—because under cover of a restaurant license, they kept a great deal more to drink than eat.

Now in regard to the statement that 'rum crimes increased under the prohibitory law:" It is false! The contrary is true. During the first four months of the present license law, 11 of the 36 crimes, specified in the police reports of Boston, had a less number of arrests than the same quarter in the preceding year. These were minor crimes. The remaining 25 of the 36, ranging from assault and battery to murder and embracing all the greater crimes, had an increase of from 12 to 100 per cent. The average number of convicts in the State's Prison, at Charlestown, that year, rose from 691 and a fraction to 711 and a fraction, or an average monthly increase of 20.—There were 110 more inmates in the House of Correction and 216 more in the county jail, for Suffolk County, in the year 1868 than in the year 1867, when the State was under fairly enforced Prohibition.

I do not know just what the phrase "rum crimes" means, which is used in the report from which "X" quotes. I presume it refers especially to drunkenness. But as very nearly all the crime committed is traced to drunkenness the term really covers all crimes, and I could fill every column of the PRESS with facts and figures from all parts of America, showing that from seven-eighths to nine-tenths of all crime and pauperism and fifty per cent. of all the idiocy and lunacy in the land are due, either directly or indirectly, to intemperance, and that the same is largely true of all accidents, sickness and public expense. Mr. Curtis, the constable and overseer of the poor of Vineland, N. J.—a city of 20 school houses, 15 manufactories, 12 churches and 10,000 people—says in his last annual report: "For the period of six months no settler or citizen of Vineland has received relief at my hands as overseer of the poor. Within seventy days there has been only one case, among what we call the floating population, at the expense of $4. During the entire year there has only been one indictment, and that a trifling case of battery among our colored population. So few are the fires in Vineland that we have no need of a fire department. There has been only one house burned in a year, and two slight fires, which were soon put out. We practically have no debt and our taxes are only per cent. on the valuation. The police expenses of Vineland amount to $75 a year, the sum paid to me and our poor expenses a mere trifle. I ascribe this remarkable state of things, so nearly approaching the golden age, to the industry of our people and the absence of King Alcohol."

Surely then when I cover all crimes, I cover "rum crimes." As regards the history of license, it is abundant. Massachusetts has had a hundred different kinds of license or modifications of a liquor license law. There was a license law on the statute books of the State before the beginning of the present century, and which remained essentially unchanged for more than fifty years. And in 1838, fifty-one years after its enactment, the Legislative Committee reported as follows: "It may well be doubted whether intemperance would have increased with more rapid strides, if no legislative regulation of the sale of intoxicating liquors had ever been made." Eight years before this, the District Attorney for Suffolk County advised the Liquor Committee of the Legislature to throw out all fines and penalties for the infraction of the license law, because of the 5000 licenses issued under the law in Boston, up to that time, not one had ever been sued. There were years at a time when there was no liquor license issued in Massachusetts, and rum held high carnival throughout the State, and yet there was a license law on the statute books of the State all the while. The friends of temperance found no aid in the law and the liquor dealers no privilege or protection from it. The history of all those years shows that a license law had neither power to redeem the drunkard from his cups nor stay the curse that dragged him down. Men high in legal position and social influence declared, in printed reports, that in their judgment the license laws of the Commonwealth "retarded the progress of the temperance reform, and constituted one of the main pillars on which the stupendous fabric of intemperance rested," by strengthening the traffic.

Recent license laws have no better showing. A juror in one of the Suffolk County Courts, under the license law of 1868, told me that in a whole term of the court but one violator of the liquor law was convicted, and he was an Irishman, so ignorant that he convicted himself in his testimony on the stand, so that that to have acquitted him would have plainly shown collusion on the part of the jury. The License Commission of Boston, in their printed report dated February 1, 1876, said: "Nothing is more common among the dealers than the saying that they are better off without than with a license, and as a matter of fact, few of the whole number of persons holding licenses are, in good faith, keeping the conditions of them; and the enforcement of the law against those who sell without license seems to have little effect either on the parties prosecuted or their neighbors in the trade."

Out of 1250 appealed liquor cases entered on the docket of the Superior Court for Suffolk County, during the first sixteen months of the present license law, only 125 were ever brought before the court; of this number only 75 were convicted, and of this number only 67 paid fines. All the rest slipped through the fingers of the law, and not one dram shop was closed by an enforcement of the law. Out of 4444 liquor cases in the upper and lower courts of the State in 1878 only 699 were brought to justice by the payment of a fine. All the rest escaped with the payment of a small bill of costs. The best thing that the friends of license can do is to say nothing about it, for it has a very bad showing.

I said the figures which "X" quotes do not represent the facts, and prove nothing. They show that there are less arrests for drunkenness now and of late years than there were years ago. Of course there are. Police forces are instructed not to make arrests for simple drunkenness, and have not done it for years. If they were to do so there would not be places enough in the State in which to put the drunkards. That there is more drunkenness now than years ago everybody knows who keep their eyes open. I have quoted from the old License Commission of Boston, showing that there were a large number of unlicensed dram shops. Supposing the Boston police had arrested the more than 1000 unlicensed dram shops in their city then and that still exist there? It would have made quite a difference in the figures from which "X" quotes. Then, supposing they had arrested the greater portion of the 2000 licensed saloon keepers, "few if any" of whom were "keeping within the conditions" of the law, according to the report of the License Commission, (and the same holds true to-day) what a different showing of arrests the figures would give us. Or, take another example: On a recent Sunday, not a thousand miles from Peabody, one woman, in pursuit of her son, cleared out a rum shop containing forty men and boys, because her appeals to the police to do it had been unavailing. Now, supposing the police had done this, and arrested them all for a plain violation of the license statute. What a different showing all these things would make in the annual Police Reports! It is a very easy matter for officials to cook up reports to suit themselves and their parties, but whose statistics concerning crime and criminals may be very unreliable. Prohibition is unpopular, so much so that even the Republican party, including so many stanch temperance advocates, in its last annual convention, at Worcester, (and in keeping with its spirit for the last five years of license administration) refused to tolerate, for one moment, a resolution favoring the prohibition of that evil which annually costs Massachusetts more money, and probably more lives, than she contributed to the civil war. If "x" did but know it, in one of the years from which he quotes, showing only a little over 2000 dram shops in Boston, the Police Commissioners reported 2445 licenses granted. It is true they reported only about 2000 issued, which they compare with the year 1874, when the State was under nominal Prohibition for a part of the year, and when it was supposed there were not less than 3000 dram shops in Boston; and they reported about the same number issued last year. But are we to suppose that over 400 persons, after applying for their licenses and after the licenses were granted, concluded to go out of the business? Not much. They staid in, and with them more than 600 others without any license, because, according to the report of the old License Board, they were better off without a license than with a license. And no honest man acquainted with the facts would hesitate to say that that there are more than 3000 liquor shops in Boston to-day, and have been every day for the last five years.

What concerns the welfare of Massachusetts and what ought to interest us all vastly more than the number of arrests, is the amount of crime. Are there more crimes and criminals under license than under prohibition? This is the question to be decided. This question I have already answered in part, and will still further answer by referring to the penal and reformatory institutions in Boston harbor. "x" quotes from Mr. Bugbee, showing a lessened average number of arrests and drinking places in Boston, "during the five years following the adoption of the license system"—from 1875 to 1879, inclusive. I turn to the Annual Report of the Directors of the Institutions at Deer Island, for 1876, the year following the introduction of the license system, and I read the following language: "At no period during the history of the Institutions at Deer Island has such demands been made upon the accommodations of the place as during the past year. . . . To provide accommodations for this great number the Superintendent has been obliged to avail himself of every possible space, appropriating the chapel floor, the prison corridors, packing and crowding dormitories, and using room never intended to be used as sleeping room." In the report for the following year, I find the Chaplain of the same Institutions using the following language: "Crime is unquestionably on the increase, and all the punishments inflicted on the guilty do not deter others from incurring the same guilt, neither does the humane treatment of prisoners apparently diminish their numbers. . . . The tidal wave of corruption sweeps on bearing its thousands to an infamous grave." During these five years, in which Massachusetts has endorsed and protected her 12,000 dram shops, together with all the crime and misery which they produce — these years in which we are told that Police Reports show a lessened average number of arrests and licensed liquor saloons—I find that the charitable and penal Institutions of Boston harbor have not only been "crowded to suffocation," (using the language of their official reports) but new Institutions, there and elsewhere, have been added, and these filled to repletion; a new State's Prison for men has been built, the first appropriation for which was $1,000,000; another prison for women has been erected at an immense cost; the State debt has gone on increasing until it is more than $32,000,000, and drunkenness reels unmolested through all our streets.—Surely the moral effects of a liquor license law must be conclusive to every intelligent and honest mind.

III. Finally, the inquiry arises in my mind, if licensing the liquor traffic is so much better than prohibiting it, if prohibition is so much nearer to free rum, why is it that all haters of temperance and the truth so bitterly oppose prohibition and advocate license, when they can't get anything better? If prohibition is so near to nothing, why is it that the National Beer Brewers' Association publicly proscribe it and pledge the influence of their $300,000,000 of working capital for the defeat of "every politician of known total abstinence principles?" Why is it that they support their paid agent at the National Capital to secure a pledge from the National Congress that no act shall be passed adversely to their interests. Why should Congress fear to offend the beer drinking voters of the country, and refuse, for six successive years, to grant the petitions of millions of sober men and women for the appointment of a commission of inquiry on the liquor question without pay? If license is so superior to prohibition the report of this commission would only show the fallacy of prohibition all the more conspicuously and prove the untenable position of prohibitionists.

A few days ago a Roman Catholic rumseller rose in his place, in our State Senate, and strongly opposed the new bill presented by the liquor committee, declaring his belief that if "the Senate desired to vote for free rum the shortest way would be to pass a prohibitory law." Why, then, in the name of self interest doesn't he favor prohibition? It would make his business so much better than it is under license. Does the Hon. (?) Martin wish us to understand that he is so magnanimous that he desires to work against his own interests and his Democratic constituency by opposing prohibition because it would make rum so much the freer? I never supposed him such a man when I was his neighbor, in Boston, for years. When will wonders cease?

Yours for the truth,
L. L. WOOD.

Miscellaneous.

A story is told of Van Amburgh, the great lion tamer, now dead. On one occasion, while in a bar-room, he was asked how he got his wonderful power over animals. He said: "It is by showing that I am not the least afraid of them, and by keeping my eye steadily on theirs. I'll give you an example of the power of my eye." Pointing to a loutish fellow who was sitting near by, he said: "You see that fellow? he's a regular clown. I'll make him come across the room to me and I won't say a word to him." Sitting down, he fixed his keen, steady eye on the man. Presently the fellow straightened himself gradually, got up and came slowly across to the lion-tamer. When he got close enough he drew back his arm and struck Van Amburgh a tremendous blow under the chin, knocking him clear over the chair, with the remark: "You'll stare at me like that again, won't you?"

BALLOU'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.—The March number of Ballou's Monthly Magazine is issued, and contains a large installment of that thrilling Indian story, The Crimson Trail, which is so much admired. There is also a nice picture of a banyan tree, an illustrated article on Shakespeare and his home, a vivid skating scene, some remarkably good poetry, a dozen or twenty stories, and five pages of humorous matter, the best that ever appeared in a magazine. This magazine gives more of a variety than any other publication of the kind in the country, and yet it is sold for the low price of fifteen cents a copy. Every family should have a copy, for it affords much good reading. Now is the time to subscribe for this popular and cheap magazine. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston, Mass., at $1.50 per annum, postpaid, and for sale at all the news depots in the country at 15 cents a copy.

In Iowa editor recently wrote an article which was very severe upon the English government. He then bought two revolvers, an army overcoat, an old sabre and a double-barreled shot-gun. Three weeks passed by and he remained unmolested. He then wrote a short and contemptuous editorial, in which he pronounced the Queen's advisers a set of cowards, and declared that he should waste no mords upon them.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!
Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE NEW YORK
EVENING POST
FOR 1881.
In Its Eighty first Year.
The character and objects of the Evening Post are so well known, that it would be enough, as a prospectus of the coming year, merely to announce that it will endeavor to maintain its position as the leading evening journal of the city of New York, but its proprietors hope, by renewed energy and enterprise, to render it still more worthy of the generous support which it has hitherto received from the public.
1. The Evening Post, for more than fifty years, has been devoted to that theory of politics on which our institutions are built, and which regards the government as the organ and representative of the whole community, and not of any class. By the fundamental law of its corporate organization it is bound to contend for the decentralization of power, for freedom of exchange in trade, for just and impartial taxation, for a sound hard-money currency, for economy and purity of administration, and for a reformed civil service, and to these principles it will continue to give an earnest, enlightened and unfaltering support.
2. In 1854 it took an active part in the formation of the Republican Party, to the measures and candidates of which it has since generally adhered; but it is in no sense the slave of any party organization. It holds that the highest duty of a good journal is to the community at large, and to parties only as they are subservient to the general good. While it has decided political preferences, therefore it has no political prejudices; and is determined to befair and impartial toward all parties, and independent in its judgments. It means to make vigorous war, as it always has done, upon all public jobs, all corruption, all extravagance, all peculation, all rings, and all class legislation.
3. But the chief aim of the proprietors of the Evening Post is to render it a first class family newspaper, which shall not only provide the latest and fullest news of each day, but lend a special aid to all the best elements of civilization, to Literature, to Science, to Art, to Education, and to Innocent Amusements. Accordingly, it maintains intelligent correspondents not only in our two political capitals, Washington and Albany, but in all the great cities of the Christian World. Its reviews of books have long since made a name for themselves; its theatrical and musical criticisms are full, discriminating, instructive and just; its financial and market reports are noted for their completness and accuracy; while its miscellaneous departments have no superior for variety, freshness and general interest.
4. Every Saturday, to accommodate our advertisers, who are more numerous than those of any other New York daily journal except the Herald, we publish a supplement, which contains tales, poems, correspondence, extracts, and miscellanies of various kinds, and which is intended to anticipate the Sunday editions of the morning papers. It is furnished to our subscribers without increase of price.
5. The best things of our daily edition are specially prepared for our Semi-Weekly and Weekly editions, which supply to country readers all the news, with an abundance of other matter, up to the day of their date. We do not believe that any better papers for country reading are issued from the city of New York.

Sunday Trains.

The Troy and Greenfield Railroad is mortgaged to the State of Massachusetts and worked under the direction of the Governor and Council. As it is a violation of a State law to run railroad trains on Sundays, the State, not deeming it wise to violate its own statutes, has restricted the running of trains over its route on the Lord's day. But the Boston and Albany Railroad runs both freight and passenger cars on Sunday. The tunnel route is a link in a great competing road which thus is put at a disadvantage by having its trains detained over Sunday. One would suppose the most natural remedy would be an enforcement of the law on the Boston and Albany Road, but instead of that our Legislature passed a bill last week authorizing railroad authorities to run trains on the Sabbath, by special permit, without incurring the penalties of law. Among the names of those who voted for the bill we notice those of Representatives Wardwell of our own town, and John I. Baker of Beverly.

We must expect the repeal of the Sunday laws and the Europeanizing of our American Sabbaths sooner or later. But when we recall the moral influence of the Christian Sabbath upon society, as established by the teachings of History, we can but regret that the wedge of Infidelity, driven by the mallet of avarice, has so soon opened the way to both freight and passenger traffic on all the railroads of the Commonwealth, which will soon follow. That there are many excuses for this action we have no doubt, but no excuses can rightly take the precedence of the laws of nature and of God. *

There is to be no extra session of Congress. President Garfield told the Washington correspondent of the Morning Star, that he did not think that the necessity of funding legislation was so great as to justify calling Congress together. Of course this is simply a matter of dollars and cents. If the cost of an extra session of Congress, either directly or indirectly, would be greater than the excess of interest that will have to be paid between now and next winter, and we believe it would be, then funding may better postponed.—Whatever loss the country sustains will have to be charged up against those Democrats who put the odious fifth section into the funding bill.

The New Whistles.

MR. EDITOR,—Is it possible that the recent multitude of steam whistles in Peabody has any advantage to offset the certain annoyance and discomfort of which they are the cause?

If they are of any real convenience in regulating the hours of work—which is doubtful—is not the matter quite overdone?

The din now raised morning, noon and night is without parallel elsewhere so far as we know. And to many these whistles are simply instruments of torture. Between half past five and seven in the morning, eight separate blasts are sounded on the great fog-signal at the Bleachery, which, it said, can be heard for miles. Certainly at the Kingdom, in certain states of the weather, it is so powerful as to jar windows and light articles in the houses. It awakens hundreds of children, to say nothing of the sick and of the tired sleepers whom it disturbs. By what right can any establishment invade the peace and quiet of so many homes? A diabolical combination of whistles called by some a "chime" is now blown on Foster street, not far from the Square. It is a crying evil. Within a few months the inhabitants along the lines of the Providence and the N. Y. and N. E. railroads entering Boston, have appealed to the Railroad Commissioners to protect them from the excessive whistling of locomotives. On both those roads the management have stopped the whistling except in cases of necessity, with no loss or injury to the road, but with great gain to everybody. Would there not be great gain with no loss, if the whistling were reduced to reasonable limits in Peabody? SUFFERER.

The New York Evening Post, in speaking of the financial record of Hon. Wm. Windom, the new Secretary of the Treasury, says: "On the 2d of April, 1874, Senator Windom voted for the inflation bill which was vetoed by President Grant. After the veto Senator Windom, on the 27th of April, voted to pass the bill, notwithstanding the President's objections. On the 15th of February, 1878, Senator Windom voted for the Bland silver bill. He had already voted against the amendments which modified some of its worst features, The bill was vetoed by President Hayes on the 28th of February.—On the same day Senator Windom voted to pass the bill, notwithstanding the President's objections." This looks like a soft money victory. But Mr. Windom may have undergone a change of heart.

The tenth Farmers' Institute of the Essex Agricultural Society will be held at Plummer Hall, Salem, on Thursday, March 24th, 1881, at 9 o'clock, A. M. In the forenoon the subject of the Care, Feeding and Treatment of Domestic Animals will be discussed by Col. J. E. Russell, Secretary State Board of Agriculture, and others. In the afternoon the subject is The Present Relation of Farmers to the Public, and what those relations should be; to be discussed by Col. David W. Low of Gloucester, and others. Dinner will be furnished at the Essex House.

As a pure, unadulterated specimen of partisan audacity, Speaker Randall's assertion, on inauguration day, that the Democratic Congress had restored prosperity to the country, established specie payments, strengthened the public credit and given birth to an era of internal concord, will certainly take the highest rank among the oratorical efforts of a buncombe Congress, in the last days of its session.

The United States Circuit Court at Chicago, Judge Moran presiding, recently decided that a Chinaman cannot become a naturalized citizen of the United States. This is a wonderful country. While the most ignorant of other foreigners can become a citizen of the United States, we shut out the most refined and educated Chinaman from that privilege.

The printing office has produced two of the ablest men in the new Cabinet of President Garfield. James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, was formerly the editor of a Maine journal. Thomas L. James, Postmaster-General, was, in early life, a journeyman printer.

A bill has been introduced in the General Court, which, if it becomes a law, will require town and city clerks to publish within a week from their dates all intentions of marriage for which certificates are issued.

J. Shepard, a farmer of Peoria, Ill., has faithfully kept a vow made in 1860, not to cut his hair or shave until the election of a Democratic president. His whiskers reach almost to his waist, and his hair is kept in braids.

The second meeting of the Essex County Sunday School Association is held to-day at the First Universalist Church in Lynn. Quint's barge conveyed a number of people from this town.

A TOTAL MISAPPREHENSION OF FACTS.—Quite often there are laid upon the editorial table of the Post, or in some other way are brought to the notice of the editor, tickets "admit the bearer" to some promised rich entertainment of a local or other character. Of course it is not because of the good looks or winning ways of any one who is in our editorial department that we are so favored. The tickets are brought to us with an eye to business which is perfectly proper. The tickets mean that they would like to have the entertainment noticed, and the editor of this paper is always ready to notice such entertainments, and will allow no other editor to ever outdo him in liberality, but it should be borne in mind that the notice for the tickets is always supposed to come after and not before the entertainment.

There are sometimes cases where the managers of an entertainment think fit to put an advertisement in one paper only, and then give tickets to the other papers with the expectation that the inducement of the free enjoyment of the entertainment will cause these other editors to advertise it.

In this respect they fail to realize that editors, in common with other people, require a generous quantity of daily bread, and the space which they are supposed to furnish in advertising an entertainment for mere tickets of admittance, might otherwise be devoted to paying matter. People also fail to realize that editors seldom attend an entertainment of any kind for the real enjoyment which others derive from the same. They go as a matter of business, and a matter which, in its nature, is designed more for the benefit of the managers of the entertainment than for the editor's benefit. Thus it will be seen that tickets are no inducement for the editors to open their hearts or their columns to free advertising, and whenever they do so it is not for the tickets eceived, but rather to favor a friend or one who might be made a friend or patron. When an advertisement is given to a paper, together with tickets, the tickets are supposed to pay for an advance notice in the local columns, and a notice after the performance is optional with the editor. When tickets are given to a paper without an advertisement, it is supposed by the paper that no advertising is needed, the tickets meaning an invitation to be present and witness the performance and to say something or nothing as the case may be when the performance is over.—When the character or object of the entertainment is such that it cannot afford to pay for advertising, then an editor usually notices such entertainments in advance. Thus it will be seen that the giving of tickets to newspaper men and the advance notices of the entertainment, sociables, dances, etc., given by the papers, are legitimate business transactions, and not "dead-head passes" on the one hand, nor "items of interest to the reader" on the other hand, as many people suppose.—Salem Post.

THE STORY OF A FLAG.—The tremendous effect that may result from a typographical error was never better illustrated than in the case of the Hot Springs Telegraph and its rebel flag.—A great Democratic barbecue had been held near the Springs, and the editor had "thrown himself" in a two column descriptive article, headed with flaming lines. To add a little glory the compositor was directed to top the article with that oft used emblem of our nation, the "stars and stripes." The editorial was printed and sent out before the busy editor had time to examine his handiwork, and then, to his horror, he found he had "flung to the breeze" the "stars and bars!" The careless compositor, in tumbling over the dusty box of blackened cuts, had taken this relic of the old war times, and used it without a close examination. Then what an uproar arose! All the copies of this edition that could be secured were seized by the politicians, who paid as high as a dollar apiece, and sent throughout the land. The Republican press, from Harper's Weekly and the New York Tribune to the obscure papers in the remotest territories, rang with the cry of "treason." The flag and its following head lines were reproduced bp lithography and stereography and met the eye everywhere. The unfortunate editor protested in vain; his voice could not be heard in the din. But now that the campaign is over, he should have justice.

His name is W. A. Webler, and he is a northern man, formerly an Iowa editor. He served with honor in the federal army, risking his life to put down the emblem of treason. It is as hateful to his sight as to that of any "stalwart" in the land. He had lately bought the Telegraph office and did not even know that it contained this obnoxious cut. All who know him believe his explanation. It was simply a typographical error—nothing more.

Lives there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said: "Here are five dollars which I think I will invest in printer's ink."—Stillwater Lumberman.

SALEM.

Miss E. F. Punchard, No. 76 Federal street, announces a new stock of pretty prints, ginghams, etc.

F. A. Wruck has taken the store 165 Essex street, opposite St. Peter street, where he will keep on hand every variety of watches, clocks and jewelry, and attend to repairing in all its branches. With a long experience in every branch of the jewelry business, he will continue to give entire satisfaction as in the past. Mr. Wruck has also a well-deserved reputation as an engraver and optician.

Among the passengers in the steamer State of Nevada, from New York for Glasgow, on Thursday last, was Mr. Francis A. Fielden, junior editor of the Salem Observer.

Mr. Frank Cousins, at the Bee Hive, has taken the rooms in the second story, above his store, and will fit them up like the different departments down stairs. This will be found of great convenience to his large and constantly increasing trade, because they will find everything up stairs as down, and can make their purchases readily, notwithstanding the large crowd which usually throng at this store.

Merrill & Mackintire are calling attention to their large stock of Spring paper hangings, borders, etc. Their stock is very large, and always the latest styles. Housekeepers should examine this stock before purchasing.

Messrs. R. C. Manning & Co. have a full lot of Cumberland and Pea and Dust Coal advertised in this paper. These are steam coals for manufacturers.

As the spring weather approaches something is needed to assist in renovating our exhausted constitutions and feelings of general decline. C. H. & J. Price offer to-day a great strengthening and appetizing tonic—Ferrated Hygienic Wine.

Almy, Bigelow & Webber invite attention to their new stock of Ladies' Spring Suits handsomely and neatly trimmed.

Mr. David Conrad, 181 Essex Street, opens to-day 100 dozen hand knit sacks for infants. On Thursday, March 17, he will open his new style Spring Sacks and Silk Dolmans at great bargains.

Mr. H. W. Thurston, furniture dealer, 85 Washington St., Salem, has a notice to-day calling attention to the fact that he has secured the services of Mr. Geo. Domican, and is prepared to do upholstering in a thorough manner at reasonable terms. Drapery and shade work will be made a specialty.

In a sermon, recently, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher made the following announcement: "There are men wishing I would go out of the Congregational Church. I won't go. I'm going to stay in and love my enemies, and I've got business for life. I have endeavored to be a Christian man, and in my ministry of love not to disgrace the Church by my life. I am wedded to the Church of my father. I love it. I am not going out of it because I have a different method of putting the doctrine of sin, a different method of putting the doctrine of regeneration, a different method of putting the doctrine of the atonement of Christ, and because I disallow the eschatology of the Church. They say I must go out, and I say, if you want me to go out, come and fetch me; I refuse to go out."

The following which we clip from one of our exchanges will be appreciated by all newspaper men: "On several occasions visitors at this office have made it a point to look over a compositer's shoulder and read the manuscript from which he is setting. This is about as cheeky as well as impolite a thing as a person can be guilty of, and we hope it will not occur again; if it does, somebody will be very apt to get a set-back. When we want our manuscript read before publication we will pass it around."

The Musical Herald for March presents an especially large table of contents, and is a very sprightly and readable number. The longer articles of this number are "Music of the Future" (Morax), "Volunteer," "Modern Instrumentation" (second paper), by Gotthold Caslberg, "Work and Play" (with humorous illustration), and "Making a Programme," by Louis C. Elson, "History of Church Music," etc., etc. The awards of the Musical Herald prizes are contained in this number.

Professor Proctor is about to start a newspaper. He won't run it three weeks before he will think a hissing, whirling comet has skimmed through his purse, leaving nothing but the most ethereal vapor of its tail.—New Haven Register.

If you go the world over, you will nowhere get any better ARTIFICIAL TEETH, or anything else in the Dental line, than of Dr. DUDLEY, Senior, of Salem, and as to moderate prices he cannot be beat. Dr. Dudley has occupied the same rooms in Browne's Block more than 16 years, and still "holds the fort," and with a rich experience of 40 years, may well be called the "father of dentists."

MR. EDITOR,—The temperance meeting called last evening at the vestry of the Baptist Church, was quite large and enthusiastic. Rev. Mr. Wood presided. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Harmon, the need and propriety of a town temperance society was fully and freely discussed, and it was decided to form such a society. The clergy were appointed a committee on organization, and will report at an adjourned meeting next Monday evening, notice of which will be given in the churches next Sabbath. That there is great and urgent need of such a society, and abundant work for it to do, no one can doubt, and it is hoped that all friends of temperance in Peabody will come forward and identify themselves with this work.

J. T. CASSINO, Sec'y.

Peabody, March 15, 1881.

POLICE NOTES.—March 9th. John Lehan, for an assault, was fined $4.25.

March 14th. Norah Reardon, for drunkenness, was fined $1.00; for assault, $5 and costs. She appealed.

Thomas Reardon, for drunkenness, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction.

Dennis Griffin paid $1.00 for drunkenness.

March 15th. Wm. J. Henderson, the boy who set fire to the load of hay in front of Stephen Blaney's residence last week, came up for trial, and was convicted. Judge Merrill deferred his sentence for one week.

England has several fights on her hand, and she finds that they keep her pretty busy. Well, she deserves her misfortunes, for she is always oppressive and insolent to everybody but her own children. Even those she sometimes attempts to bulldoze, after they have arrived at the age of discretion, but she does not often succeed in that.

The insolvency cases of Edward W. Jacobs and William Sutton were again continued until April.

Mr. Farnham's organ styles him a self-made man. This relieves the Almighty of much responsibility.

The fire at the Wakefield Rattan Works was distinctly seen in this town last Saturday morning.

It is hard to please a man who does not wish to be lied about and cannot bear to have the truth told about him.

Next Friday the day and night will be nearly equal. The days have increased two hours and forty odd minutes.

Mr. F. A. Wendell, of Salem, has commenced work on a contract for plumbing and gas piping the new residence of Mr. L. S. Poor, on Lowell street.

Mrs. Sarah A., wife of Mr. Simon P. Buxton, died at her residence on Liberty street, last Friday. She was an estimable lady, a kind mother and wife. She leaves a husband and two children.

Mr. Farnham says he believes in one great overwhelming power. He must have been forcibly reminded of such when he undertook to chastise the proprietor of a provision store on Main street, a few years ago.

Quality is the test of cheapness. Schollar & Donnell's Snow Flake Haxall is admitted to be the standard flour of the country. It is woman's delight, makes children bright, and renews the bodily vigor of every son of toil.—Adv.

The lovely weather of yesterday reminded us that we should soon see the buds on the trees, and the early spring plants begin to show evidence of the quickening influence of the sun's warm rays. The grass will soon be sprouting, and then go to Grosvenor's for spring bitters.

At the commencement of the Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, last week, the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon eighty-three young man, and among the number Andrew S. Oliver, formerly principal of the Bowditch School, who graduated with marked honor as a scholar.

The types made us say in our report of Town Meeting that Mr. Jonathan King favored the keeping of the appropriation for lighting the streets at $200. It should have been $1200. We know that Mr. King is strongly in favor of keeping down town expenses, but our error hardly places him in the right light.

Mr. Alpheus W. Bancroft failed to receive a sufficient number of votes to reelect him to the Board of Overseers of the Poor. Mr. Bancroft retires from the position after yaars of service with the consciousness that he has performed his duties in an honorable and efficient manner. He leaves the position possessing the confidence of all with whom he has had dealings with in his official capacity.

The new Revision of the New Testament, as made by the most eminent Biblical scholars of England and America, will soon be offered for sale. Ten years have been spent in its preparation. The work is a revision and not a new translation. It is the word of God in its purity. It deserves a place in every church and every home. There have been discovered several manuscripts, and evidence has been multiplied many fold since King James' translation two hundred and seventy years ago. It will be published by "The Henry Bill Publishing Company, Norwich, Conn." Orders may be left at No. 1 Main street. D. P. Grosvenor is agent and canvasser for Peabody and Danvers.

A special meeting of Union Post 50, G. A. R., is called for Thursday evening, March 17th.

The fourth annual Ball of the S. C. Bancroft Engine Company will be held at their hall, March 18, 1881.

Mr. Levi Spaulding is soon to build a house for Mr. Joseph Basford, on Washington street, near Tapley's Brook.

Mr. F. E. Farnham exercised his authority as chairman (?) of the school committee, last Thursday, by ordering a double session.

A large number of the pupils of the Peabody High School attended the graduation exercises of Holten High School, Danvers, last Friday afternoon.

You may be poor, you may be friendless, you may be unknown, you may never reach distinction, still on these windy March days you can shut the door.

About a score have asked us, "What do you think of Farnham's article?" This is what we think of it, in 9 words: A disjointed and illiterate dribble of self-conceit and egotism.

It's been "stormy March" thus far. Rain and snow, mist and chill, mud and chill, mud and slush, with hardly a streak of sunshine, has been the unvarying programme thus far.

All who wish a rich, mild flavored Coffee should try Schollar & Donnell's Java at 25 cents per lb. Invalids who have been judged past recovery are rejoicing in perfect health to-day by using this coffee.—Adv.

An exchange, at the head of its column on Town Meeting, uses one of Dr. Ayers' cuts of an anchor, with the word hope upon it. It can't be that they are hoping for any of Dr. Ayers' medicines which are recommended for biliousness, etc.

Mr. Frank W. Poor and family and Miss Helen Osborn, all from Kansas City, Missouri, were in town last week on a visit. Mr. Poor returned last Monday, but his family will remain for a while. Miss Osborn is on a purchasing tour, and will soon return.

The Annual Town Meeting stands adjourned to March 21, 1881, at 9 o'clock A. M. Among the business to transact will be the following:

To choose a Selectman in place of Alerson Galeucia. A member of the Water Board in place of George C. Peirce. A Pound Keeper in place of Lewis Buxton. A Field Driver in place of Robert G. Buxton; all of whom decline to serve.

Mr. George Basford, while at work in the bakery of Mr. F. A. Bragdon, last Friday morning, met with a painful accident. As he was using a dough knife and carelessly swinging it around, it struck the wheel of one of the machines, knocking it with force from his hand, and sending it into his arm, laying the flesh open to the bone. Mr. B. has been singularly unfortunate, and has had several narrow escapes, having been caught several times in the machinery.

Miss Lucy A. Smith, daughter of the late William Smith, died at her home on Wallis street, last Tuesday morning, of consumption, at the age of 25 years 5 months. Her health had been in a declining condition for some time, but she bore her sickness with meekness and fortitude. She had many amiable qualities and a good disposition, and her cheerful countenance was always welcome among her acquaintances to whom she was greatly endeared. Her funeral will take place from her late residence to-morrow at 2 o'clock.

Paragraphs marked with a ☞ are Advertisements.

"Let us lay aside for one day the ordinary cares and business of life, and repair to the various places of worship, to give heartfelt thanks for the manifold blessings which have been vouchsafed to us through the past year; and let us join in solemn vows that through the year which is to come we will make good use of the opportunities afforded us to make others happy. In order that the employes of this office may suitably observe the day there will be no issue of the Gazette to-morrow morning." This is an extract from a double-leaded editorial in an Arkansas paper Thanksgiving morning; and the whole editorial force and most of the employes went fishing that day and got on the most tremendous drunk ever heard of in the State.

☞ NO CHARGE FOR CONSULTATION.—After more than ten years' experience in administering that new and remarkable remedy for chronic diseases, now so widely known as "Compound Oxygen," and after a careful observation of its action in the largest range of diseases, some of them of the most complicated and hopeless character, we are now prepared to treat that special line of cases which are usually regarded by the profession as beyond the reach of medical skill.

Not that we will promise a cure in any and every case that may come to us. But we invite a statement, by letter or otherwise, of the case of any of that large class of suffering invalids to which we have referred. This will be carefully considered, and compared with other and similar cases which we have had under treatment, and as honest and intelligent an opinion given as it may be in our power to render. For this we will make no charge, whether, after consultation, the Oxygen Treatment be ordered or not. Send for our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, which will be mailed free. You may find in it the record of a case just like your own, which we have successfully treated. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Philadelphia, Pa.

When you hear a man say that snowballing is a healthy amusement, and the boys ought to be allowed to enjoy it, don't think him a generous soul. Set that man down as a glazier.

Pupil: "What is a hero, Mr. Birchem?" Teacher (Mr. Birchem): "A hero is a man who conquers himself." Pupil: "Ah! I see. A man who can sit down on a tack and only feel sad about it."

☞ BE TEMPERATE.—When sickness or depression comes, do not buy "tonic bitters." It is better to die of discase than drunkenness. Buy a bottle of "Favorite Remedy," and cleanse the system. The great multitude of human ills have their foundation in impure blood. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" attacks these at the fountain's head and makes the stream of life pure. Only one dollar per bottle. All druggists sell it. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

The butchers of Brooklyn have just started, for sociability, "The Leg of Mutton Club." A leg of mutton, well handled, ought to make a very good club.

The man or woman who has never loved, hugged, kissed, played with, listened to, told stories to, or thoroughly spanked a child, has missed the cardinal joys of life.

CARRY THE NEWS.—Mr. John Etzensperger, manufacturing jeweler of North Attleboro', Mass., lately communicated to us the following: I suffered so much with pains in my arm, that at times I was completely helpless. I used that incomparable remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, and was completely cured as if by magic.—Attleboro' Chronicle.

THE ENEMIES OF MANKIND.—The attention of the street-car company is called to the following incident, which goes to show how insolent the drivers frequently are: Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock a lady in an East Broadway car rang the bell, as she wished to get out. Instead of stopping the car the driver whipped up his mule, and did not stop until the car was two blocks past the corner where the lady wished to get out.

"Why didn't you stop the car when I rang the bell, so I could get out?" she asked, indignantly.

"Couldn't think of it, ma'am.—There was a fat old duffer chasing the car trying to get in."

The idea of accommodating two people at once seemed to bewilder him.

☞ Ministers, lawyers, teachers and others whose occupation gives but little exercise, should use Carter's Little Liver Pills for torpid liver and biliousness. One is a dose.

"Is your wife a Democrat or a Republican?" asked one citizen of another. "She's neither. She's a Home Ruler."

☞ Equally adapted to the feeble or robust, male or female, are Malt Bitters.

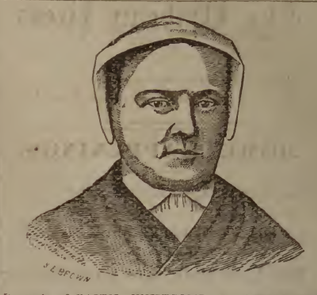
ALEXANDRE DUMAS THE ELDER.

No play-writers of that time, and very few play-writers since, have shown such complete mastery of all the resources of the stage as Dumas displayed; and it seems to me that no one who devotes a moderate attention to his dramatic works can reasonably doubt that in the celebrated quarrel about the play called the "Tour de Nesle," right was on the side of Dumas. This quarrel takes up some four chapters of Dumas's "Memoires;" but, briefly, the main facts were these: Harel, the great theatrical manager, had received a play in manuscript from a young author named Gaillardet. He thought there was capital stuff in it, but as it was written it was quite unfitted for stage representation, on account of the author's inexperience. Jules Janin had tried to do something with it, and had failed. Harel then came to Dumas, who, according to his own account, which I for one believe, entirely remodeled it, and made it one of the most impressive melodramas ever put on the stage. He had previously written a somewhat imprudently self-effacing letter to the young author, who, instead of being grateful, was furious at having, as he said, a collaborator thrust upon him, and ended by writing to the papers to assert that he was the sole author of the piece. The matter went through all kinds of intracies, into which it would be tedious to go; but the last word which ought to be said about it is found in a letter written by Gaillardet in 1861 to the manager of the Porte St. Martin Theatre. The letter ran thus: "A judgment of the courts in 1832 decreed that the 'Tour de Nesle' should be printed and announced under my name alone; and this was done up to the date of its being forbidden by the censorship in 1851. Now that you are going to put it on the stage again, I give you permission—nay, more, I beg you to join to my name that of Alexandre Dumas, my collaborator. I wish to prove to him that I have forgotten our old quarrel, and that I remember only our later pleasant relations and the great share which his incomparable talent had in the success of the 'Tour de Nesle.'" At the same time, however, the quarrel made an immense stir, culminating in a duel between Dumas and Gaillardet, which Dumas relates in his best manner. One or two touches in the narration are intensely characteristic. He begins by saying that as he started for the place of the combat, Bonnaire, a friend of his, came up to him, with an album in his hand. "Ah," he said, "you are going out. Are you in a hurry?" "Why do you ask?" "Because if you are not I should like you so much to write something in this album." "Well, leave it in my room, and when I come back I will write something in it." "You can't now?" "No, I am in a hurry to keep an appointment, and would not be late for any consideration." "Where are you going?" "To fight a duel with Gaillardet." "Oh, then please write something now. Think how delightful it would be for my wife to possess the last lines you ever wrote." "Ah!" said Dumas, "you are right. I will not deprive Mme. Bonnaire of that pleasure," and so saying he went back and wrote a few lines in the album. Then, when they were on the ground, Bixio, a friend of Dumas, who was a doctor, said to him, "Shall you hit him?" "I don't know," said Dumas. "Try to." "I shall certainly try; but do you dislike him?" "Not at all, I don't know him." "Then why so anxious?" "Well, have you read Merimee's 'Etruscan Vase?'" "Yes." "Then don't you remember that he says every man killed by a bullet turns round before he drops? I want to see if it's true." He had no opportunity of seeing on this occasion, for the duel was fortunately harmless; but the pendant to this odd story is that Bixio himself was shot somey ears afterward at a Paris barricade—shot to death—and as he fell, turning, he cried, "Ah! one does turn then!"—The Nineteenth Century.

MRS. MOLONY.



In the district burial-grounds of St. George, Hanover square, in the Bayswater road, in the ante chapel, there is a mural tablet with a long inscription which has a remarkable resemblance to the Lady O'Looney epitaph as generally quoted. A few days ago I copied so much of it as I thought necessary to bear out my statement, but the whole inscription is worth reading: "Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Jane Molony, who lies interred in a vault underneath this chapel, daughter of Anthony Shee of Castle Bar in the County of Mayo, Esq., who was married to Miss Burke, of Curry, in the said county, and cousin to the Rt. Hon. Edmund Burke, commonly called the sublime, whose bust is here surmounted or subjoined. The said Jane was cousin to the late Countess of Buckinghamshire, and was married to three successive husbands. Thirdly, Edmond Molony. The said Mrs. Molony, otherwise Shee, died in London in January, 1839, aged 74. She was hot, passionate and tender, and a highly accomplished lady and a superb drawer in water-colors, which was much admired in the exhibition room in Somerset House some years past.

Though lost forever, still a friend is dear,
The heart yet pays a tributary tear.

This monument was erected by the deeply afflicted husband, the said Edmond Molony, in memory of her great virtue and talents. Beloved and deeply regretted by all who knew her. For of such is the kingdom of heaven."—Notes and Qurcies.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend it to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further pooof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house ac Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

A STORM ON THE SUN.

Observers of the sun found indications of intense commotion, recently. The sun spots were many, large and active, and protuberances shot up their rose-colored tongues with increased force and velocity from the surface. The earth made instantaneous response to the solar storm. A magnetic disturbance suddenly began, accompanied by an unusual exhibition of earth currents. The magnetic variations were frequent and large, and the earth currents continuous and strong. It is years since the Greenwich observatory has recorded magnetic disturbances of equal magnitude, and it sends forth a timely warning to telegraph engineers, and especially to those connected in laying submarine cables, that earth currents may now become frequent as compared with the quietness of recent years. A superb exhibition of aurora accompanied the magnetic disturbance. An observer at the Stoneyhurst observatory describes it as recalling the magnificent displays of 1869, 1870 and 1871, while the play of the magnets was one of the most violent ever recorded at that observatory. The auroral display was extensively observed in England and Scotland. One observer describes it as an outburst of streamers, appearing like wavy, swaying curtains from the zenith to near the horizon, with the loveliest green tints near the zenith. Another writes that the streaks extended from horizon to zenith, the color being principally pale blue with a reddish tinge. Another paints the display as a brilliant display of white light followed by streamers, each streamer fading away before the succeeding one became very bright. Still another records a glowing celestial picture of the northern horizon skirted by a bright white haze, terminating in an ill-defined arch, from which sprang a large number of broad streamers, stretching toward the zenith.

The same phenomenon was seen by American observers, although it did not receive the attention bestowed upon it by European observers. It is evident, however, that the epoch of grand auroras and magnetic storms has returned, and that our northern skies for months to come will probably be lighted with auroral flames. More earnestly than ever arises the question of the cause of the sun-spot cycle and its intimate connection with electric and magnetic phenomena. No one doubts that the commotion in the solar orb is reflected on the earth in the flashes of auroral light and the erratic movements of the magnetic needle. We can see the cause and note the effect. But no one, if the theory of the disturbing influence of the great planets is rejected, has found the clue to the secret of sun spots. We can only grope in darkness while we wait for persistent searchers to solve the problem, and admire with mingled reverence and awe the mighty powers with which the sun sways his retinue of worlds, and the strength of the sympathetic chord by which each planet in the system reflects in auroral light and disturbed magnetism the abnormal condition of the great central orb.—Providence Journal.

TEST OF MERIT.

Edmund Lean once heard a stage carpenter thus settle the pretensions of impersonators of Hamlet: "You may talk of Henderson and Kemble and this new man," said the carpenter; "but give me Bannister's Hamlet. He was always done twenty minutes sooner than any of 'em." Self-interest is a sad warper of the judgment, and devises very strange tests. Going over the graveyard of the "Old Meeting," at Birmingham, with the clerk, Joshua Vernal asked him who was the greatest man lying buried there. "This is he," answered Mackay, pointing to a grave; "I get 5s. a year to keep it in order." "But what was he? what did he do?" inquired the incredulous Joshua. "Why," said the clerk, "he invented the holeing of thimbles." Vernal thereupon pointed to the grave of a distinguished scholar as being that of the greatest man there; but the clerk pooh-poohed the preposterous suggestion, saying, "No such thing; I only get a paltry shilling for that grave." His test of greatness was a purely professional one, like that of the Norwich barber who confidentially told the Mayor he did not think much of "this British Association; nine out of ten of them don't shave at all, and the others shave themselves."—Chambers's Journal.

HE WANTED A SNUFF-BOX.

Austrian orders are freely bestowed, for an excellent reason. The house of Hapsburg-Lorraine has little else to give. An English gentleman once called on a foreign General, who was his friend, and found him in boisterous spirits. "George," exclaimed the soldier, "they've given me the Elizabeth" (a minor military decoration.) The Englishman offered formal congratulations, but knowing something of the relative significance of orders, and remembering that, as it was, the General could scarcely find room on his coat for the many stars and crosses he had won, wore a somewhat puzzled look. "I see you don't understand," the General suddenly cried out; "my dear fellow, they've given me the last remaining order; the next time they must out with their snuff-boxes, which are as good as money."—The Cornhill Magazine.

Good breeding is the result of much good sense, some good nature, and a little self denial for the sake of others, and with a view to obtain the same indulgence from them.

If you can say nothing good of any one say nothing at all, for in friendship as in love we are often happier in our knowledge.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

THEY ALL KNOW.

Once in a lifetime you will meet a man who will admit that he doesn't know all about a horse, but he may come around next day and claim to have been temporarily insane when he made the admission. As a rule, every man knows exactly what ails a horse, whether anything ails him or not, and can point out a dozen instances where Nature could have improved on her work, no matter how well she did it.

Yesterday a horse which had been looked over by the Fire Department and rejected on account of size, was tied to a post on Griswold street. He was sound as a dollar, not even showing a wind-puff. Pretty soon along came two lawyers, and one of them remarked:

"Pity such a nice animal as that is foundered."

"Yes, and I can see that he is wind-broken to boot," was the ready response.

Then the cashier of a bank halted and took a look at the horse's teeth. He was going away, when a mail carrier asked:

"How old do you call him?"

"Some men might buy him for twelve, but they couldn't fool me. That horse will never see sixteen again."

The best judges had called him six, and his owner had proofs that he wasn't a month older. The mail carrier felt of the animal's ribs, rubbed his spine, and observed:

"He's got the botts, or I'm no judge of horses."

Then a merchant halted and surveyed the horse's legs, lifted its front feet, pinched its knees, and feelingly said:

"Been a pretty good stepper in his day, but he's gone to the crows now."

The next man was a bookkeeper. It took him about five minutes to make up his mind that sweeny was the leading ailment, although poll-evil, heaves and glanders were present in a bad form.

"What is sweeny?" queried an innocent bootblack who had made up his mind that the horse had liver complaint.

"Sweeny?" repeated the bookkeeper, "look at the way he carries his tail, and learn what sweeny is."

"Oh, no," put in another; "sweeny affects the eyes."

"I guess not," said an insurance man; "I guess sweeny affects the lungs."

"Lungs!" cried a broker; "you mean the stomach."

And they were jangling over it when the owner of the horse came and led him away. —M. Quad.

A LIBERAL EDITOR.

We were grieved to read the other day of the death of one of Michigan's jolliest pioneer editors—almost the last man of a band who published weeklies in the State when a coonskin would pay for a column "ad," and three bushels of corn dumped on the office floor stood for a year's subscription. Never a publisher was more liberal with his space. It was hard work for him to charge for anything except the tax list and mortgage sales, and he measured short even on them. One day in the years gone by his paper copied an attack on a county official, and old Mark was dozing at his desk when the injured party stalked in and began:

"You are a coward, sir—a —— coward!"

"Mebbe I am," was the editor's complacent reply.

"And I can lick you, sir—lick you out of your wrinkled old boots."

"I guess you could," answered Mark, as he bursted the wrapper off his only exchange.

"I'm going to write an article calling you a fool, liar, coward, cur, slanderer and body snatcher, and go over to Ionia and pay five cents a line to have it published."

"Hey?" queried the old man, as he wheeled around.

"Yes, I'll pay five cents a line to have it published.

"Say let me tell you something," replied Mark. "I've got two hundred more circulation than the Banner, and I'll publish your attack on me for two cents a line and take it out in mill feed or corn stalks. Don't trot over to Ionia when you can help build up your own town."

Mark would have published it word for word, just as he said, and thrown in a cut of a horse or a stump-puller free gratis, but the official cooled off.—Detroit Free Press.

WHAT A TELEGRAM DID.

A piece called the "Death of Lincoln" was produced at Munich in the latter part of 1865. The author resided at a distance from the town, and was communicated with by telegraph concerning two or three important changes. The author wished the murder of Lincoln to be narrated—not to take place on the stage, but the manager was against this as he was a sensation-lover, and he therefore sent a peremptory telegram to the author in these words: "The murder must be committed in the box. Reply quickly." The telegraph employe who received the message was so alarmed that, instead of forwarding it to the address, he communicated it at once to the Commissioner of Police, who in his turn considered the information of sufficient importance to put his brethren of the police on the qui vive at Munich, and the machinery of the law was at once put into operation to arrest the murderous conspirators. Happily the manager was able to convince the authorities, and so the matter ended with a sensational story for the papers, which turned out to be a capital puff preliminary for the piece.

The heart ought to give charity when the hand cannot.

HOW IT WORKED.

Bronson Alcott, of Boston, told Joseph Cook, and Joseph Cook told everybody he met, that he made a regulation in his school that if a pupil violated a rule, "the master should substitute his own voluntary sacrificiel chastisement; and this regulation almost Christianized his school." "One day," Mr. Alcott said, "I called up before me a pupil who had violated an important rule. I put the ruler into the offender's hand; I extended my own hand; I told him to strike. Instantly I saw a struggle begin in his face. A new light sprang up in his countenance. A new set of shuttles seemed to be weaving a new nature within him. I kept my hand extended, and the school was in tears. The boy struck once and burst into tears. He seemed transformed by the idea that I should suffer chastisement in place of his punishment, and ever after was the most docile fellow in the school, though he had at first been the rudest."

Now, this is very affecting and reasonable and striking. No one can read the incident and very readily forget it; and it contains a lesson that every school teacher can certainly read with profit. The incident came to the notice of Willis K. Stoddard, who for years past has been teaching a district school in Flint river township, Iowa. He read this extract from one of Joseph Cook's lectures, and never forgot the great moral lesson which it conveyed. Young Mr. Stoddard had some very hard boys in his school. They were big and noisy and rough and turbulent. He had reasoned with them, he had expostulated; he had begged and wept. He had whipped them until his arms ached, and the directors had threatened to dismiss him for unnecessary severity and absolute cruelty; and the boys grew worse and worse every day. But when he was at his wits' end, and was seriously thinking of running away and losing all his back salary rather than stay at the school another day, he read this incident, and it gave his troubled mind new light. He had treasured it up probably half a day when one bright June afternoon, Samuel Johnson, the biggest and strongest, and worst of all the big bad boys, violated all the rules of the school, one after another, as fast as he could think of them, and wound up by tearing seven leaves out of his geography. Those he crammed into his mouth, and when he had chewed them into a pulp, he took the "wad" into his hand and propelled the whole mass with great violence into the ear of Elias Haskell, who signified his natural dismay and astonishment by a tremendous howl. Mr. Stoddard called Samuel Johnson up to his desk, and more calmly than was his custom under such circumstances, told him to go out and bring in a switch. The boy presently returned with a very peaceful looking switch indeed,—a switch, apparently far gone in the stages of consumption,—the sickest switch!

"Now," said Mr. Stoddard, with a gentle compassionate intonation, "strike me."

Samuel Johnson, who had already begun to unbutton his own jacket, opened his mouth wide, and the whole school stared in speechless amazement. Mr. Stoddard calmly repeated his order. He thought he could see the "new set of shuttles beginning to work." "Some one," he said tenderly,—"some one must suffer for the infraction of the rules. I will suffer chastisement in your stead." The teacher saw a "new light spring up" in Samuel Johnson's countenance. The boy looked at the teacher and then at his switch. The teacher could see a "struggle begin in the face." Presently the tears sprang to Samuel Johnson's eyes, and he said in a voice confused with anxiety, "Hadn't I better go out and get a bigger switch?"

The teacher softly told him that he might do as he wished, and Samuel Johnson went out and was gone ten minutes. When he returned the school smiled. He carried in his hand a switch that looked like a Russian peace commission. It was about seven feet long, an inch and three-quarters at the butt, and was limber and twisted, and had knots and knobs clear down to the point. The boy's face shone with a bright glow of conscientious satisfaction as he balanced this switch and drew it through his hard, muscular hands.

Mr. Stoddard stood up and folded his arms. Then he said, with a sad, sweet look of the culprit, "Now, strike me."

Samuel Johnson did not act in greedy haste. He conducted himself like a boy who had a painful duty to perform, but is impelled by conscientious motives to perform it thoroughly. He pulled off his jacket; he rolled up his sleeves; he spat on his hands, and took a two-handed grasp on the switch. Twice he changed the position of his feet to get a better brace. Then he drew a long, deep breath, poised his arm, and the switch just shrieked through the air like a wild, mad, living thing.

Old Mr. Hargis, the senior director, who lives only a mile and a half away from the school-house, said he was out in the field ploughing, and when Mr. Stoddard let off the first yell the old man's first impresion was that the school-house had been struck by lightning. The next time the teacher shouted, the director was convinced that a steamboat had gone astray and was whistling for a landing somewhere up the creek. While he was trying to hold his terrified horses, another volley of sound came sweeping over the land like a vocal cyclone; and old Mr. Nosengale, who had been deaf twenty-three years, came running over, saying he believed they were fighting down at the quarries. By this time they were joined by the rest of the neighbors, and the excited population went thronging on toward the school-house.

In accepting Mr. Stoddard's resignation, the directors considerately allowed his pay for the full term, and in a series of complimentary resolutions spoke of his efficiency in the highest terms, although it transpired that the board was privately agreed after all the facts had been laid before it, that he was too much of a "natural born fool" to suit a practical locality. Mr. Stoddard is not teaching anywhere this summer. He told his landlady that he needed rest, and the good-hearted old investigating committee was amazed to discover that Mr. Stoddard rested, and even went to bed, by leaning his face foremost against the mantel-piece in his room.—New York Times.

It is related of Queen Louise, of Prussia, mother of the present Emperor William, that one of her frequent visitors, a special friend of her husband, was an old general, called Kockeritz. This old soldier, after having dined with his royal friends, always manifested at a certain time a peculiar nervousness and restlessness, as if wishing to depart, while at other hours of the day he was only too glad to stay and have a friendly chat. But after dinner he always showed this great anxiety to get home. Louise was puzzled at the old man's strange behavior, and resolved to find out the cause. She made inquiries of his steward, who, after a few questions, explained that the old general had indulged for so many years in the habit of smoking a long pipe after dinner that now he could not possibly do without it. The next time the old general came to dine he exhibited after the repast the same nervous restlessness, and rose to take leave. Whereupon Louise rose too, and said, "Wait a little, general; I want to show you something." She went into the next room. On her return she held a long pipe, already filled, in one hand, and a burning wax-light and a "spill" in the other. Handing the pipe to the astonished old man, and lighting the spill, she said, "There, my old general, make yourself comfortable; this time you shall not desert us."

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO.—An enviable record is that which is exhibited in the advertisement of the New York Life Insurance Company, published among our advertisements this morning. The thirty-sixth annual report of this company, recently issued, exhibits the confidence bestowed on it by the public, together with the fact that it is managed in the best possible method known in the science of insurance. Thirty years ago this company began business, and with careful management has continued to grow in power and usefulness until it has reached a point where, if it were to go out of existence, the void would be one that could hardly be filled. The assets of the company are enormous, being $43,183,935 at the end of the year 1880, an increase over the year 1879 of $4,186,982. The amount of new insurance issued in 1880 was $22,229,979, an increase over 1879 of $5,131,806. The income of the company in 1880 was $8,964,729, an increase over 1879 of $928,034. According to the present outlook the increase during the present year will be even greater than that of 1880, if such a thing is possible, and almost anything in the line of success seems possible to the New York Life Insurance Company, after the decidedly enviable prosperity it has already earned. The company has always employed none but the best men, has been exceedingly careful in taking its risks and placing its funds, and has invariably paid its losses promptly and in a cheerful spirit. Mr. LEVI PRESTON is the special district agent for Peabody. Messrs. A. A. Abbott and Geo. I. Winchester are the resident trustees.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

ADJOURNED TOWN MEETING.

The Voters of Peabody in Council.

ONE-HALF DAY GIVEN TO THE DISCUSSION OF THE WATER QUESTION, AND THEN LEFT TO AN ADJOURNMENT.

PROMPT TRANSACTION OF THE OTHER BUSINESS.

A large number of persons were present all day at the adjourned Town Meeting held last Monday. The day was as pleasant as could be desired, and the all prevailing interest, which had been awakened by the water question, called out the large attendance. As a whole, the transaction of the business and discussion went forward with very little friction and with a general spirit of harmony and satisfaction. Mr. S. C. Bancroft, as Moderator, called the meeting to order.

It was voted, on motion of Mr. F. E. Farnham, that the polls be open from 12 to 1 1-2 o'clock to fill vacancies, and that two additional constables be voted for at the same time.

Mr. Edwin Buxton was elected Pound Keeper, in place of Lewis Buxton.

Mr. Geo. Randall was elected Field Driver, in place of Robert G. Buxton, and Mr. Cyrus W. Hersey, in place of George Brown.

Mr. F. E. Farnham, for the committee to whom was referred the By-Laws in relation to truancy, would present their report, asking that the School Committee of the town be empowered to provide at the Town Alms House, or elsewhere within the limits of the town, suitable accommodation for the confinement, discipline and instruction of truant children. Report themselves in favor of the granting of said petition by the town, and respectfully recommend that said Committee be so empowered.

Remarks were made by Mr. J. P. King, who said the chapel at the Alms House, under certain conditions, could be used for that purpose.

Report was adopted by the town, after which it was voted that the substance of the report be incorporated into a By-Law, and a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to present the same to the Superior Court for approval, and the following committee were appointed: Frank E. Farnham, Stephen F. Blaney, James Fallon.

Mr. T. J. Relihan objected; thought this was only an experiment, and that one year might suffice.

The Moderator decided that it could be repealed at end of year if not a success.

Mr. D. S. Littlefield, for the committee to whom was referred the subject of a Telephonic Fire Alarm, said that the committee after consultation with Chief Osborne of Salem, and taking into consideration the cost it is the best system of fire alarm in use, and would recommend that a sum not exceeding $400 be appropriated for this purpose, providing satisfactory arrangement could be made with the Exchange. Voted to accept the report.

The committee to whom was referred the Revision of the By-Laws, recommended that a new edition should be printed, and a committee for the same be appointed. Accepted, and the following committee were appointed:—Henry Wardwell, Amos Merrill, Nathan H. Poor.

The committee to whom was referred the grading of Brown and the drainage of County and Lynn streets, recommended that a sum not exceeding $500 for that purpose be appropriated. Accepted.

The report of the Finance Committee, to whom was intrusted several articles of the warrant, was made by Mr. Amos Merrill, chairman of that committee.

Agreeably to the petition of Mr. Jonathan King, it was voted to consider each article separately. The articles and recommendations of the committee were then taken in order. Mr. Jonathan King wanted the appropriations of last year read with the recommendations of the committee.

It was voted, on motion of Mr. Amos Merrill, that that part of Article 7 relating to amount of money raised for necessary and usual expenses of the town, be laid upon the table until the rest of the report had been disposed of. The rest of the Article, in relation to delinquent taxes, was accepted, as recommended by the committee, without opposition, and does not differ from that of last year.

Article 8th. The committee recommended, and it was voted that the Treasurer hire such sums of money as may be necessary for payment of State Aid.

Article 9th, relating to compensation to town officers and firemen, was then read, and the committee recommended that the sum of $3,500 be appropriated as follows: To Town Clerk, $800; to Town Treasurer, $275; to Collector of Taxes, $500; to Overseers of Poor, (Chairman) $300, and each Assistant, $20; to Selectmen and Assessors, $2.50 per day; to Moderator, $5.00 per day; and to other Town Officers, not otherwise provided for, $2 per day; and that the sum $2,600 be apportioned to the Fire Department: To each Steam Fire Engine Company of 16 men, $240; to each Hand Engine Company of 40 men, $400; to Hook and Ladder Company of 25 men, $300; to Hose Company of 16 men, $200; Chief Engineer, $50; Assistants, $30 each. It was also recommended that an appropriation of $1000 for hose be made.

Mr. James P. King moved as an amendment that the Overseers of the Poor, outside of the Chairman, receive $19.99. This was not seconded, but caused a spicy debate. Mr. Amos Merrill thought probably the pay was small for the amount of service. Mr. John G. Walcott moved an appropriation of $50 instead of $20.

Mr. S. F. Blaney thought that $20 was enough. That it was an office any one should accept without pay; that it was a duty owed to the poor and the town, and should not be accepted for the pecuniary advantages, which he had reason to believe actuated a certain member to ask an increase.

Mr. King said he served not for the pay, but for justice for the poor of the town, and that he was always true to the town's interest; that it was personal spite that caused the remarks of the gentleman, and defied him to tell when he had not always considered the town's interest first.

Mr. John Linehan said: "If you distribute all your goods to the poor and have not charity, etc." He thought $20 not enough, and that a dollar a week was none too small. He said he didn't believe in Chinese labor; and that the night watch did not receive sufficient compensation.

Mr. Blaney regretted that there was any personal feeling, and denied it as his reasons for speaking. He did not believe it was necessary for the Overseers, when they visited the Alms House, to stay all the afternoon and wait for supper, when two hours would do all the work. He believed that Mr. King bought some hay for the town, but as it would benefit him he kept it; that the seller supposed it was for the town.

Mr. King replied that it was an honest trade. All that was bought for the town went to the town, and what he purchased for himself (a small amount) he kept himself; and told of other instances where he could have bought for himself and made a fair profit, but instead gave the town the benefit of it.

Mr. Walcott, at this point, withdrew his motion, but it was objected to by Mr. J. H. Thomas. Put to vote and lost.

Mr. W. P. Clark moved an amendment that the pay be $25, and it was so voted.

Article 10th, in regard to the manner of repairing the highways and bridges, was then read, and it was recommended that Wards 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, and that part of Ward 4 lying between Foster street and Tapley's Brook, be under one Surveyor, and that he receive $750 for his services. They would also recommend Mr. H. A. Besse for those wards; and that part of the article was accepted without discussion. And they would recommend that the rest of Ward 4 and Wards 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13, be under another Surveyor, who shall receive $2.50 per day, and that John G. Walcott be appointed; that the pay of Surveyors be taken from the appropriation for highways and bridges. Here considerable discussion ensued, and the annual fight on Mr. Walcott commenced.

Mr. Orlando Newhall thought Mr. Walcott had not done his duty, and said that a petition was signed by most of the property owners in South Peabody in favor of Mr. Marshall. Said that he would not deny that Mr. Walcott had improved the streets since he had charge of them, but at that time he had $100, now he had $1100. He said that the water was not taken care of, and that the culverts through which the water had to pass were so high that water would have to run up hill, and the water went over the road; that no regard was paid to where the snow plow made a path in winter; sometimes it was on the sidewalk, sometimes in the gutter, and often dangerous to follow. He hoped the recommendations would not prevail.

Mr. Lewis Brown hoped that Mr. Walcott would not be appointed, and made the same complaint about the water as Mr. Newhall, and cited instances where Mr. Walcott had neglected his duty.

Mr. Walcott then took the floor and occupied it for some time. He told his experience since he took the roads, and contrasted them with the present condition, and related the comments of Mr. J. B. Thomas upon his improvements. He did not deny that he had begun jobs and not finished them, but he had to come inside of the appropriation. He told about a job begun last year that he would finish this year. Said that he left the gutters in good condition, but certain gentlemen let down water from a swamp, and that was where the water referred to by Mr. Brown came from. Said that by his building the roads he had saved the town a large amount of money.

Mr. John Needham said that Mr. Walcott owed him for rocks which had been used for the town; that Mr. Walcott left it with a boy who knew nothing about it, and thus the amount of bill could not be determined.

The question was called for, and the recommendations of the Finance Committee were adopted.

Article 13th. To see if the town will appropriate money for a day and night police. The committee recommended that the sum of $5,000 be raised and appropriated for a day and night police.

Mr. John Linehan offered an amendment that the sum be increased $365, so that the night watch receive $2.25 a night.

Mr. Jonathan King said that a day police at $1700 a year was not necessary, also hoped the amendment offered by Mr. Linehan would not prevail. Voted not to accept the amendment.

Article 14th. To determine what sum be appropriated for support of schools. The committee recommended $23,200, and the unexpended balance of $233.91.

Mr. Amos Merrill said the extra appropriation of $500 asked for was for repairs of the school houses, which needed painting bad. This was adopted as recommended by the committee.

Article 15th. In relation to the money arising from surplus dog fund and Mass. School Fund. It was recommended that the money received be appropriated for support of schools. Accepted.

Article 16th. It was voted to authorize the Town Treasurer to hire such sums as may be required for the necessary and usual expenses of the town, payment of notes and demands when due.

Article 17th was then taken from the table, and voted to accept, as recommended by Finance Committee, by adding 10, which was voted for the Overseers of Poor.

On the Report of Trustees of Cedar Grove Cemetery, they recommended that the sum of $600 be appropriated. Accepted.

On Report of Water Board, they recommended an appropriation of $4,000 for running expenses and extension of works. Accepted.

It was also recommended that the undrawn balance of $1,888.74, appropriated for the improvement of Goldthwait's Brook, be continued. Accepted.

The following appropriations were recommended and adopted:

For support of Poor,	$7,200
Addition to Sinking Fund,	9,000
Board of Health,	200
Interest on Town Debt and income of Water Works,	2,000
Printing and Stationery,	700
Furnishing Edge Stones,	200
Payment of damage for injury,	1,250
Miscellaneous and incidental expenses,	1,200

Also that the financial year close Feb. 1, 1882, and that the departments do not exceed these appropriations.

On the question of High Service Water, Mr. Amos Merrill said circumstances were such that a vote could not be taken till after permission of the General Court was given to appropriate money, and that a special town meeting would have to be called.

It was voted, on motion of Mr. Geo. C. Peirce, to appoint Mr. William A. Osborne a Field Driver.

The meeting adjourned till 12 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The polls closed at half past one o'clock. A committee of three was appointed to count the votes.

Mr. Amos Merrill moved that a vote by ballot be taken upon the subject of high service three weeks from last Monday at four o'clock in the afternoon. He spoke at some length, setting forth the advantages to be derived from High Service Water. He was of the opinion that the town must adopt some method of High Service; that it was not so expensive as was at first thought; that a supply was needed in all parts of the town for fire and domestic purposes; that it was cheaper for the town to pump its own water than get it from any other town. Danvers hadn't the water to sell; we didn't want Wenham water under any circumstances, as neither Salem nor Beverly had a sufficient supply, and Peabody wanted more than either. He quoted from the printed report of the committee; spoke of the force in the different parts of the town; explained the use and purpose of a stand pipe, and said than in case of fire in the night the first supply would come from the stand-pipe, and within ten minutes time the engine at the pumping station could be at work. Should the recommendations be carried out the town would have an ample supply for twenty years. The committee had thoroughly investigated the subject and made a careful report.

A short discussion upon adjournment ensued, in which Mr. Isaac Munroe, Mr. Amos Merrill, Mr. C. B. Farley, the Moderator and Mr. D. S. Littlefield took part. It was finally voted to make it four weeks instead of three.

Mr. Jonathan King said he would take the opportunity to say: If we go into this lavish expenditure of money, $85,000 won't be enough; those living on the outskirts had the same rights as those living in the village, and the works would have to be extended till, like Beverly, we should be "heels over head" in debt; the whole matter should be delayed one year.

Mr. Isaac Munroe thought we could get plenty of water from Danvers, and wanted to know if the committee had a written answer from the Danvers Water Board.

Mr. Amos Merrill, in reply to Mr. King, said the committee had had a year to consider it already, and had made a careful report. In reply to Mr. Munroe he read a letter from the Danvers Water Board, in which they said they could not furnish the amount asked for.

Mr. Isaac Hardy thought that with what we already had and what might be obtained from Danvers, we should have enough. He thought $85,000 would not be enough, and that the present resources were not sufficient that we should secure the right to take water from Humphrey's pond, and connect with Spring pond. Thought that the committee to spend this money should be competent, and one that would act wisely, and one that was elected by the property holders of the town.

Mr. Amos Merrill said he had no doubt but what the business men wanted high service, as well as the families, and that high service in one part of the town and low in another would not do, but that would be the case if Mr. Hardy's suggestion was adopted; he said the expense in the future was simply a "bugbear." The works will pay running expenses for the next ten years; he did not believe it would do to run pipes in the West part of the town, where they are not wanted; that the present pipes are almost new, and are strong enough for High Service.

Mr. J. S. Needham thought the West part of the town would have to go dry and thirsty, while they pay tax for the water at the square. He objected to taking it from Humphrey's pond, and said that Lynn had found that they would have to carry a pipe under ground 40 feet for a mile, and it would cost them $60,000.

Mr. Chas. B. Farley thought our present supply could be increased by enlarging the reservoir and raising the grade of Spring Pond. Thought this could be done and come inside of the amount of money recommended by the committee; thought there would be required an additional expenditure within three or five years; that we could not make arrangements with Salem, and so not need Danvers water; thought the increase of takers under High Service would be very large, and that arrangements should be made immediately to secure the right to Humphrey's Pond as our present supply would not be sufficient, in five years' time.

Mr. Amos Merrill thought we should not want more water under High Service, and that the waste would be small; that there was a good remedy that the town would have to soon adopt—that of soon attaching meters. That he had already asked the right of the General Court to take water from Humphrey's Pond.

Mr. J. S. Needham was in favor of having the names of the committee cut upon imperishable stone, that they might be handed down to posterity.

Mr. S. F. Blaney, as far as he personally was concerned, hoped that some other committee besides the present Water Board, should be appointed to spend the money if any was appropriated; that no committee should spend more than was authorized by the town, and was sorry the same committee that made the report were not selected for this task; that he had confidence enough in the present Water Board to leave it in their hands to carry out the recommendations; that there were contracts with corporations, which had been made at low rates, and he had hoped to see them come forward and offer some encouragement; that $85,000 would not be the end of the expense; that we should want 50 more hydrants for fire purposes distributed all over the town; that the works would be self-sustaining; that it would be the wisest and best to introduce High Service, without regard to any pet theory; did not think it best to contract for to-day, but for years and an unlimited supply. Danvers could not supply us, but perhaps Salem could at a less cost; had thought the town would be annexed to Salem; hoped the Fire Department would not have to be diminished; perhaps we could do without one steamer, but must have horse hose companies.

Mr. J. G. Walcott thought that for $5000 he could flood the town from Humphrey's pond in less than five weeks; that the pumping works should be near that pond, and it would be for the interest of the town.

Mr. Isaac Munroe said that as a majority of the committee were not in favor of Danvers water before consulting with the Danvers Water Board, it perhaps had some influence upon that board; that probably the committee had a pet scheme of their own.

Mr. Geo. C. Peirce said that in consultation he never intimated to the chairman of the Danvers Water Board that the committee had any pet scheme, but told him that the town wanted water the cheapest and best way that they could get it.

Mr. Stephen Blaney thought there was no town that could show so good an investment as our present Water Works; he believed that if it was placed in the hands of a judicious committee, High Service would pay as an investment, and in ten years' time show a balance in favor of the town, besides having the best water works and the best water.

Mr. J. P. King said he heard something about a "pet scheme" and investigated, and found that Danvers could not supply the water wanted by Peabody; that the Danvers water was inferior to our own water which was the best in the state; that Brown and Spring ponds would furnish supply for 20 years, as they did not depend upon a water-shed.

Mr. Amos Merrill was confident that the place recommended for the pumping station was the best that could be selected

Mr. Jonathan King thought the report did not answer the purpose, as it said nothing of the cost of drainage, or whether the money was to be raised by direct assessment or by bonds, and the whole subject ought to be delayed one year, to give time to consider it and not vote blindly.

A discussion then ensued about the adjournment and the call for a special Town Meeting.

On motion of Mr. C. B. Farley, it was voted that the Report of the Water Committee be amended by adding the recommendation that in case the Report is accepted the recommendations of the report be carried out by the present Water Board and the committee who made the report.

A motion to reconsider the vote whereby the town appropriate $3000 for lighting the streets, was, after discussion, lost.

Mr. Jonathan King was appointed on the committee on a new Town Hall in place of Franklin Osborn, Jr., declined.

The Committee to count the votes made the following report:

FOR SELECTMAN AND ASSESSOR.

Wyman B. Richardson,	236
All others,	21

FOR MEMBER OF THE WATER BOARD.

J. E. T. Bartlett,	242
All others,	12

FOR CONSTABLES.

Chas. A. Weare,	225
Daniel Rahilley,	218
All others,	10

Voted to adjourn to four weeks from last Tuesday, that the polls be kept open from 9 A. M. till 4.30 P. M.

A Good Brand of Flour.

The Snow Flake Haxall, a brand of flour that has long had a high reputation for its excellence, is being brought prominently to the attention of families by Messrs. Schollar & Donnell, Dustin Building. The characteristic of this flour is that it is not pulverized, but it is granulated by being crushed by rollers; hence it is claimed that all the gluten of the wheat is retained, and that the result is not only a better flour, but one that will yield forty more pounds of bread per barrel than flour ground from winter wheat. The family man realizes the great difficulty of always getting a superior flour. Bread is the staff of life, and here is a flour that gives universal satisfaction, and Messrs. Schollar & Donnell pledge that it will produce whiter bread and more of it than any other brand. Mr. Schollar has been directly connected with the milling of this flour for fifteen years, and guarantees this flour in every instance. Mr. William Donnell has been handling this flour for some three years, and fully and unequivocally endorses it to the community as the best flour the market affords.—Adv.

Poet's Corner.

If I Could Keep Her So.

Just a little baby, lying in my arms—
Would that I could keep you with your baby charms;
Helpless, clinging fingers, downy, golden hair,
Where the sunshine lingers, caught from otherwhere;
Blue eyes asking questions, lips that can not speak,
Roly-poly shoulders, dimple on your cheek;
Dainty little blossom in a world of woe,
Thus I fain would keep you, for I love you so.

Roguish little damsel, scarcely six years old—
Feet that never weary, hair of deeper gold;
Restless, busy fingers all the time at play,
Tongue that never ceases talking all the day;
Blue eyes learning wonders of the world about,
Here you come to tell them—what an eager shout!—
Winsome little damsel, all the neighbors know;
Thus I long to keep you, for I love you so.

Sober little school-girl, with your strap of books,
And such grave importance in your puzzled looks;
Solving weary problems, poring over sums,
Yet with tooth for sponge cake and for sugar plums;
Reading books of romance in your bed at night,
Waking up to study with the morning light;
Anxious as to ribbons, deft to tie a bow,
Full of contradictions—I would keep you so.

Sweet and thoughtful maiden, sitting by my side,
All the world's before you, and the world is wide;
Hearts are there for winning, hearts are there to break,
Has your own, shy maiden, just begun to wake?
Is that rose of dawning glowing on your cheek
Telling us in blushes what you will not speak?
Shy and tender maiden, I would fain forego
All the golden future, just to keep you so.

Ah! the listening angels saw that she was fair,
Ripe for rare unfolding in the upper air;
Now the rose of dawning turns to lily white,
And the close-shut eyelids veil the eyes from sight;
All the past I summon as I kiss her brow—
Babe and child and maiden, all are with me now.
Oh! my heart is breaking; but God's love I know—
Safe among the angels, He will keep her so.

Two Pictures.

An old farm-house with meadows wide,
And sweet with clover on each side;
A bright-eyed boy who looks from out
The door with woodbine wreathed about,
And wishes, his one thought all day:
"Oh! if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I should be!"

Amid the city's constant din,
A man who round the world has been,
Who, 'mid the tumult and the throng,
Is thinking, thinking all day long:
"Oh! could I only tread once more
The field-path to the farm-house door,
The old green meadow could I see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I should be!"

Selected Story.

Ten Terrible Minutes in a Train.

One November evening, a few years ago, I had occasion to travel from Cannon street to Spa-road station, on the southeastern railway. It had been a cold, foggy day throughout, and there were comparatively few passengers. The compartment which I entered—a second class—had but one previous occupant, a stoutly built man of thirty-five or forty. He was attempting, with evident small success, to read a book, and he fidgeted about on his seat in rather a testy fashion.

Having a doubt as to the regularity of the trains on such an evening, I said: "I suppose this train stops at Spa-road?"

"Spa-road! Of course it does," said this gentlemen, with what I considered unnecessary vehemence. "All these trains stop at Spa-road."

"Don't thank me, sir," he said a moment later. "I only answered a simple question—a fool or a madman could do that."

Here the train slowly moved off, and the speaker, whose face I had not yet seen, resumed his efforts to read, muttering now and again an imprecation at the expense of the fog and the cold.

When we reached the glass dome of the borough market the train came to a stop, and for the first time I found myself in a position to obtain a good view of my fellow passenger. Hitherto he had obstinately kept his back or shoulders toward me. Now he threw his volume down on the seat and faced about. He was, as I have said, a man in the full prime of life, rather over the average height; he had broad shoulders, full chest and nervous hands of an athlete. The impression which his features produced was decidedly unpleasant. Yet save for the eyes, which had a peculiar and indescribable glare in them, the face was not an unhandsome one.

"I did not know that we were so close to the crystal palace," he said, brusquely.

"The crystal palace!" I said, in some surprise. "We are not near the crystal palace."

"The fog has affected your eyesight, my friend," was the reply. "Trouble yourself to look out of this window."

"Oh, that!" I said, smiling. "You like your joke, sir, I perceive. The Borough market must feel flattered, indeed, to be mistaken for the Sydenham palace."

"Borough market! Of course, it was only my joke," laughed my companion. But there was no mirth in the laugh.

He now took up his book again and made another attempt to read. Though he fixed his eyes on the page and even now and then turned a leaf, it was evident that his reading was little better than a pretence. Indeed, it was so dark in the carriage that to see the small characters in an ordinary volume had become quite impossible. While he was thus engaged the train reached London bridge. The moment we entered the station my companion, who had drawn near me, returned to his seat in the corner farthest from the platform.—From this he gazed with evidently eager interest on the people passing and repassing the carriage door. As at Cannon street the number of these was not great, and we were still alone when the train again moved off.

The moment we were outside the station a change came over my fellow passenger. He threw his book on the floor and rose to his feet. Hitherto I had, being pre-occupied with my own thoughts, given small heed to him. Now, without knowing why, I felt myself fascinated. There was a light in his dark eyes, an expression in his mouth which at once repelled and attracted me.

"Have you been much of a traveler?" he asked, suddenly. He was standing with his back to the door, watching me curiously.

"I have never been out of the island," I replied.

"Ah!" he said, "I have been everywhere — Italy, Russia, India, China, Timbuctoo, Ashantee, anywhere, everywhere; I have been near the north pole and quite at the south."

"Indeed, you must be a great traveler, sir," I said.

"I have never been to the moon. No man can be a great traveler who has not been there."

"Then I'm afraid that with the exception of those famous heroes of Jules Verne there are very few about."

"Just so, just so! And yet a trip up above this detestable fog beyond the clouds would be enjoyable. In a night like this it would be peculiarly so; don't you agree with me?"

"Not quite," I said; "for my own part I'd much rather be at my fireside."

"You would, would you?" Look at that, smell that, taste that cursed fog." He through open the window and certainly the fog which poured in was bad enough in all conscience.

"I grant you it is not pleasant, either for eyes or throat," I said.

"I knew you would," continued my strange companion. "Any one would be glad to get out of it. The man who would free you from it would deserve your thanks, would he not?"

There was light in the speaker's eyes which I did not like, and there was a movement at the corners of his mouth the opposite of pleasant. While not feeling the least dread of him, I was yet not without a strong desire to reach Spa-road. As bad luck would have it, while yet we had not made half the short journey, the train came to a sudden stop.

"Yes, he would be a public benefactor who would deliver the people of London from fog," I said.

"He would, would he not?" whispered my companion, eagerly.—"Then I am the man."

As he spoke he crouched down and looked up at me with a glare that made me start. He buttoned his coat and pulled up his sleeves, as he whispered again: "I am the man. I can free you from these fogs—I can free myself."

For the first time the thought now dashed into my mind that I was alone with a madman. I recognized now that wild light in his eyes, that strange twitching at the corners of the mouth. I do not suppose that I am constitutionally more timid than most of my neighbors; yet at this moment I felt a cold sweat break all over me, and I know that I looked eagerly out in the darkness, hoping that as now the train was slowly moving we were near the station. I saw only the thick fog and the feeble light of here and there a lamp.

Yes, the man was mad, raving mad. There could be no doubt about it. Only a maniac could laugh the mirthless laugh which now came from his throat, as he drew two steps nearer me and hissed at me: "We shall travel together to the moon. Adieu to the fogs; say with me, adieu to the fogs."

I was now erect watching my companion intently, nerving myself for a struggle, which it was easy to tell was approaching very near. I could easily see I was no match for such an antagonist. My only hope was that I might hold my own for the few minutes necessary to reach Spa-road, where plenty of assistance would be available.

"Your baloon would scarcely travel on such a night," with affected indifference; "the atmosphere is too thick."

"Too thick! Do you think so?" he said.

"I do. Consider the density of the fog. How can we possibly go through it?"

"Well, there's something in that," he said, sitting down. "Yet the effort is worth a trial. Yes, it is worth a trial!"

He sprang anew to his feet, and approached me. He threw out his strong hands and made a clutch at my throat.

"This is how we begin, this is how I get the gas for the trip. I kill you first and follow you." One shout I gave for help, but it was lost in the report of a fog signal; then we were swaying backward and forward in the car in a struggle which was literally for life or death. The madman's breath came thick and hot on my face, his strong arms held me in a fierce embrace. There was a fierce joy in his eyes.

The foam worked out of his mouth, and his teeth gnashed angrily against each other.

Life is dear, and I felt no inclination to yield mine without a desperate struggle. I tore my antagonist's hands from my throat, and for a moment forced him to act on the defensive. I shouted again and again for help; and how I longed for Spa-road no words can describe. The train was now running at a good rate, and I knew the station could not be far off. If only I could hold my own for one half minute all would be safe.

Pausing in his exertions for a moment the madman suddenly quitted me. Just then, to my horror, the train rushed through my station without even slacking speed. I was in the wrong train, and there was no hope of assistance till we reached New Cross. It was evident that my fellow passengers had not heard my shouts for assistance.

Without a word of warning my companion again threw himself upon me, this time with a fury so resistless that I was borne to the floor.

"We shall go to the moon," he shrieked, "I have a knife—we can cut our way through the fog."

I felt myself helpless. My previous exertions had exhausted my strength while that of the maniac seemed to increase with the struggle. Strive as I might, I was utterly and entirely in his power now.

How slowly the train seemed to move. I believe now that it was going at a good speed, but to me it appeared to progress at a snail's pace. And how curiously vivid were my thoughts. I saw the home where I was expected, the kind faces waiting to greet me. I wondered what they would say when they heard of my death. I caught myself thinking how ugly were the madman's eyes, and I even noticed the color of his necktie—blue with white spots. I no longer felt any inclination to shout for help. To all intents I looked upon myself as dead. I even began to think of myself as a third person, and to lament, in a philosophical fashion, the ill-fortune which cut off at the beginning of his career a promising young man. Then I remembered that I owed a shoemaker for a pair of boots, and I pitied the unfortunate tradesman for the bad debt he had made. While these and a hundred other thoughts were passing through my brain, it seemed to me that an age had transpired. In reality I do not suppose that at the outside more than a minute had elapsed since my unlucky fall. Suddenly, as in a dream, I heard the madman, who now was seated across my chest, hiss:

"We'll cut our way to the moon—my knife is sharp. Let's try it on your throat."

With curious deliberation he drew a strong pocket knife and opened it.

"All right, friend, eh?" he cried, laughing. "Now mind, do not leave the carriage until I have come up to you."

"I am swift," said I, and I declare I did not recognize my own voice. "If I go first, you shall certainly not overtake me; you start and I'll follow."

"Me start?"

"Yes, you're braver, stronger and you have the knife; you must go first to clear the way."

"Of course, I forgot that," he cried, almost to my horror, so utterly was I surprised. "Of course, I forgot that," he cried again. "I must clear the way."

Still sitting on me he deliberately drew the bright blade across his throat. In another moment I was deluged with blood. At the same time the knife fell from his nerveless grasp. To spring to my feet, to seize the open wound and press the edges together, were the work of an instant—though the sudden escape made me stagger. At the same moment we reached New Cross station, and a porter threw open the carriage door.

* * * * *

Fortunately, the self inflicted wound of the madman did not prove fatal. Ultimately I heard that the blood-letting had a beneficial effect on his brain. I discovered next day that he was a most dangerous lunatic who had managed to escape from a private asylum.

To my surprise, when I looked at the clock at New Cross I found that the journey from London bridge had not taken ten minutes. They were certainly the longest ten minutes I ever spent.

Miscellaneous.

There was a new compositor in the office this morning. He was a wandering "sub." After wrestling a few minutes with a "take" of manuscript, he put down his "stick," remarked, "I'm sick," slipped on his coat and walked out. A proof of his work was soon taken with the following result: "I can't read Chinese. The man who wrote this is evidently laboring under a fit of alcoholism. Before I would try to "yank" antimony from this manuscript, I would steal a jack-knife and make shoe-pegs at two cents a quart.—The foregoing confession I make in a moment of despair, after having turned this copy upside down, tother side up, and every other way. One way it is Greek, another some antediluvian dialect or Egyptian hieroglyphics from Cleopatra's needle. If you are after reputation, for Ch—t's sake, stop where you are. I go, I know not where."

☞ THE COST OF IT.—If the total cost of sickness simply in its business aspects were reckoned up, it would be found to be great enough in five years to pay the national debt. The merchant has a headache, from a fit of indigestion, and misses a good bargain. The lawyer does the same with a case. To say nothing about doctors' fees, etc., it don't pay to be even a little sick. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a friend of the business man, for it clears his brain. SYDNEY SMITH.

My first sight of Sydney Smith was when he called on me, under cover of a whimsical introduction, as he considered it. At a great music party, where the drawing-rooms and staircases were one continuous crowd, the lady who had conveyed me fought her way to my seat, which was, in consideration of my deafness, next to Malibran, and near the piano. My friend brought a message which Sydney Smith had passed up the staircase; that he understood we desired one another's acquaintance, and that he was awaiting at the bottom of the stairs. He put it to my judgment whether I, being thin, could not more easily get down to him than he, being stout, could get up to me; and he would wait five minutes for my answer. I really could not go under the circumstances; and it was a serious thing to give up my seat and the music; so Mr. Smith sent me a good night, and promised to call on me, claiming this negotiation as a proper introduction. He came and sat down, broad and comfortable, in the middle of my sofa, with his hands on his stick, as if to support himself in a vast development of voice; and then he began, like the great bell of St. Paul's, making me start at the first stroke. He looked with shy dislike at my trumpet, for which there was truly no occasion. I was more likely to fly to the furthest corner of the room. It was always his boast that I did not want my trumpet when he talked wth me. I do not believe that anybody ever took amiss his quizzical descriptions of his friends. I am sure I never did; and when I now recall his fun of that sort, it seems to me too innocent to raise an uneasy feeling. There were none, I believe, whom he did not quiz; but I never heard of any hurt feeling. He did not like precipitate speech; and among the fastest talkers in England were certain of his friends and acquaintances—Mr. Hallam, Mr. Empson, Dr. Whewell, Mr. Macaulay, and myself. None of us escaped his wit. His account of Mr. Empson's method of out-pouring stands, without the name, in Lady Holland's Life of her Father. His praise of Macaulay is well known; "Macaulay is improved! Macaulay improves! I have observed in him of late—flashes of silence!"

His account of Whewell is something more than wit: "Science is his forte; omniscience is his foible." As for his friend Hallam, he knew he might make free with his characteristics, of oppugnancy and haste among others without offense. In telling us what a blunder he himself made in going late to a dinner party, and describing how far the dinner had proceeded, and how everybody was engaged, he said: "And there was Hallam with his mouth full of cabbage and contradiction."

Nothing could be droller than his description of all his friends in influenza, in the Winter of 1832-3; and of these Hallam was the drollest of all that I remember:

"And poor Hallam was tossing and tumbling in his bed when the watchman came by and called 'Twelve o'clock and a starlight night.' Here was an opportunity for controversy when it seemed most out of the question! Up jumped Hallam, with 'I question that—I question that! Starlight! I see a star, I admit; but I doubt whether that constitutes starlight.' Hours more of tossing and tumbling; and then comes the watchman again: 'Past two o'clock, and a cloudy morning.' 'I question that — I question that,' says Hallam. And he rushes to the window and throws up the sash—influenza notwithstanding. 'Watchman! do you mean to call this a cloudy morning? I see a star. And I question it's being past two o'clock; I question it—I question it!'"

And so on. The story of Jeffrey and the North Pole, as told by Sydney Smith, appears to me strangely spoiled in the Life. The incident happened while the Jeffreys were my near neighbors in London; and Mrs. Sydney Smith related the incident to me at the time. Capt. (afterwards Sir John) Ross had just returned from an unsuccesssul Polar expedition, and was bent upon going again. He used all his interest to get the Government stirred up to fit out another expedition; and among others, the Lord Advocate was to be applied to, to bespeak his good offices. The mutual friend who undertook to do Capt. Ross' errand to Jeffrey arrived at an unfortunate moment. Jeffrey was in delicate health at that time, and made a great point of his daily ride, and when the applicant reached his door, he was putting his foot in the stirrup and did not want to be detained. So he pished and pshawed, and cared nothing for the North Pole, and at length "damned" it. The applicant spoke angrily about it to Sydney Smith, wishing that Jeffrey would take care what he was about, and use more civil language.

"What do you think he said to me?" cried the complainant. "Why he damned the North Pole."

"Well, never mind! never mind!" said Sydney Smith, soothingly. "Never mind his damning the North Pole, I have heard him speak disrespectfully of the equator."—From Harriet Martineau's Autobiography.

The eighty-seven persons now living on Pitcairn's Island have lately been heard from. About two years ago a crew of ship-wrecked sailors were succored by the inhabitants, and on the arrival of these grateful mariners in California, a quantity of money, clothing, and other things was sent back. A little girl who sent some books has received a letter from a child into whose hands they fell. The mother adds, in a postscript, an apology for the appearance of the letter, explaining that the little girl had never before written on paper, which is scarce on the island.

It is said that Bernhardt has 1,000 different smiles. "Well, I should!"

WHAT PLUCK WILL DO.—Few persons who use steel pens on which is stamped "Gillot" have any idea of the story of suffering, indomitable pluck and persistence which belong to the placing of that name on that article. A long depression in trade in England threw thousands of Sheffield mechanics out of work, among them Joseph Gillot, then 21 years of age.

He left the city with but a shilling in his pocket. Reaching Birmingham, he went to an old inn and sat down upon a wooden settee in the tap room. His last penny was spent for a roll. He was weak, hungry and ill. He had not a friend in Birmingham; and there was little chance that he would find work. In his despondency he was tempted to give up and turn beggar or tramp.—Then a sudden fiery energy seized him. He brought his fist down upon the table, declaring to himself that he would trust in God, come what would. He found work that day in making belt buckles, which were then fashionable.

As soon as he made a pound or two he hired a garret on Bread street, and there carried on work for himself, bringing his taste and his knowledge of tools into constant use, even when working at hand-made goods. This was the secret of Gillot's success. Other workmen trudged on in the old ruts. He was wide awake, eager to improve his work or to shorten the way of working.

He fell in with a pretty and sensible girl named Mitchell, who with her brothers were making steel pens. Each pen was then clipped, punched and polished by hand, and pens were sold consequently at enormous high prices. Gillot at once brought his skill in tools to bear upon the matter, and soon invented a machine which turned out the points by thousands in a time that a man would require to make one. He married Miss Mitchell, and they carried on the manufacture together for years.

On the morning of the marriage, the industrious workman made a gross of pens and sold them for $36 to pay the wedding fees. In his old age, having reaped an immense fortune by his shrewdness, honesty and industry, Mr. Gillot went again to the old inn, bought the settee and had the square on which he sat that night sawed out and made into a chair, which he left as an heirloom to his family, to remind them of the secret of his success.

The late Dr. Charles T. Jackson, one of the inventors of the anæsthetic agents, had a famous laboratory in Boston, to which one day—as Dr. Jackson was fond of narrating—a countryman came in with a handkerchief full of those yellow blocks called iron pyrites, saying he had found a gold mine on his farm, and would not take no for an answer. The patient chemist held some of the little cubes in his shovel over a blazing fire until the sulphur was disengaged, then put the smoking mass under the farmer's nose and asked him what that smelt of. "H-ll," was the somewhat hasty reply.

The newspaper is ubiquitous. It is everywhere, in every man's home, for a man has no home who has no newspaper. He may have a place to stay, and so do the Digger Indians. But there can be no home without a newspaper. There can be no business establishment without it. There can be no general diffusion of knowledge without it. It is life and light in the world. It moves the world in all its enterprises, in all its great philanthropies, in all its majesty of wealth and power.—Hon. Chas. G. Fairman.

"Yes," said the school girl who had risen from the lowest to the highest position in her class, "I shall have a horse shoe for my symbol, as it denotes having come from the foot!"

"Unnumbered summers lie within my heart," cheerily sings a Wisconsin young lady in the first line of a poem sent to this office. This is indeed good news. If the young lady will only come down here and lend us a summer or two, or even a warm spring, her memory will always be held in esteem by the residents of this city.

☞ DON'T BE SILLY.—Don't let a foolish prejudice against popular medicines stand between you and the health of your wife, child, or baby. It is always right to advertise a blessing. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a blessing. It has saved thousands, and it will help you. If you are sick and miserable, we advise you to spend One Dollar for this King of Medicines, and then write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y., as to how you feel. For troubles of the kidneys, bowels, liver and blood.

"My wife got mad—terribly mad—at me last night," said Ragbag. "She threatened to leave me and sue for a divorce, and, by Jove, I was awfully scared, for I think she meant it. But I had presence of mind. I said I hoped she would; begged, implored her to do so, and then she swore she'd cling to me till death, just to spite me. A woman is a durn curious critter to manage, anyway."

☞ "GROWING YOUNG AGAIN."—A gentleman, the cashier of a Western bank, who had used Compound Oxygen for a little over a month, says in a letter: "I gained eight pounds while I was taking it, and almost began to think that I was growing young again. As I had no distinct ailment, but only a general sense of good-for-nothingness accompanied by extreme nervousness and an inability to sleep long at a time, my case is not so striking as many others which I have read of in your pamphlet; but there must be multitudes in my condition who would use your preparation gladly if they knew of it." Our treatise on Compound Oxygen, which is sent free, contains a large amount of information in regard to this new treatment. Address Drs. STARKEY & PALEN, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia.

Little Gracie, who was quite familiar with the hurdy-gurdy and its simian attachment, but who was making her first acquaintance with the church organ, watched the player long and earnestly. Finally her eye caught the blower, pumping up and down in the background. "Mamma," she exclaimed, "that's the biggest monkey I ever did see."

Checkers is the oldest game recorded in history, 4,000 years. The Syracuse Checker Club has a list of forty members. Mr. G. Taylor recently won the championship medal in Chester, England. Mr. P. Arnott won the first prize, Mr. W. Davie the second, and Mr. A. S. McIntosh the third, in the annual tournament of the Caledonian Draughts Club in New York just closed.

We notice the following in an exchange: Mr. G. B. Haverer, Foreman N. Y. & N. H. S. B. Co., suffered for eight days with terrible pain in the back, almost to distraction, until he heard of and used St. Jabobs Oil, one bottle of which cured him completely. — Des Moines (Iowa) State Register.

The secret of the cold weather this season is out. It has been ascertained that Gen. Hazen, the new "Old Prob," began life as a plumber; hence his sympathies are with that trade.

☞ It is not the quantity eaten that gives strength, life, blood and health. It is the thorough digestion of the food taken, let it be much or little. Therefore, do not stimulate up the stomach to crave food, but rather assist digestion after eating, by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator. mar 23—1m

He opened the door cautiously and poked his head in, in a suggestive sort of a way as if there were more to follow, inquired, "Is this the editorial rinktum?" "The what, my friend?" "Is this the rinktum—sinktum—sanktum, or some such place where the editors stay?" "This is the editorial room, yes, sir. Come in." "No, I guess I won't come. I wanted to see what a rinktum was like, that's all.—Looks like our garret, only wuss. Good day."—Printer Advertiser.

☞ Ministers, lawyers, teachers and others whose occupation gives but little exercise, should use Carter's Little Liver Pills for torpid liver and biliousness. One is a dose.

THE SOUTHERN PIG.—"Our George" in the Belfast Journal, thus describes the southern pig:

One ought to see what the groundwork of all this pork business is. A wild hog down South is a wonderful creation to a northerner, who is accustomed to see hogs so fat that they can hardly walk. Well, I don't know as they can walk here, but they can run. See one broadside to and you would think it weighed 250 pounds, and let it turn about head on, and it looks like a strip of sheet iron stood up on the edge.—Nearly all the live ones I saw were black, and about as thick as a board, but when it came to annihilating space, I could see why they were made so thin. The air offers no more resistance to them than a tub of lard does to a cheese knife. I saw one run along by the side of the railroad track, keeping up with the train for about a quarter of a mile, when he suddenly thought that he would show us how a hog could run when he was so inclined, and, gathering himself up, he darted along by the cars, passed the baggage car, overtook the tender, gained a lap on the engine, and crossed the track ahead of it and ran into the woods. If he had kept that gait till we got into Washington, he would have been half way through Alaska. Probably next to the carrier pigeons, the Southern wild hog is the swiftest bird in the world.

YOUNG HUSBANDS.—During the past season we have had many marriages where the groom was not of age, and was earning, perhaps, only eight or ten dollars a week. He had no capital laid up when he entered the state matrimonial, and of course, depended on his mere bagatelle salary, never dreaming of drawbacks, in the shape of sickness, etc. This is eminently wrong.—There should be a law requiring a young man to state before court his ability to care for and support a wife, before he married her. The fact of the matter is that this business of mere boys getting married should be stopped. Many and many a time, after marriage, they have hard work to support their family.—They lose their situation, get ill, or something of the sort. Then they get into debt, never get out, live a hard, weary life, and heartily wish they had never heard of marriage. Love is all very well, but one can't make three meals a day out of it, and it won't pay house-rent, or board bills worth a cent. Some of these young worthies think only of the blissful future, with no storms, no heavy expense and all that. We do not desire to discourage early marriages, but do say most emphatically that the young man who goes into this business had better understand the cost, responsibilities and tribulations. And when they can barely support themselves, it is nothing but ridiculous madness to tie themselves to others. If the young gentlemen will kindly roll a little of the above into their cigarettes after dinner, and smoke it, they will find it to set well.—Bloomington Eye.

The following advertisements are taken from a San Francisco newspaper: "The gentleman who sat on a creampie in a Market street car is known to the lady who had just purchased it, and even though he may have no regard for the hungry orphans for whom it was destined, he is urged at once to remit $1.50 and the expense of this advertisement to the business office of this paper to save the exposure which will follow of his disgusting conduct." Right underneath it this Janus of a journal evidently accepts the money of the other side, as the subjoined will testify: "If the slightly intoxicated lady who allowed a gentleman to spoil a $10 pair of beaver pants by placing a lot of slush wrapped up in paper on the seat he was about to occupy, does not immediately remit that amount to the care of A. B., at this office, a full account of the affair will shortly be given to the press."

The cause of Lady Florence Dixie's abrupt departure for South Africa as war correspondent of the Morning Post was the receipt of a severe message from the queen, through the lord chamberlain, for appearing at the drawing room without the usual plumes and lappets prescribed by court etiquette, and an intimation that if she set any value on the queen's forgiveness she would appear at the next drawing room with the usual tokens of submission fluttering about her head and chignon. This Lady Florence refused to do, and to avoid any difficulty, started for the Mediterranean on the day before that fixed for the reception. There is much discussion as to how Lady Florence will discharge her novel duties.

Edgar T. Page, Esq., Druggist, writes us from Chicopee Falls, that Mr. Albert Guenther, under Wilds Hotel, has used that remarkable remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, for a severe case of rheumatism and it cured him, as if by magic. He also used it with great success among his horses, in cases of sprains, sores, etc., and it cures every time.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!
Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

In the Report of the Mass. Inspector of Fertilizers, its valuation is from $3 to $10 per ton higher than other Phosphates which sell at the same price. THE NEW YORK
EVENING POST
FOR 1881.
In Its Eighty first Year.
The character and objects of the Evening Post are so well known, that it would be enough, as a prospectus of the coming year, merely to announce that it will endeavor to maintain its position as the leading evening journal of the city of New York, but its proprietors hope, by renewed energy and enterprise, to render it still more worthy of the generous support which it has hitherto received from the public.
1. The Evening Post, for more than fifty years, has been devoted to that theory of politics on which our institutions are built, and which regards the government as the organ and representative of the whole community, and not of any class. By the fundamental law of its corporate organization it is bound to contend for the decentralization of power, for freedom of exchange in trade, for just and impartial taxation, for a sound hard-money currency, for economy and purity of administration, and for a reformed civil service, and to these principles it will continue to give an earnest, enlightened and unfaltering support.
2. In 1854 it took an active part in the formation of the Republican Party, to the measures and candidates of which it has since generally adhered; but it is in no sense the slave of any party organization. It holds that the highest duty of a good journal is to the community at large, and to parties only as they are subservient to the general good. While it has decided political preferences, therefore it has no political prejudices; and is determined to be fair and impartial toward all parties, and independent in its judgments. It means to make vigorous war, as it always has done, upon all public jobs, all corruption, all extravagance, all peculation, all rings, and all class legislation.
3. But the chief aim of the proprietors of the Evening Post is to render it a first class family newspaper, which shall not only provide the latest and fullest news of each day, but lend a special aid to all the best elements of civilization, to Literature, to Science, to Art, to Education, and to Innocent Amusements. Accordingly, it maintains intelligent correspondents, not only in our two political capitals, Washington and Albany, but in all the great cities of the Christian World. Its reviews of books have long since made a name for themselves; its theatrical and musical criticisms are full, discriminating, instructive and just; its financial and market reports are noted for their completeness and accuracy; while its miscellaneous departments have no superior for variety, freshness and general interest.
4. Every Saturday, to accommodate our advertisers, who are more numerous than those of any other New York daily journal except the Herald, we publish a supplement, which contains tales, poems, correspondence, extracts, and miscellanies of various kinds, and which is intended to anticipate the Sunday editions of the morning papers. It is furnished to our subscribers without increase of price.
5. The best things of our daily edition are specially prepared for our Semi-Weekly and Weekly editions, which supply to country readers all the news, with an abundance of other matter, up to the day of their date. We do not believe that any better papers for country reading are issued from the city of New York.

The Peabody Press.

Wednesday Evening, March 23, 1881.

THE NEW OFFICERS. — Mr. James E. T. Bartlett, elected on the Water Board to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Geo. C. Peirce, is a prominent citizen of this place, and is also well-known throughout the county. He has represented the town for three consecutive terms in the General Court, which is something unusual, performing his duties ably and creditably. Has served on the Board of Engineers, and at present is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Peabody Institute, and takes an earnest interest in the welfare of the institution. He is a native of Amesbury, in this State, and came to this town some thirty-three years ago. His occupation is that of a currier, and for many years he had charge of the currying department in the large leather establishment of F. Osborn Jr. & Co., but a few years ago failing health compelled him to relinquish active pursuits altogether. In politics Mr. Bartlett is a Republican; in religion he leans to Universalism, but in both politics and religion exceedingly liberal. Outspoken in his sentiments, and zealous in everything he undertakes, he is a useful member for any public organization, and we trust that he will be induced to accept the position to which he has been almost unanimously elected.

Mr. Wyman B. Richardson, elected on the Board of Selectmen to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Galeucia, was born in Woburn, where he learned the currying trade with Harris Munroe. In 1842 Mr. Munroe came to Danvers Plains, and Mr. R. came with him. In 1851 the firm of Richardson & Coolidge was established for carrying on currying in Danvers, the junior partner being the late Oliver B. Coolidge, Jr. In 1860 they removed to Peabody, occupying the shop on Foster street now used by Mr. Lewis Elliot. In 1869 they removed to Walnut street, where Mr. Richardson is still located in business. Later they associated with Otis, Doyle & Co., of Boston, under the style of Richardson, Doyle & Co. Mr. Otis retired, and in 1874 still more changes were made by Mr. Coolidge withdrawing, and Mr. J. C. McKay becoming a partner, with the style in Boston of McKay, Doyle & Co., and in Peabody, of Richardson, Doyle & Co. Mr. Richardson has never sought or accepted public office before, excepting a few years' service upon the Board of Engineers of Danvers, of which body h was Clerk. But we think our citizens have made a wise move in calling him to the front, as his long business experience and his interest in public matters will no doubt make him a useful official. In politics Mr. Richardson is a pronounced Republican, but is one who believes the public welfare above party exigencies, and will doubtless prove equally acceptable to all parties, as all united in supporting him with unusual accord.

MR. EDITOR, — At the adjourned town temperance meeting held this evening, it was decided to form a town temperance society; and a constitution was adopted, of which the following is the first article:

"Whereas, there is no genial organization for the rallying and utilizing of the temperance sentiment of this town:

Resolved, That we will form such an organization to be called the Peabody Temperance Union. That the purpose of this union is: First, to convince the public of the sin of intemperance by sermons, lectures and temperance literature. Second, to throw all possible safeguards about the young and the tempted, by circulating the pledge, and diffusing temperance sentiments among the people. Third, to enforce so far as possible the existing statutes, for the suppression and extinction of the liquor traffic.

That the only requisite for membership in the union is the signiture of each member to this declaration of our purpose."

A Committee was appointed to nominate a board of officers to report next Monday evening. After which short temperance speeches on the objects and aims of the society will be in order. It is hoped the temperance men and women in this community will rally round this society that much good may be done. J. T. CASSINO, Sec'y.

It is certainly to be hoped that the new Secretary of the Treasury will not bring to his high office the grade of financial honesty which has been practiced in his state, and against which as far as we know he has never as a public man protested. Minnesota is the only state of the North on whose escutcheon rests the stain of repudiation, and Secretary Windom ought to be something besides a representative of that kind of policy to be a fit leader of the great party that stands for financial integrity in the country.

The national Senate is now full. It consists of 37 Democrats, 37 Republicans, and 2 Independents. One of the Independents leans to the Democrats, and the other to the Republicans. Consequently, Vice-President Arthur has the casting vote, and so he is one of the most important personages in the country.

The second Murray Club social, held last Thursday evening, was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number who attended it. Refreshments were served about half-past ten, cake being furnished by members of the Association, and ice cream by Nador & Goodwin. About $75 have been realized from the two assemblies.

G. A. R.—The next meeting of Union Post 50, G. A. R., will be next Monday evening, when the lady friends of the Post are invited to be present. Mr. C. L. Walker of Salem, will give a stereopticon exhibition, and there will be readings, vocal and instrumental music.

In the Legislature, yesterday, the committee on public health reported a bill authorizing the town of Peabody to improve its water works and increase its water supply, and allowing it to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $100,000 for that purpose.

The Hawthorne Bicycle Club of Salem have elected their officers for the ensuing year. Among them we notice former residents of Peabody: Mr. Geo. A. Lawrence, Vice President, and Mr. Lucius B. Packard, Captain.

Messrs. Schollar & Donnell have put in a new fire-proof, burglar-proof, round-cornered, solid-welded, wrought-iron combination lock safe, made by E. R. Morse & Co.

The Naumkeag Uniformed Patriarchs' annual ball will be given at Hamilton Hall, Salem, next Friday evening, and promises to be a brilliant affair.

The Salem Post has got a new office, and will hereafter do their own press-work. Glad of it, Charles, hope you will succeed.

Among the Farms.

NUMBER THREE.

An invitation to ride with the Professor is perfectly irresistible. A third one came to us Tuesday afternoon, so earnest and polite that we cheerfully accepted it. This time the sleigh was laid aside, and "Groton Boy" was hitched to the magnificent new turnout which our friend has lately purchased. The style of this buggy is of the latest "Monroe" pattern, different from anything we have ever seen; in a word, a happy combination of the antique and modern, elaborately upholstered and provided with the latest improvements in ventilation. Such was our equipage. Our destination was the farm of General Sutton in Ipswich, but we did not reach there. The County House did not bring us up, but the Dane farm in Hamilton did. We arrived there about ten o'clock, thinking to stop a few moments and then proceed on our journey. In this calculation we were happily disappointed. This farm is now owned and improved by the heirs of the late Donald McKay, the distinguished ship builder, who pursued his occupation in East Boston, where it will be remembered he built the clipper "Great Republic," the largest ship in the world. This was the crowning effort of his life, the great masterpiece of his mechanical skill. He had previously built the "Flying Cloud." This clipper on her first passage from New York to San Francisco made the quickest time on record. Her passage was made in 89 days; she ran 374 geographical miles in 24 consecutive hours. This triumph did not satisfy the aspirations of Mr. McKay. He was determined to make a nobler effort, to excel himself, if possible, and he accomplished his purpose. He accordingly designed the "Great Republic," a ship of 4000 tons register, and full 6000 tons stowage capacity. Her length is 325 feet, width 53 feet, whole depth 39 feet.

To give in minute detail every part of this splendid ship would be tiresome to the reader, suffice it to say, that there were used in her construction 1,650 knees; hard pine, 1,500,000 feet; white oak, 2,056 tons; iron, 336 1-2 tons; copper, exclusive of her sheathing, 56 tons; number of days' work upon her hull, 50,000; yards of canvas in a suit of sails, 15,653. A crew of 100 men and 30 boys are required to sail her. In 24 consecutive hours she ran 430 geographical miles, and in 10 consecutive days sailed 3144 miles. Such is the "Great Republic"—the ship of ships. She is a monument of the skill and genius of her builder, and an honor to our common country. Mr. Mckay has passed from the scenes of his toil, wreathed with laurels and crowned with victory. His mantle has fallen upon his son, Mr. Lawrence McKay, who seems to have inherited his father's matchless qualities of perseveranee and skill, in an eminent degree, although displayed upon a different field of action. It is fitting that this young man should be the immediate successor of Francis Dane, in the management and improvement of this princely estate.

This farm contains 250 acres in a high state of cultivation. From the meadow land vast quantities of muck are drawn and put into the barn yard and cellar, to be converted into manure. The manure is spread broadcast upon the land, and plowed or harrowed in. In the hill or drill is put a quantity of Ames' unexcelled "Bone Fertilizer." In this way large crops of corn and potatoes are obtained. Last year Mr. McKay raised 1500 bushels of very fine potatoes, 3000 baskets of superior corn, several tons of Hungarian grass, where this phosphate was used. He purchased last year of Mr. Ames seven tons. So well is he satisfied with its results that he will use no other commercial fertilizer upon the farm. He declares it is the best in the market. We found thirty cows and heifers and six horses in the barn. The buildings upon the farm are: A manure shed nearly 100 feet long by 30 wide; a sheep barn 100 feet by 30, with an expensive cupola upon the roof, from which an extensive view of the surrounding country can be obtained; a hen house 100 feet by 20, lathed and plastered, with the floor and walks cementted, (this building cost $5,000); cattle and horse barn 80 feet by 40, furnished with all the modern improvemens. To this is attached the carriage house, tool room, store-rooms of various kinds, engine room, and several sleeping and sitting rooms, all of which are finished in a superb manner with chestnut and hard pine. Upon the farm are 500 pear trees and a large number of apple trees. The buildings and surroundings are all lighted by gas, which is manufactured upon the farm. The face wall upon the highway is two thousand feet in length, of solid masonry. The wall around the cow yard is of the same material and description, built by the master mason of the Cathedral in Boston, and costing $1,000. This peculiarity characterizes all of Mr. Dane's improvements here. They have been done in the most solid, durable and workmanlike manner. Last, but not least, comes the old homestead, which has been converted into a splendid mansion, surrounded by an extensive lawn. Mr. Dane expended upon this place, the home of his childhood, vast sums of money in adorning and beautifying it. He lived but a few years to enjoy its tranquility and repose. It has passed into other hands, but the same princely munificence, the same generous hospitality characterizes it now as in the palmiest days of Francis Dane.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

PEABODY INSTITUTE.—The annual meeting of the Trustees of the Peabody Institute was held last Monday evening. Hon. A. A. Abbott was chosen President; Mr. Alex. B. Merrill, Secretary; and Mr. George A. Osborne, Treasurer. A Finance Committee was chosen, consisting of the following gentlemen: Warren Shaw, Wm. F. Wiley, Alex. B. Merrill, F. Osborn, Jr., Kendall Osborn. Also a Building Committee: J. E. T. Bartlett, E. Pope Barrett, Geo. Upton. Mr. John McKean was elected Janitor, in place of Mr. Drown—who has filled the unexpired term of the late Mr. John H. Teague—receiving 6 out of 11 votes. It was voted that the Janitor's salary be $600; that $4,000 be appropriated for the use of the Lyceum and Library Committee, and that $10,000 be added to the insurance on the books in the Library.

The following gentlemen were chosen a Lyceum and Library Committee:—Thos. M. Stimpson, Frank C. Merrill, Thos. J. Carroll, J. W. Upton, George M. Foster, James N. Ham, *Henry Wardwell, G. Fred Osgood, *Alonzo Raddin, *Orville B. Chadwick, *Theodore M. Osborne, *Francis H. Appleton. Those marked with a star are new members.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The eighth meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held March 18, the President presiding. The subject for discussion was "Manures and Fertilizers, their applications and results." The first speaker, Mr. Bowman Viles, gave at some length an interesting account of his practical experience with their uses, the results derived from them, etc. Mr. James P. King gave in detail at some length his practical experiences with several kinds of composts and fertilizers. Rev. Mr. Spaulding also gave some interesting remarks upon the subject. The Secretary read an essay, written by Mr. F. H. Appleton, upon the above subject, which is of such great importance to most successful cultivation. Subject for the next meeting, which is to be held Friday evening, March 25th, is "Ensilage." All interested are invited to attend with their ladies.

SAD ACCIDENT.—Last Monday noon as Mr. George Bushby, one of the drivers from Bushby & Co.'s, was exercising his horse, the animal in a playful mood turned upon him and kicked him full in the face, breaking both the upper and lower jaws, and causing a contused wound on the forehead. Dr. George S. Osborne was called, and with Dr. Shreve of Salem, who was called in consultation, did all that could be done for him. A portion of his jaw with five teeth was removed, and the under jaw wired in position. At present he is doing well, with the chances in his favor for recovery, which we hope we shall soon have the pleasure of announcing.

POLICE NOTES.—March 18th. Geo. L. Trask, for disturbance of the peace, was sentenced to 2 months in the House of Correction.

Thos. Myers, for drunkenness, paid a fine of $1.00.

March 23d. Sarah Toomey came up again for drunkenness, and was sentenced to 6 months in the House of Correction. She appealed.

We learn from Childhood's Appeal, a neat little paper published by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, that the sum of $183.11 was contributed by Peabody, in aid of the society, at its recent fair. Also at the children's table the number of children contributors from this town was 34.

Vacant houses are very scarce in town. Vacant lots admirably situated for building purposes are very numerous, and it seems as if there ought to be enterprise enough in the owners and capitalists to improve the property and secure a handsome return for their investment.

The mud was very plentiful on Sunday, and overshoes began to slip off at the heel, and as a Western paper would say, "the mud stuck close as an exoduster to the relief warehouse."

Mr. John G. Walcott was present at the annual meeting of the milk association, held in Saunders Hall, Lawrence, yesterday, and made an address, giving his experience with ensilage.

Mr. Charles A. Weare, one of the new Constables, is a student in Messrs. Bancroft & Farnham's law office.

Mr. James P. King of this town spoke before the Farmers' Institute at Town Hall, Ipswich, last week.

Hardware at A. H. Whidden's.—Adv.

We don't like the looks of the crowd of loafers who are to be found on the corner and in front of Pickering's store every evening, so that ladies and gentlemen have to pass between the files on either side when going to and from the Post Office. Once was the time that the police did not allow it, and certainly it is embarrassing to ladies to be obliged to hear the profanity and vulgar remarks which are often used. It is a nuisance that can easily be remedied by the police, if they would give them the simple advice—"Move on."

P. S.—Since the above was in type, we learn that there is no law giving the police authority, as stated above, except to keep a passage clear. We hope he Committee on By-Laws will take this matter into consideration when they revise the By-Laws of the town.

The second meeting of the Essex County Universalist Sunday School Union was held at the First Universalist Church, Lynn, during the afternoon and evening of Wednesday last. The subject for discussion in the afternoon was "The Sunday School as a Missionary Power," and in the evening the topic for discussion was "What the Sunday School Ought to do." There was an attendance of five hundred.—The topics were ably discussed, and remarks were made at both sessions by Rev. G. M. Harmon and Mr. Amos Merrill of Peabody. The next meeting will be held at Gloucester on the first Wednesday of June.

The alarm of fire last Thursday evening at about 7.30 o'clock, was caused by a slight fire at the morocco factory of Mr. Geo. C. Clerk on Spring St. The fire caught near the boiler, and was extinguished without the aid of the department.

A second alarm was given about midnight, in response to Newburyport's call for assistance. Chief Engineer Littlefield sent Steamer No. 1 to Salem to be despatched to Newburyport. But a telegram was received in Salem saying that the assistance of Peabody was not required.

Mr. John McKean, the newly elected Janitor of the Peabody Institute, held that position during the latter part of Mr. Teague's illness to the satisfaction of the Board of Trustees; but immediately after the death of Mr. Teague, when it was necessary to take action in regard to hiring a new Janitor, Mr. McKean was not elected because it was understood that he was not a citizen of the United States. In this action the Trustees were unanimous. Since then we understand that Mr. McKean has taken the necessary steps to become a citizen.

We have already received the first installment of Spring poetry. Owing to the fact that our office devil has heart disease we dare not publish it. We give an extract:

"In the gentle Spring time maidens fair
Let the balmy zephyrs play 'mid their hair,
And to babbling brooks on the wind's
wings they ride,
And, like settin' hens in a hay-mow, hide.'

If the author of this poetry is hiding in a hay-mow, for heaven's sake don't disturb her on any condition.

Mr. Chas. A. Sanger and wife celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage last Wednesday evening, by a tin wedding. The occasion was a pleasant one, and everything was done for the gratification and pleasure of the guests. Many substantial presents were received and a pleasant time enjoyed and mutual feelings indulged in for the future prosperity of the host and hostess.

An exchange says, to clean out a stove pipe, place a piece of zinc on the live coals in the stove. The vapor produced by the zinc will carry off the soot by chemical decomposition. Persons who have tried the process claim hat it will work every time.

The eighth wonder of the age is that Messrs. Schollar & Donnell can sell genuine Java Coffee for 25 cents per lb. They have already disposed of their first great invoice, and are now offering the second invoice, which is better than the first.—Adv.

We quote: "There was evidently enough left to most thoroughly accomplish the purpose of the article. We were obliged to strike off a second edition of it." Can it be that the purpose of that "solid" column was to sell papers?

The A. H. B. Association held a supper in their hall last Thursday evening, which was largely attended. This is a much better way of celebrating St. Patrick's Day than holding those useless parades, now fast going out of use.

The annual Fair and Festival of the Ladies' Social Circle was held in the vestry of the South Church, last Wednesday evening. The attendance was unusually large, and the proceeds netted some $290.00.

Colognes and Hair Brushes, Imperial French Blacking, best in the market. Sold at G. Steven's.—Adv.

A LEG ON A "TEAR."—Major Todd of our town lost his right leg at the battle of Fredericksburg, and some time ago he purchased an artificial leg from a man in Washington. It contained a system of springs, which enabled the major to use it in such a natural manner that when he was walking along the street noboby would for a moment suppose that he had not both of his own legs.

On Sunday, while the major was on his way to church, he slipped upon the ice and gave the store leg a severe wrench. He must have dislocated some of the springs; for after reaching the church and taking his seat, and while the clergyman was reading the scriptures, the leg suddenly flew up and rested on the back of the seat in front of him. The congregation looked at him in amazement, and he grew very red in the face. As soon as he took it down it jumped up again and wiggled about on the back of the pew, finally kicking Mrs. Thompson's bonnet to rags. Then the major suppressed it again, and held it down, but it instantly began a convulsive movement in his own pew, during which it upset the stools, plunged around among the hymn books and hats, and hammered the board beneath the seat until it made such a racket that the minister had to stop. The sexton came rushing in to see what was the matter, and the major, after explaining the difficulty in a whisper, asked the sexton to let him lean on him while he charged on the front door. As soon as the major got into the aisle, that dislocated leg kicked the sexton sixteen or seventeen times in a most insolent manner, varying the exercise by making eccentric swoops off to one side, during which it kicked eight of the high hats at the pew doors into black silk chaos.

By the time the major reached the vestibule the leg had become perfectly reckless. It flew up before and it flew up behind. It butted against the good leg and darted out sideways, and described circles and tried to insert its toes in the major's coat-tail pockets, and to whack him on the nose. When the sexton came with a hack and put the major in it, the leg banged through the window glass, and when the driver got down to see about it, brandished itself in his face, and concluded the exercise by planting a powerful blow in his stomach. Then the major told the driver that he would give him ten dollars to take the leg off and the driver accepted the offer. For several minutes it eluded his efforts to catch it as it danced about, but he finally got hold of it and hung on, while the major tried to unbuckle the straps. Then it came off and rolled the driver in the mud. He got up to watch it. It writhed and kicked, and jumped and throbbed and hopped; and whenever it could would make a dash to one or the other to give it full play. Finally Ben Woolley set his dog on it, and a most exciting contest ensued, the leg two or three times running off with the dog; and it seemed likely that the dog would get whipped. Mr. Woolley got a crow-bar and aimed a blow at the leg. But he missed it and nearly killed the dog. As soon as the dog retired Mr. Woolley whacked it again and burst it into flinders, and then there was peace. The major drove home and got his crutches, and since then he has confined himself to the use of a wooden leg without springs.

The proneness, not to use a stronger word, of merchants to advertise in every little catch-penny affair in the shape of a special publication, is well known and realized by all proprietors of legitimate newspapers. It is not surprising, therefore, to note the appearance of a little weekly sheet on Chapel street, yesterday, well filled with the advertising favors of many merchants of respectability and character. The sheet itself is filled with personal gossip of the most scurrilous sort, scarcely an item in it not being open to a libel suit for defamation. Not one advertiser in ten represented in its columns, would knowingly have patronized a publication of such low character, but the importunities of the irresponsible canvasser have caught them in the most disreputable company. The class of people who buy a paper of such character is not the class of people that are purchasers to any great extent of their wares and they are not persons with families to supply with the necessities or the luxuries of life. They are an unthinking class of young people, generally, who are much more apt to have the necessities of life supplied them by parents or guardians. The moral of this is simple and plain: Patronize the legitimate and well established newspaper, and you will never find your advertisement inserted beside a column of slanderous items that will make all clean-minded and sensible men and women blush for shame.—New Haven Register.

SLIGHTLY PREVARICATING.

Old Barty Willard was a wheelwright by trade, and though an excellent workman, was remarkable for his habit of procrastinating. He would promise, and then break his engagement over and over again with as little scruple and as many "positively lasts" as a theatrical star. Having pledged his word to a very urgent customer, for the third time, he would have his cart done by a certain day, Barty again failed to keep his engagement, and, on the arrival of the owner, the cart was still unfinished.

"Well," says the customer, "you have got my cart done by this time, of course."

"Yes," said Barty, "I had done the work, and supposed it was quite ready for you, when I discovered that I had made a mistake—a very unaccountable mistake—that will put me back a fortnight."

"Ah, indeed," said the customer; "what's the trouble?"

"Why, you see," said Barty, with great gravity, and an air of extreme vexation, "you see I have made a mistake—I never made such a blunder before in my life—I have committed the ridiculous mistake of making both wheels for the same side; they are both off wheels."

"Is it possible?" said the customer, who was thoroughly mystified, and allowed Barty another fortnight to finish the cart.

THE RAMBLING RAVEN.

A few years ago a gentleman near Chapel-le-Frith, in Derbyshire, (England) took a young raven from its nest, and kept it in an outbuilding for some months; its wings were then clipped, and it was allowed to go at large. It soon became known for a mile around, regularly visiting every farmhouse within that distance whenever a pig was killed, when it was always rewarded with some tit bits. After the death of its owner, the raven was given to a surgeon, resident in Stockport, Cheshire, who kept it chained by the leg for about twelve months; he then gave it its liberty, and as before, it wandered about near home, but not with the same success, for its thigh was one day broken by some idle, thoughtless boys, who threw stones at it. The fracture was reduced, the raven recovered, and, then again took to rambling about for a few weeks, when it disappeared altogether, and was supposed to have met with an untimely end, when, about a fortnight after it had been missed, the news arrived of its safe return to its old residence at Chapel-le-Frith, distant fourteen miles, where it was allowed to remain, and where it lived for many years.

AN UNUSED BASIN.

Here is a story they are telling just now in London of a troop-ship: In the ladies' cabin were four wash-basins, one of which was much larger than the others. There were three ladies in the cabin whose husbands were about equal in rank. The women always think they have a right to presume on the rank of their husbands when taking choice of berths, etc., and there was a great discussion as to who was entitled to the use of the big basin. It was referred to the paymaster of the ship, who could settle nothing, and eventually to the captain. He gave a decision worthy of Solomon. After first asking them if they would abide by his verdict and not give any more trouble in the matter, which they readily agreed to do, he said he thought it was only fair that the oldest lady should have the biggest basin. That basin was never used during the whole voyage out.

SUPERSTITIONS ABOUT THUNDER.

A popular notion existed in the olden time that thunder prognosticated evil or good, according to the day of the week on which it occurred. If it occurred on Sunday, it brought about the death of learned men, judges and others; on Monday, the death of women; on Tuesday, it augured plenty of grain; on Wednesday, the death of harlots and other bloodshed; on Thursday it brought plenty of sheep and corn; on Friday, "the slaughter of a great man or other horrible murders;" on Saturday, pestilence and death. It was also a popular fancy that the ringing of bells in populous cities charmed away thunder.

GOOSE QUILLS FROM THE OCEAN.

One strange discovery of the recent deep sea dredging of Rhode Island was a worm inhabiting a quill like a goose quill. The quills were about a foot long, and soon after being taken out of the water grew so hard that they could be and were used for pens. They stood up in the mud at the bottom of of the sea. The worms inside were opal colored, and when taken out of their strange tenements glistened and presented a rather pretty appearance, so far as color was concerned. They were raked up by thousands, and none of the scientific men ever heard of them before.

SOME COSTLY DIAMONDS.

The diamond necklace which cost Marie Antoinette her head is in England, and is divided between two noble families whose ancestors bought the stones when the necklace was broken up after the revolution of '93. The Duchess of Dudley purchased the bulk of Eugenie's and Isabella's jewels when they were sold. The Countess of Caithness's jewels are estimated as worth $500,000. They include a splendid diamond crown, which, together with the fact that her ladyship is not a great beauty, has given rise to the joke—"She looks like a chandelier."

Everything good in man leans on something higher.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment, and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS, MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thigh-bone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Roudout, New York.

Anecdotes.

THE DANISH PRINCESS OF 1649.

In the year 1468, the Chancellor of Scotland, Andrew Stuart, was instructed by James III. to negotiate a marriage between the young monarch and the Princess Margaret, daughter of Christian I., King of Denmark. Christian I. was the founder of the illustrious house of Oldenburgh, whose descendants have ever since occupied the Danish throne. When the preliminaries were arranged, the king's brother-in-law, a member of the powerful family of the Boyds, was sent in a ship, in the autumn of that year, to bring the princess to Scotland, and in the spring of 1470 a Danish fleet was seen off the Scottish coast, bringing home the royal bride. The marriage was solemnized on July 10, 1740.

King Christian engaged to bestow with his daughter sixty thousand Rhenish florins as a dower; but owing to his being engaged in a war with Sweden, he was unable at that time to pay more than two thousand, and, by way of pledge, gave the Orkney and afterward the Shetland Isles, which he was never able to redeem, and consequently these islands became lost to the Danish crown. The marriage was promoted by France, which aimed at uniting Scandinavia and Scotland in a league against England. For this purpose Louis XI. effected a marriage between his daughter, the Princess Jeanne, and a younger son of the Danish King, Duke Hans. The princess afterward became the wife of the Duke of Orleans, better known as Louis XII.

A "SUMMER HORSE."

The blacksmith shops at the head of Griswold street had scarcely opened their doors yesterday morning when a colored man appeared at one of them leading an equine which slid and walked and hobbled by turns on the slippery snow. If horses ever live over a hundred years this one had passed that figure. His hair was long, one eye was closed, and he had so many lumps that it seemed useless to look for a sound leg.

"What I want to know," began the owner after he had taken four turns around a hitching-post with the inch rope used as a halter, "am about what it will cost to shoe dis hoss."

"Two dollars," was the prompt reply.

"For de lan's sake! but has iron riz up to dat pitch! I'll have to dwell on dat for a few minits."

He dwelt. He walked around his stead, looked him over carefully, and then said to the smith:

"Now see hyar. If you war me wouldn't you sort o' keep dis beast fur a summer hoss, an' do your winter haulin' on a handsled?"

"I would."

"Dat's what I war finkin' 'bout, and I guess I'll save him over till April, and call myself a hoss frew up the winter. Seems like 'stravagance to get butes fur me an' shoes fur him all at once. Hold up dar, Philanker—none o' your pullin' up heetchin' posts 'round yare."—Detroit Free Press.

AN ENGINEER'S MISFORTUNE.

"Every effort is made," said a railroad officer, "to procure trustworthy, faithful employes, but all kinds of deceptions are gotten up to throw us off. I have one case in mind. There is a rule on the road for which I labor which compels not only the conductor but the engineer to sign the receipt of all train orders. When my superintendent took charge he insisted upon having that rule adhered to, and in that way he ascertained that there was one engineer in the employ of the company who could neither read nor write, and he had been running an engine for fifteen years. He was a married man, and his wife was once a school-teacher, and through her efforts he was able to commit to memory the rules as printed on the time-cards, and he had them so thoroughly fixed in his mind that he could point them out on the card, but he was just as liable to do so with the card bottom side up as in any other shape. He was a good engineer but we were obliged to let him go. He went home very much chagrined, but went to work to learn to both read and write. He spent one whole winter at it, but he was too far along in years to be successful, and finally was obliged to give it up, and to-day he is firing on the road."—Albany Knickerbocker.

CHARLES II's STORIES.

That monarch had a custom of telling every day in the circle of a thousand trifling occurrences of his youth, and would constantly repeat them over and over again without the smallest variation, so that such of his courtiers as were acquainted with his Majesty's foible would instantly retreat whenever he began any of his narrations. My Lord Rochester, being with him one day, took the liberty of being very severe upon that head. "Your Majesty," saye he, "has undoubtedly the best memory in the world. I have heard you repeat the same story, without the variation of a syllable, every day these ten years; but what I think extraordinary is that you never recollect that you generally tell it to the same set of auditors."

The greatest man is he who chooses right with the most invincible resolution; who resists the sorest temptation from within and without; who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully; who is the calmest in storms, and the most fearless under menaces and frowns.

The truly great man is as apt to forgive as his power is able to revenge.

The road to wealth is paved with self-denials.

A Woman Lawyer.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, the able temperance orator and lawyer from Iowa, will speak in the South Church, Salem, Wednesday evening, March 23d, at 7.30. The following incident is told of Mrs. Foster:

Martin Keating, a Waubansia avenue saloon-keeper, was before Justice Scully yesterday, charged with keeping a public nuisance, under the statute, by selling liquor to drunkards. The court room was well filled, as it was understood that Mrs. Ellen Foster, of Iowa, the temperance orator and lawyer would appear for the prosecution.—About a quarter past three o'clock Mrs. Foster entered the room, and took a seat at the table with Mr. Paxton, agent of the Citizens' League. She is a tall, fine looking lady, with a kindly, smiling face, and she appeared perfectly self-possessed, notwithstanding her peculiar surroundings. She was neatly dressed in black, and wore a Paisley shawl. The defense was represented by Herr Wagner, the fierce-looking, waxed moustached barrister from "de Nord Seid." When he heard that there was a woman against him, he thought it a great joke, and chuckled to himself.

"Am I do unterstand, madam, dat you are de gounsel in dis case?" he asked, toying with the spear-like ends of his moustache.

"I am here to assist Mr. Paxton, sir. He represents the prosecution," said the lady, whereupon the barrister smiled.

From the evidence it appeared that an Irishman named Mago Sullivan had been in the habit of getting beastly drunk in Keating's place and going home and abusing his family. Mrs. Sullivan had written a note to the saloon-keeper warning him not to sell her husband any liquor, but no attention had been paid to it. A long story of family trials and suffering was involved and Mrs. Foster succeeded in making out a very strong case against Keating. Mrs. Sullivan, her two sons, Johnny and Patrick Sullivan, and Pat Doyle, a companion of her husband, appeared for the prosecution. Little Patrick Sullivan, a bright-looking little lad of about ten years of age, was objected to by the defense, they holding that he did not understand the nature of an oath, and the Justice questioned him.

"Where do boys go when they tell a lie, Pat?" asked his honor.

"They go to hell, of course," promptly answered the little fellow, and the objection to the defense was withdrawn.

"Did you see that lady before you came here?" asked the attorney, indicating Mrs. Foster.

"Yes, sir."

"Did she tell you what to tell on the stand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah, ha! Well, tell the Justice what she told you to tell."

"She told me to tell the truth," responded the boy.

Mr. Wagner made several objections to questions put the witness by Mrs. Foster, but in every case his objection was overruled, much to his disgust.—Finally he said that the lady was "too much for him," and he withdrew, leaving the case in the hands of his partner, Mr. Hendricks, who fared but little better at the hands of his fair opponent. The defense tried to prove the good character of the house, but without success.

The hour was late when the evidence was all in, and the arguments on both sides were cut short. Mrs. Foster made a powerful plea. She reviewed the evidence in a lucid manner, picking out the strong points against the defendant, and cited several decisions made in the higher courts in similar cases. She did not resort to the emotional, as it might be supposed a woman would, but made a plain, forcible, and clean-cut speech, taking advantage of all the weak points of the defense. Mrs. Foster has been admitted to practice in the Superior Court of Iowa, and is a lawyer of high standing in her State.

Upon the conclusion of the arguments Justice Scully summed up the case briefly, and said he felt it his duty to hold the defendant over to the Criminal Court in bonds of $200.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

OUR WATER SUPPLY. — The bill passed by the Legislature in relation to the Peabody water works is in substance as follows:

The town of Peabody, for the purpose of increasing the capacity and efficiency of its water-works, is hereby authorized to take and hold, by purchase or otherwise, such lands in said town as may be necessary and convenient for erecting and maintaining an engine-house and pumping station, and a stand-pipe or high-service reservoir, and any structures required in connection with said works; and on said lands may erect and maintain said works, buildings and structures, and any other appliances necessary and proper for said purpose, and may connect said works and structures with each other and with the aqueducts of said town, whether now or hereafter laid. In the prosecution of said work, the town may lay and maintain pipes or other works over or under any water-conrse, street, railroad, highway, or other way, or any land whatever, and in general may do any other acts and things necessary and proper for the carrying out of said purposes; and the town is also authorized to increase its supply of water, to take, hold, and convey into the reservoirs, aqueducts, or other works, the waters of Cedar Pond, and the waters of Humphrey's Pond situated partly in Peabody, and partly in Lynnfield, and the waters which flow into and from said ponds, and any water-rights connected with them, and may also take and hold, by purchase or otherwise, such lands around the margins of said ponds, not exceeding five rods in width, as may be necessary for the preservation and purity of said waters, and may also take and hold in like manner such lands as may be necessary for maintaining dams and reservoirs for the storage of said waters, and such lands as may be necessary for erecting and maintaining any works proper for the taking and distribution of said waters.

The town shall be liable to pay all damages sustained by any persons or corporations by the taking of any land, water, water-rights, franchises, or property, or by the constructing of any aqueducts, reservoirs, or other works for the purposes aforesaid.

For the purpose of defraying the cost and expenses which may be incurred in any work or taking of property under the provisions of this act, the town of Peabody, through its treasurer, shall have authority to issue, from time to time, promissory notes or bonds to an amount not exceeding one hundred thousand dollars, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six per cent. per annum, the principal payable at periods not more than thirty years from the issuing of said notes or bonds.

This act shall take effect upon its passage, and shall become void unless accepted within two years by a majority vote of the legal voters of the town of Peabody, present and voting.

WASTE OF BEEF. — A gentleman who has been in Montana for the past four months buying furs, states that the firm he represents has bought 18,000 buffalo hides during the fall and winter, and he says 83,000 have been purchased by the buyers at Miles City during the past fall and winter, and the number cannot possibly be bought again in one season, as they have been slaughtered by the wholesale. The gentleman gives it as his opinion that of the 80,000 killed near Miles City this season, all but 20,000 were slaughtered for their hides alone. Although the law of Montana prohibits the killing of buffalo for their hides only, this wholesale slaughter continues, and to those on the extreme front is quite a source of revenue, as the hides have brought this season from $2.25 to $2.75 each. It is a shameful waste that these animals should be killed for their hides only, and that the carcasses of 60,000 animals should be left to decay on the prairies of the West when so many thousands in the larger cities are suffering for the want of food.

PAPER FESTIVAL.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

One of the most novel entertainments of the season was held at Upton's Hall last Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent Society. The principal feature of the affair was the prominence of PAPER in the costumes of the ladies and gentlemen, and decorations of the hall. The dresses of the ladies were especially pretty, showing great taste and variety in the selection and combination of colors.—Twelve long tables temptingly spread with the choicest viands, and adorned with bouquets in which paper flowers rivaled nature in perfection, offered the 220 guests present a beautiful and bountiful repast. After a prayer by the Rev. W. G. Sperry, the good things provided for bodily refreshment were thoroughly enjoyed; indeed, it would be difficult to imagine a more satisfactory banquet. And as though this were not sufficient, several toasts, prepared by the very acceptable toast-master, Mr. James Nelson Ham, and most happily responded to by those called upon, afforded a rich treat. The exercises were opened by the toast-master, as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen—We have met this evening to do honor to the Benevolent Society, or rather to express our high appreciation of its noble endeavors. For many years this society has dispensed its charities with a generous hand, and has ever been ready to answer the cry of suffering and to relieve the distressed. In the name of the assembled guests, I propose the welfare and prosperity of the Benevolent Society, and pray that the generous citizens of Peabody may never allow its charities to be limited because of an empty treasury.

Mrs. George A. Osborne, the President of the Society, responded as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen — I welcome you all in behalf of the Ladies' Benevolent Society. I thank you for your hearty response to our call to come here and help us not only in well wishing, but in well doing. It is not needful that I should rehearse to you the origin or object of a society, which for more than three-score years has been a household word among the rich and the poor in this town, and which forms a part of its history. By means of it the Divine lesson is imparted, that "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And though the religious belief of its members may somewhat differ, we can join hearts and hands in Christian love and sympathy, while ministering to the wants of the poor and sick, the naked and hungry about us. And we are not unmindful of their welfare even in our social festivities, which gain for us power for increased beneficence. We cordially invite all to help us still further, by contributing their names to the list of members of this time-honored society, remembering that Charity is like the quality of Mercy: "It blesses him that gives, and him that takes." We are happy to welcome our friends and allies, who have honored us with their presence. from their own homes, from the world of History, the realms of Romance and Fiction, and from the heights of Mount Olympus.

Introducing "Jupiter," the toast-master said: "To participate in the festivities of this occasion we have with us ambassadors from many nations and peoples. Not even the cloud-compelling Jupiter, accompanied by several associated deities, could forbear doing honor to this occasion."

Upon this Father Jupiter, (R. H. Brown) resplendent in purple robes and dazzling crown, looked majestically down upon the awe-struck assembly. His imposing mien and ponderous thunderbolts filled every masculine heart with terror; but the feminine portion of the company were elated to hear him acknowledge the power behind the throne by the following confession: "As my wife, Juno, is of a jealous disposition, and requires my presence constantly at her side, I am obliged to go back to Olympus as fast and as soon as possible." Good-bye, Jupiter.

"Wisdom" was most admirably represented by Miss Hattie Hardy, in the character of Minerva, with her helmet and shield. Being a Greek goddess, she was not particularly familiar with the English language; but in behalf of the gods and goddesses present, thanked the mortals for the abundant feast they had so kindly given them, and assured them that it far surpassed the nectar and ambrosia they were accustomed to feed upon, on Mt. Olympus.

"Pluto" (D. Claflin) was unable to respond to his toast, as he had left his manuscript at home, and the telephone between Peabody and his sulphurous domain was not yet completed.

"The Eight Cousins" were very effective in their Highland suits, and introduced by the toast-master with the quotation from Miss Alcott's story of that name, responded according to their different characters.

Mother Goose sent among her delegates to the paper festival the all-subduing "King of Hearts," (F. C. Merrill). He was introduced under rather suspicious circumstances, but vindicated himself, and confidence was restored.

"The Queen of Hearts was making tarts
All on a summer's day,
The King of Hearts he stole those tarts
And took them quite away."

The King of Hearts was happy to inform the assembly that the tarts were on a tray, all ready for them to eat.

One of the first to come to us out of the region of romance was the "Lady of the Lake," (Gracie Stevens) very charmingly attired in Highland dress, with Scotch cap and feather. The introduction and response were both gems from Walter Scott's incomparable poem.

"Bo-Peep" (Carrie Clark) was such a sweet little shepherdess, in a pink and silver dress, that only sheep could have run away from her, and she responded very prettily to the toast.

"Folly," or the "Court-Jester" (Mr. Geo. C. Farrington) was well gotten up with the traditional party-colored suit and cap and bells. The response was in verse, as follows:

Kind friends, my folly in appearing here
I cannot hide, for you at once detect it.
And as for sp ehifying, I at once decline,
Of course it's folly for you to expect it.

I simply come here as an humble guest,
Clad in this raiment which is plainly seen;
And as an emblem of my company,
The color of my modest garb is GREEN.

I dare not aim at all the foolish here
My sharpest darts of wisdom and of wit,
Because, I see you squirm already there;
There is scarcely one of you but would get hit.

And then, besides, where ignorance is bliss
And it is really folly to be wise,
I think, kind friends, you all must feel
As though you dwelt in Paradise.

But to be serious, I give you here
The toast, "Dear Woman, who is ever free
In words of kindness and deeds of love,
Who is the strongest aid of Charity.

I give you Our Country and our honored flag
With all its glorious stripes and flashing stars
And as a patriot's toast I give you here,
Erin go Unum E Pluribus Bragh!"

And now I'll close my rambling rhyme,
Wishing you all true hearts and jolly.
And if you are disappointed in my speech,
You have simply reached the height of folly.

The toast-master's Shakesperean introduction of "Music"—"The man that hath no music," etc.—was responded to by Miss Maria Winchester, whose costume of blue and white was in harmony with the character. "Things are seldom what they seem," and as "Music" is unable to sing I introduce to you the Pinafore crew. And they sang well from the "Dungeon Cell."

Admiral—S. P. Chase.
Capt. Corcoran—Frank Taggard.
Ralph Rackstraw—Dr. A. M. Dudley.
Josephine—Helen Jacobs.
Buttercup—Mary K. Felt.
Hebe—Mrs. George Upton.

They sang delightfully, and were heartily encored.

Dear, sweet, Puritan, "Priscilla," (Alice C. Osborne) responded to her toast, with the well-known piquant question, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

"Edmea," wife of William Tell, was personated by Mrs. John Osborn. At the close of her response there were loud calls for William, but William had gone out shooting.

"Cleopatra" (Miss Anna Smith) was very attractive in an Egyptian dress of white and gold, and responded gracefully to her toast.

"Lord Dundreary" (Mr. A. H. Merrill) was as felicitous in his remarks, and as dextrous with his eye-glasses, as his famed prototype. His paper costume was as exquisitely fitted, and as gorgeous in color, as any English snob could desire. In response to his toast he paid a glowing tribute to the supper, "because it was so nourishing to the bwains."

"Maud Muller," (Lillie Sweetser) in a coquettish little dress, and a very clean rake, held the Judge in such complete subjection that she was compelled to respond for both. "It might have been" done better, but we doubt it.

"Rowena," one of Sir Walter Scott's loveliest heroines, was personated by Miss Julia Wilkins, who responded to the last toast of the evening by a simple bow, which was grace and dignity combined.

Later in the evening the attractions of music and sociability filled the upper hall with a large company, among which were seen the following characters:

Juno—Mrs. Henry A. King in white, with silver stars, crown, and peacock feather fan.

Ceres — Miss S. E. Perkins, white dress, trimmed with bunches of wheat and rye.

Prince and Princess of Orange—Mrs. E. C. Spofford and Master Harry Spofford, in black and orange.

Bella Wilfur—Miss Helen Poor.

Queen of Hearts—Mrs. F. C. Merrill.

Wilfred, the Black Prince in Ivanhoe—Otis Brown.

Rebecca — Mrs. Otis Brown, black and gold.

U. S. Major General—Wm. F. Wiley.

Japanese Princess—Mrs. H. C. Torr, with a dress of silver, and a golden crown.

Maid of Athens—Mary Eliza Osborn.

Lord Byron—Henry M. Osborn.

Undine—Mamie Harris, green dress, with white water lilies.

Spanish Knight and Lady—Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wingate.

Moorish Princesses — Miss Flora Howard, in green and silver, and Miss Maria Osborn, in white and gold, with their accompanying Princes, Mr. Charles O. Warner and Mr. Benj. S. Palmer, of East Boston, attired in corresponding colors.

Miss LaCreevy—Mattie Hutchinson.

Susan Nipper—Mrs. C. L. Sanborn.

Aunt Jane—a Quakeress—Miss Sadie Upton.

Flora—Miss Mary Proctor of Salem, in pink and wreath of flowers.

Florence Dombey—Miss Louise Osborne.

Psyche—Helen Brown, white dress, with silver wings.

Rose—the fascinating little girl whom the "Eight Cousins" visited — Miss Nellie Dodge, in white and blue. The cousins were all boys, viz.: Willie Plummer, E. L. McDonald, Willie Smith, Charles A. Proctor, Willie T. Howard, Perley King, George King.

Cinderella, with her slipper—Henrietta Winchester.

Red Riding Hood, with her basket and scarlet cape—Miss Batchelder of Lynn.

The Fat Boy.—Capt. W. E. H. Fentress of Richmond, Va., was a perfect success in this character; gotten up in strict accordance with the text; may his shadow never be less.

Misses Augusta and Ellen Proctor, Mrs. A. H. Merrill, Mrs. C. H. Haskell, Miss Story of Swampscott, Mrs. Plummer of Boston, Miss Mamie Clark, Mrs. Walter C. Merrill, Miss Clara Jacobs, and others whose names we did not learn, were tastefully attired in paper, but represented no special characters.

There were three clergymen present, viz.: Rev. W. G. Sperry, Rev. J. N. Hudson, Rev. G. M. Harmon.

Great credit is due Miss Nellie Crocker for the lovely flowers with which the tables were adorned. They were really works of art.

The affair was a success financially as well as socially, netting the Society about $100.00. Twenty-five new members were added to the Society.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The ninth meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, March 25th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, the President presiding. The subject for the evening was "Ensilage." The first speaker was Mr. John G. Walcott, giving his experience in feeding ensilage, also showing a plan of his silo, his method and results in raising his corn, and the filling of his silo. The speaker also imparted information he had received from other owners of silos as evidence to confirm his confidence in the use of ensilage. Mr. Benjamin P. Ware made a very appropriate address upon the subject, favoring the use of ensilage, and gave a description of a silo he is building on his farm. Rev. Mr. Spaulding also gave a spirited and jovial address upon the occasion, not fully committing himself in favor of ensilage. With the presence of the ladies and some selections rendered by the quartette, the meeting was one of the most interesting of the season.

By vote of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the following petition was submitted to the Selectmen last Saturday:

PEABODY, March 26th, 1881.
To the Selectmen of Peabody:

GENTLEMEN,—Believing that the liquor traffic is injurious to the morals, health, and business interests of our community, and that protection from its evils is largely in the hands of our Selectmen, we urgently petition the Selectmen of Peabody that no licenses for the sale of intoxicating drinks be granted by them during their term of office, and that measures be taken to suppress the liquor saloons of our town, as sources of corruption and wretchedness that should no longer be tolerated among us.

In behalf of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

M. M. CUTLER, Secretary.

Poet's Corner.

"Getting Along."

We trudge on together, my good man and I,
Our steps growing slow as the years hasten by;
Our children are healthy, our neighbors are kind,
And with the world round us we've no fault to find.

'Tis true that he sometimes will choose the worst way
For sore feet to walk in a weary, hot day;
But, then, my wise husband can scarcely go wrong,—
And, somehow or other, we're getting along.

There are soft summer shadows beneath our home trees,—
How handsome he looks, sitting there at his ease!
We watch the flocks coming while sunset grows dim,
His thoughts on the cattle, and mine upon him.

The blackbirds and thrushes come chattering near,—
I love the thieves' music, but listen with fear;
He shoots the gay rogues, I would pay for their song,—
We're different, sure; still, we're getting along.

He seems not to know what I eat, drink or wear;
He's trim and he's hearty, so why should I care?
No harsh word from him my poor heart ever shocks,—
I wouldn't mind scolding, so seldom he talks!

Ah, well! 't is too much that we women expect;
He only has promised to love and protect.
See, I lean on my husband so silent and strong;
I'm sure there's no trouble—we're getting along.

Life is n't so bright as it was long ago,
When he visited me amid tempest and show,
And would bring me a ribbon or jewel to wear,
And sometimes a rosebud to twist in my hair.

But when we are girls we can all laugh and sing;
Of course, growing old, life 's a different thing;
My good man and I have forgot our May song,
But still we are quietly getting along.

'T is true I was rich; I had treasures and land,
But all that he asked was my heart and my hand;
Tho' people do say it, 't is what they can't prove—
"He married for money; she — poor thing!—for love."

My fortune is his, and he saves me its care,
To make his home cheerful 's enough for my share.
He seems always happy our broad fields among,
And so I'm contented; — we're getting along.

With stocks to look after, investments to find,
It 's not very strange I 'm seldom in mind;
He can't stop to see how my time 's dragging on,
And oh! would he miss me, if I should be gone?

Should he be called first, I must follow him fast,
For all that 's worth living for then will be past;
But I 'll not think of losing him; fretting is wrong
While we are so pleasantly getting along.

INSCRIBED TO MRS. S. G. P.

"The Lord watch between me and thee, while we are absent one from another."

If sometimes you'll pause in the turmoil of life,
And close your heart to its clang and its strife,
And list to the voice so still and clear,
That it only speaks to your inner ear,—
So silently deep none other may hear,—
You'll know from the moments I've chosen a few
To bear in their passing a blessing to you.

And oft as you list to this inward voice,
May it bid your heart to look up and rejoice,
As it silently whispers your spirit to know,
That somewhere away from the pain and woe
That shadows your life as you onward go,
Is one fond heart, beating warm and true,
Lovingly, tenderly praying for you.

And may this thought be a cheering ray
To light your path on your onward way,—
Ay, be it the song in your sorrowing heart,
Till it grows to be of your life a part,
And gives to it ever a nameless hue,
That silently, somewhere, I'm praying for you.

"Fragrant Old Wood."

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

It is a cheerful and pleasant sitting room into which we invite our readers—not the modern fourteen feet square, box-like shaped room, paneled with narrow doors in inconvenient places—but a comfortably-sized, good-shaped farm-house room. The walls are covered with a cheap but attractive paper, graced here and there with agreeable, story telling pictures; drab curtains with their scarlet tassels drape the windows; a homelike carpet covers the floor, with which the simple, tastefully arranged furniture harmonizes; on each end of the mantel stands artistically wrought quaint vases filled with everlastings, and in the centre a little French clock; pretty home-made and other well selected ornaments deck the what-not between the two south windows, and on the opposite side stands a handsomely carved, old-fashioned secretary, graced by a well-chosen library; and in the centre of the room is a light table, covered with a garnet cloth, on which is always found the leading literature of the day. And now it looks doubly pleasant beneath the soft, steady glow of the Argand burner there, for it is the evening hour that we introduce you to this cheerful room and its occupants—whom we find in their easy chairs on either side of the table, and before a glowing open fire—Clara Anderson and "Aunt Persis," as she calls her companion, the one with some fancy knitting in her hand, the other with plainer work, but both idle, busy with their own thoughts as they listen to the dreary winds without, for it is a bleak, cheerless December evening.

Aunt Persis, though her years number upward of fifty, is yet a handsome woman, rather above the medium height, with classical features, straight, perfect nose, firm but loving mouth, clear brown eyes arched with artist-penciled brows, and hair to match, and her hands, though toil-hardened, are yet shapely and comely—a sensible, well-informed woman, firm in her principles and theology, true to herself, devoid of affectation, kind, genial and social everywhere, is Aunt Persis; and Clara Anderson is her fac-simile in all save looks—a delicate, slender girl with olive-tinted, oval cheeks, dewy, violet eyes, auburn shaded hair, and soft-muscled, fairy-like hands.

Much consternation and no little enviousness had been manifested among Aunt Persis' relatives when she chose Clara Anderson, no kith or kin of theirs, to be her companion and prospected heiress.

As now they sit together, idly busy with their own musings, Clara anon breaks the silence with the question:

"What is this spicy, pleasantly agreeable odor in the room, Aunt Persis, of which I have been dreamily sensible all the evening?"

"Only the scent of my well-seasoned birch which you thought I needlessly purchased last summer; but I had a view to these long winter evenings then," smilingly answered Aunt Persis; then, dreamily looking into the fire, abstractedly added: "How the wave of some well-remembered perfume, like a familiar line in poetry, or a strain of some half-forgotten song will involuntarily call up the memory of old associations and old scenes we had long thought lost in oblivion!"

"What is it, Auntie? What were you saying just now?" quietly queried Clara.

"Me, child! I was not speaking," surprisedly answered Aunt Persis.

"No fibbing, Auntie, you were surely saying something," demurely and with a positive shake of the head replied Clara; then added, more seriously, "What is it, Aunt Persis? I do not feel like working, and I am in just the mood for a story—and you have one I know; it is an eerie night and just the time to tell it," she coaxingly finished.

"Yes, love, my heart has a 'story,'" said Aunt Persis, "and the scent of this 'fragrant old wood,' of Emerson's, has brought it vividly to my mind, and, though I had not meant to tell it, yet, as I believe I have caught your mood, this and the night prompt me to do so.

Long years ago, before you were born, I was a poor girl working for my daily support. My father was an humble laborer, with five other children to take care of, and though my mother was an excellent manager and the most prudent and careful woman, yet he had a hard struggle to always 'make both ends meet,' and so at the early age of fifteen I was set to work—apprenticed to a tailoress in our little town. I acquired the trade by paying for it in working of evenings and at odd hours; but it was not long after I had thoroughly learned the business that I found that too close confinement was wearing upon my health, and I was obliged to seek other employment, and became an upper servant in an aristocratic and well-regulated household. Here I worked faithfully for two years, but I was not always contented, though no one knew it, and at the end of these two years I concluded to change my labor somewhat upon the first favorable opportunity that presented itself. While I was pondering over this, one morning I took up the daily paper, and glancing over the column of wants, I found among them one I decided to answer—'a housemaid and companion for an elderly lady.' I replied to the advertisement in person, and was only too happy on gaining the desired situation, My lady, Mrs. Rural, lived with only one servant, a man to do general work—take care of the house, keep the little garden, etc., in an old-fashioned, rambling, castle-like looking farm-house, with many sized, curious shaped windows and niches, and all covered with a many gabled roof. It was a 'sunny spot,' a quiet retreat in a quiet village; had been the homestead through a long line of preceding generations, and finally fell to my mistress—the last of her race; nor would she have it occupied by any save the little family she had chosen to herself. Adjoining the meadow land was the 'family wood lot,' and ungrudgingly she used its fuel for her household's benefit; always the kitchen, sitting-room, and chambers occupied, were healthfully warmed and cheerfully lighted by the glowing fire in the old fireplaces—and now you will understand why this spicy wood and open fire brings to me the memories of 'other days.' Well, here I lived, very happily with my lady. I was not overburdened with work, and Sunday was my own, which, with the weekly prayer meeting, occasionally a lecture, an afternoon's visit, or an old-time tea party at our house, and now and then an evening's entertainment at home or abroad, gave all the recreation I asked or needed. My life flowed peacefully on day after day, till, at the end of a year at Mrs. Rural's, came the first eventful change into it. It was a bleak December evening like this when the change began. My mistress and I were sitting quietly alone, as we are now, when there came a rap from the heavy brass knocker on the door; we were not afraid of tramps or impostors in those days, and immediately answered the summons. On the threshold stood a tall, broad-shouldered, handsome man in gentleman's dress and with gentlemanly bearing—one look into his open, honest face would have driven away all fears, had we possessed any—he informed us that he had missed his directions to the village tavern, and asked for a supper and night's lodging. Mrs. Rural never turned any away from her doors, and cordially invited him in and made him a welcome guest; but he retired early, excusing himself on the plea of weariness, the result of which was a slight indisposition that made him our guest for several days, at the end of which, from liking our quiet home and ways, and meeting with reciprocal regard from us, he became our winter boarder. We learned that he was a rich ship builder, and had bought up a considerable amount of woodland for timber in our rustic neighborhood, and had come hither to oversee his workmen; but when the warm spring days came on, for reasons of his own, he still lingered with us, and we were not disposed to interfere with his plans; suffice it to say, that as in winter and spring, summer still found him one of our household. As I have said, Albert Monroe, for this was his name, was a handsome man, with auburn hair and clear, gray eyes, genial, kind and agreeable; he was a scholar and a poet, though he never wrote poetry. I was always a great lover of poetry myself, and occasionally gave vent to my liking in composing little songs for my own amusement. To make a long story short, we soon learned and enjoyed each other's tastes, and together we read poetry, sang, or played chess; and during the bright days in my leisure hours—for, as I have said, I was not overtaxed with work, and my mistress was both kind and thoughtful toward me, we boated, picnicked, or took long walks together; then, too, he became my escort to our little prayer meetings, lectures, etc., and gradually our first liking for each other developed into a stronger one, and in the rich, ripe August weather we were betrothed. A month of perfect happiness went by for me, then came into my life the cloud which for months and years so heavily darkened it.

It was a chilly August evening, and the last one of that long ago summer time. Mrs. Rural had closed the windows and doors, made a cheerful fire in the sitting-room, and we three were just about to engage in a game of cards, when we were interrupted by the rap of the postman, who left a letter for Mrs. Rural. Silently she perused it, then with a little low laugh said: 'My letter bears some news for us all. A remote relative of my late husband,—'Your niece, Bessie Wilmot,' she signs herself, though I have yet to make her acquaintance—has hunted me up and given herself an invitation to visit me. (Really, I believe my quiet home is fast becoming a place of accommodation for world-worn travelers,' she interpolated, and looking jocosely at Albert); then finished, saying: 'But I trust you two will help to make her a welcome visitor.'

'Of course we will,' I quickly answered for both myself and Albert, while I mentally commented on the pleasure of having for a little while a girl companion. She came, and my anticipated pleasure ended in genuine disappointment. Bessie Wilmot was a plump, rosy-cheeked girl of about my own age, full of life, fun and merriment; but I soon learned that she enjoyed that fun (?) most which springs from ridicule of persons and things; and though in the main pleasing and agreeable, she was sly and artful. She was not long in finding out Albert's likes and dislikes, tastes, etc., and acted accordingly in his presence. She did not love books, but knowing Albert's passion for these and especially for poetry, she would slyly learn pages from his favorite authors, and then upon the slightest occasion for doing so, in his hearing would quote portions from them, and so deceived him into thinking that she was his counterpart in this love of books. Nor was I long in discerning that, together with this, her exuberant flow of spirits, her easy, agreeable manners, and now and then a show of innocent, infantile ways, had made a favorable impression upon Albert, and that he was much interested in her; but I chided myself if I sometimes thought that his heart was no longer wholly mine, and comforted myself by thinking that I was jealous; that her easy, fun-loving propensities called out something in his nature akin to hers, and which my more sedate ways had never awakened; and that, after all, perhaps he needed this. But day by day the truth dawned more perceptibly, and then with my great love, my charitableness turned to the hope that his liking was only temporary, and that, after her visit was over, he would be all mine again; but bitter was the sudden ending of all my hopes, for, with a woman's intuition and from his restless moods, I knew before three weeks had gone that he loved Bessie Wilmot; and I as quickly resolved to give him his freedom. Well do I remember the bitter struggle it cost me to give him up! It was on the last eve but one of the delightful September time, and Bessie had been with us just four weeks—but what a sorrow her coming had brought into my life! We had had a week of glorious weather. It seemed as if summer had returned awhile before bidding us a final adieu; and the young people of our neighborhood had proposed having one more picnic, the last of the season, on the day following the eve when I made my decision. I thought there I should find him somewhere alone and bid him good-bye forever. The day dawned fair and warm like the preceding ones, and at ten o'clock we were already for the woods. I had had some trepidation in asking Mrs. Rural for the day, for I had not been slow to perceive that after a week of Bessie's coming, my mistress had kept me more occupied in the house, and, from her changeful moods, fancied her cold toward me, and was happily disappointed when she readily gave me the day for my own, and the picnic. To be brief, the day went by on golden wings, seemingly, to all but me, and late in the afternoon I had almost given up in despair of seeing Albert alone, for Bessie was omnipresent with him, and so I had purposely found companionship elsewhere; but a little later, when it was time to think of returning home, some one called Bessie away, and Albert, not knowing what else to do, I suppose, sought me out where I was sitting, under the friendly shadow of a great oak, and a little apart from the crowd. Throwing himself upon a knoll at my feet, he remarked:

'Well, I believe I am tired out! But, brightening up, 'this has been a most delightful day; I trust you have enjoyed it?—though I declare I have hardly seen you. Where have you kept yourself, Persis?' coming nearer and taking my hand in his, which I quietly withdrew and evasively ainswered his question by saying:

'It has indeed been a lovely day; one might deem that it had been given expressly for our picnic.'

He looked at me keenly and closely, and answered:

'Yes, Persis, but I fear you have not been happy after all. I declare I am ashamed of myself for my seeming neglect of you—forgive me this time and I will not forget again,' he finished, good-humoredly, and essaying to take my hand again, but I kept this firmly clasped in the other, while I schooled myself to calmly say:

'Albert, let us keep up this deceitful farce no longer, I—'

'What do you mean, Persis?' he interterrupted, with a decided show of earnestness in his voice and manners.

'Simply this,' I answered, 'that I am not blind to the fact that you love me no longer, and I give you back your freedom."

'Persis, this must not be,' he feebly remonstrated, to which I only replied:

'It must be; and if ever you marry, may your wife prove as faithful and loving to you as I would have been,' nor could I trust myself to say more.

Looking at me searchingly again, he silently took my hand in his, which I did not this time withhold, then said: 'Persis, you are the best and noblest woman in the world; may every good in life be yours,' and placing a kiss upon my brow, was gone; but I had time to notice the restful look that settled upon his face ere he gave me his blessing before he was again lost in the little crowd beyond, and to me forever.

When we reached home that night we found Mrs. Rural in great anxiety and much consternation over the loss of a ring which we had all been admiring the evening before, while she had given us its history. I remembered having taken up the ring from where Mrs. Rural had put it down, as she was unexpectedly called from the room, which resulted in our not referring to the ring again, and laughingly placing it upon my finger made a little show of vanity, accompanied by some slight remark upon my jewelry to Albert and Bessie, then laid the ring back upon the table from whence I had taken it. Judge of my surprise, then—though at first I thought she was only teasing me—when Bessie, while carefully laying aside her hat and shawl, said:

'Well, I do not know what has become of your ring, Auntie, unless Ethel is the 'thief.' I believe I saw it on her finger the last of anywhere about here.'

'Indeed, I know nothing about it!' I indignantly and firmly answered.

'No words, Persis,' coldly commanded Mrs. Rural; 'if Bessie saw it there, this is 'proof positive' of your guilt.'

'It is a false accusation,' I stoutly maintained.

'Silence!' demanded my mistress; then added, more leniently, 'if you will get the ring I shall not have to search your room.'

'I have not got it!' I answered, bursting into tears; 'nor will I allow my room to be searched while I am innocent of the theft.'

'Enough,' quietly replied Mrs. Rural, 'this denial and unwillingness to look for it only confirms your guilt. I shall find the ring;' and therewith proceeded to my room, followed by Bessie and myself, while I, seeing that I had placed myself in a wrong light to her, was forced to silently submit to their unjust and cruel treatment of myself and my belongings. While Mrs. Rural was unmercifully pulling over the contents of my bureau, Bessie opened my writing desk, and in the act of opening, exclaimed:

'Here it is; I have found it in her desk.'

'Then you put it there,' I quickly and indignantly said.

Had my mistress been her better self and not under the influence of her niece, the simultaneous opening of the desk and finding the ring would have betrayed to her the guilty one, but instead she only heard my assertion, and turning to me coldly said:

'Do not further insult my guest, nor add the sin of falsehood to your theft. We will have no more words; you may come to me in the morning for your wages.'

I need not say that I was too deeply injured to reply, or that I passed a sleepless night; how over and over again I repeated to myself: "I am glad, so glad that I gave up Albert before this occurred.' How as often the harassing thought followed, that the fear of my 'guilt' being found out instead of the real truth would be to him the cause of my breaking our engagement; but not one ray of hopeful light penetrated through my dark cloud. With what little money I possessed and without a recommendation, I left the place, where first I had known rest and contentment, afterwards such happiness, and lastly my sorrow, to seek employment elsewhere, and this I found in an adjoining town, at my trade. By dint of good management and faithful economy, after five years I gained an establishment of my own, and commenced business for myself. Almost at the consummation of my good fortune, I was one day speedily summoned to the dying bedside of Bessie, and then and there she confessed her guilt and implored my forgiveness.

At the request of her husband, who, as you undoubtedly have conjectured, was none other than Albert, I remained until after her death; and while with her I learned that Mrs. Rural, from whom now for the first time in all these years I had heard anything, had long since gone to her grave, and without ever knowing the truth. I also learned that Bessie had left a little girl some four years old, but whom I did not see. How I longed to enquire for her, to see her, and take care of her for my own; but I had no home to give her, and indeed if I had owned one, could not have had my wish without her father's consent. Six more years rolled on, and again one morning taking up the daily news, I read the death of Albert Monroe. I yielded to the influence to attend his funeral, and, too, I longed to look once more upon the face of him I loved—though it was for the last time, until we meet where there is no more parting;" and again Aunt Persis was lost in thought as she abstractedly looked into the glowing fire; while Clara, as though not certain if her story were ended, further and carefully queried:

"And is this all, Aunt Persis—did you never hear anything from his child?"

"I had not meant to tell you all," slowly answered Aunt Persis, "but, after all, my story would be incomplete without it. I learned while there that his little girl, now ten years old, and the exact counterpart of her father in looks, ways and thought, was left with a neighbor, a friend of her father, who was a poor man with a little family of his own to support; and further ascertaining that the little orphan had no living relative, I did not have a hard task to persuade her friends to give her into my keeping. I took her to my heart and home, for this I owned now, but I did not give her my name because I wanted her to bear her father's, whose true name was Albert Monroe Anderson; and now you know, my dear girl, why I have chosen you from among all my friends to be my own." And rising slowly, Aunt Persis placed a kiss upon Clara Anderson's fair brow, and silently left her there by the dying embers of the "fragrant old wood," and to her own musings, as do we our readers to theirs.

Miscellaneous.

In the NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for April is a note-worthy article by Judge A. W. Tourgee, in which the professed reformers of the civil service are put on the defensive and their schemes of reform pronounced to be incompatible with American ideas of self-government, and on divers other grounds inadmissible and impractible. The same number of the REVIEW contains, under the fanciful title, "The Thing that Might Be," a profoundly philosophical study of the laws and conditions of human progress, by the Rev. Mark Pattison, Rector of Lincoln College, Oxford. The third article is a strong defense of the Roman Catholic side of the controversy about religion in the Public Schools, from the pen of Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester. The great problem of the govermental control of monopolies is discussed with reference to railway management by the Hon. George Ticknor Curtis, who contends that when a railway company is incorporated by any State it agrees to this much and no more: that its property shall be subject to such legislative control as the act of incorporation embraces, to the exercise of the taxing and police powers of the State, and to the power of eminent domain.—The same problem, in its bearing upon telegraph lines, is ably discussed by the Hon. Wm. M. Springer. Mr. John Fiske has an article on The Historic Genesis of Protestantism, and Mr. Anthony Trollope, an essay on the poet Longfellow. Mr. Desiré Charnay, the author of the series of papers on the ruined cities of Central America, has for more than two months been pursuing his researches in regions remote from all avenues of communication with the civilized world, and consequently neither the present number of the REVIEW nor the one last preceding it contains any contribution from him. In the May number, however, will be published another of his very instructive papers.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE FOR APRIL.—The present number overflows with reading-matter to suit all classes, and which cannot fail to prove instructive, entertaining and profitable. It is a publication which must find a welcome in every family. The contents are abundant and varied, but we can only glance at them. "How the Poor Folks Live," by the Editor, is deeply interesting, and the twelve illustrations serve to intensify the interest. "Memories of Egypt," by S. K. Hunt, "Easter and the Days Before It," "Good Friday in Munich," "The Great South American Struggle," etc., are among the particularly notable articles. In the departmen of fiction are, a continuation of the admirable serial "Out of the World," by Mrs. O'Reilly; "A Ghost Story," by Rev. J. Hyatt Smith; "For the Coming of the King," an Easter Story, by Helen W. Pierson, etc. There are several excellent and instructive essays; sketches of Rev. John S. Macintosh, D. D., Bishops Atkinson and Kerr, Rev. Dr. Chapin, Carlyle, Rev. J. Hyatt Smith, Rev. Dr. Hoge, etc., etc. The poems are quite numerous, and of great merit.—Among the peculiarly interesting features are "The Home Pulpit," "Hard Places in the Bible," by Rev. Dr. Deems, "With a Smile in It," "The Invalid's Portion and Thoughts for the Afflicted," "Temperance Talks," "International Sunday-school Lessons," "Editor's Portfolio," etc., etc. The miscellany is unusually abundant. There are 128 quarto pages, and over 100 illusirations, and a single copy is only 25 cents; annual subscription $3, postpaid. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

BARNES' INTERNATIONAL REVIEW, APRIL, 1881.—The April number of the INTERNATIONAL REVIEW is now ready, and contains the conclusion of Edwin Arnold's new poem "The Iliad of India," which must be reckoned a great literary attraction. It is written in the peculiarly beautiful manner of "The Light of Asia," and is in no sense inferior to that very popular poem. "Improvements in Prison Discipline" is an article by A. S. Meyrick, who may justly be presumed to know whereof he writes, as he was the working member of a commission on prison labor appointed by Gov. McClellan of New Jersey, in 1879. Great interest will attach to Dr. Geo. E. Ellis's article upon Dr. Seabury—"The First American Bishop"—from the fact that he was the pioneer Episcopal bishop in America, and that the article discusses the whole establishment of Episcopalianism in this country. President D. C. Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University, contributes a valuable sketch of the life and works of Dr. Francis Lieber. Madame Z. Ragozin, a Russian lady residing in New York, gives the first installment of a series of brilliant and spirited articles upon the trial of the Russian Nihilists, under the title of "The Last Trial of the Russian Nihilists," her facts being drawn from the original stenographic reports of the trial. Dr. Earnest W. Cushing writes of the "Statutes Regulating the Practice of Medicine," and the number closes with a strong and apreciative review of "Schurz's Administration of the interior Department," by Henry L. Nelson. The number is one of lasting and solid qualities, and has articles of timely and present value. 50 cents a number. $5.00 a year. A. S. BARNES & CO., Publishers, N. Y.

☞ Ministers, lawyers, teachers and others whose occupation gives but little exercise, should use Carter's Little Liver Pills for torpid liver and biliousness. One is a dose.

A FAIR BARBARIAN, by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.—This entertaining little novel appears for the first time in book form, after having run as a serial in both Peterson's and Scribner's Magazines.

It narrates the experience of a young and fresh American girl, while visiting a maiden aunt in the conservative village of "Slowbridge," England.

Octavia Bassett—that is her name—by her free and unconventional behaviour manages to outrage every sense of provincial propriety. Not that she is guilty of any flagrant breach of decorum, or is at any time unlady-like or rude—from an American point of view; her faults arise from her ignorance of the narrow and repressive code of English rural society, and from her entire indifference to it.

No matter who objects she will persist in acting natural. She is too obliging and sweet, however, to seek to give offence. Of course, all the dowagers and old wives vote her fast and intolerable, but her taste in dress and her unaffected and vivacions ways win at once the admiration of all the young women—and we may add of all the young men.

The development of the tale is accomplished, too, with all the conciseness and dramatic force of Mrs. Burnett's style. She hever moralizes, spends little time to describe, but her characters appear and disappear in the story and carry it along.

Mrs. Burnett in "A Fair Barbarian," has done some of her best work, and, we think, her most popular and taking. It is published by James R. Osgood & Co., and sold for $1.00.

We have just received a copy of a most touchingly beautiful Song and Chorus called, "Gone on Before O'er the River of Time," composed by P. O. Hudson. The melody is charming and words are well adapted. No home or Sunday school should be without it. Children can readily sing the Chorus, as it is especially arranged easy for that purpose. Don't fail to buy a copy; tell your neighbor of it. The title page contains an elegant lithograph. Price, 40 cents per copy, in postage stamps or cash. Address all orders to F. W. HELMICK, Music Publisher, 180 Elm Street, Cincinnati, O.

BALLOU'S MONTHLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE.—The April number of Ballou's Illustrated Magazine is now before the public, with a liberal installment of that thrilling Indian story, "The Crimson Trail." The hero is making his mark on the Indians as they hem him in on all sides; but we suppose that his deliverance is sure to come at the proper time. Besides this great leading story, there are some twenty others, with poetry, and a leading illustrated article on the town of Aden, in the Red Sea, and a very well-prepared article, with four engravings, representing a life on the Arctic Ocean while on a whaling voyage in company with a French ship. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley Street, Boston, Mass., and for sale by the Peabody News Co., for 15 cents a copy.

LITERARY NOTE FROM SCRIBNER & CO. A paper by R. W. Emerson, on his personal impressions of Thomas Carlyle, made up from his unpublished letters written at the time of his first visit to England, will appear in SCRIBNER for May. The publication is made by special arrangement with Mr. Emerson and the Massachusetts Historical Society, before which the paper was read, and in the minutes of which it is to be printed after its appearance in SCRIBNER.

OUR LITTLE ONES is a suggestive name for a magazine like that issued by the Russell Publishing Co., Boston. It is full of good things, both reading matter and pictures, and everybody's little ones will be made happier by receiving it. Every article in the April number is illustrated by favorite artists, as well as written by favorite authors. This monthly costs $1.50 a year. or 5 copies will be sent for $6.

With the coming spring styles the ulster and perhaps the Derby hat will at least temporarily disappear. Let us be thankful for this, for there are few young women who can assume both these masculine habiliments without putting on at the same time a mannish swagger.

☞ SOMETHING WONDERFUL IN IT.—"Lungs feel easier and better by fifty per cent. I am better than I have been for six months. My cough is nothing to what it used to be: scarcely notice it. Go to bed at night and scarcely cough once before I am asleep, and scarcely wake until broad daylight. Surely there is something wonderful in Compound Oxygen!" So writes one of our patients. Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, containing a record of many remarkable cures, sent free.—Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia.

An ingenious mothewho has long been bothered by the fastidiousness of her children at table has at last discovered a method of circumventing them. She places what she wants each child to eat before his neighbor at table, and of course each cries for what the other has, and the ends of justice are promoted.

MANHOOD
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!
Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

THE NEW YORK
EVENING POST
FOR 1881.
In Its Eighty first Year.
The character and objects of the Evening Post are so well known, that it would be enough, as a prospectus of the coming year, merely to announce that it will endeavor to maintain its position as the leading evening journal of the city of New York, but its proprietors hope, by renewed energy and enterprise, to render it still more worthy of the generous support which it has hitherto received from the public.
1. The Evening Post, for more than fifty years, has been devoted to that theory of politics on which our institutions are built, and which regards the government as the organ and representative of the whole community, and not of any class. By the fundamental law of its corporate organization it is bound to contend for the decentralization of power, for freedom of exchange in trade, for just and impartial taxation, for a sound hard-money currency, for economy and purity of administration, and for a reformed civil service, and to these principles it will continue to give an earnest, enlightened and unfaltering support.
2. In 1854 it took an active part in the formation of the Republican Party, to the measures and candidates of which it has since generally adhered; but it is in no sense the slave of any party organization. It holds that the highest duty of a good journal is to the community at large, and to parties only as they are subservient to the general good. While it has decided political preferences, therefore it has no political prejudices; and is determined to be fair and impartial toward all parties, and independent in its judgments. It means to make vigorous war, as it always has done, upon all public jobs, all corruption, all extravagance, all peculation, all rings, and all class legislation.
3. But the chief aim of the proprietors of the Evening Post is to render it a first class family newspaper, which shall not only provide the latest and fullest news of each day, but lend a special aid to all the best elements of civilization, to Literature, to Science, to Art, to Education, and to Innocent Amusements. Accordingly, it maintains intelligent correspondents, not only in our two political capitals, Washington and Albany, but in all the great cities of the Christian World. Its reviews of books have long since made a name for themselves; its theatrical and musical criticisms are full, discriminating, instructive and just; its financial and market reports are noted for their completeness and accuracy; while its miscellaneous departments have no superior for variety, freshness and general interest.
4. Every Saturday, to accommodate our advertisers, who are more numerous than those of any other New York daily journal except the Herald, we publish a supplement, which contains tales, poems, correspondence, extracts, and miscellanies of various kinds, and which is intended to anticipate the Sunday editions of the morning papers. It is furnished to our subscribers without increase of price.
5. The best things of our daily edition are specially prepared for our Semi-Weekly and Weekly editions which supply to country readers all the news, with an abundance of other matter, up to the day of their date. We do not believe that any better papers for country reading are issued from the city of New York.

For the Better Accommodation of our Advertisers we have opened a Branch Office in Room 12, Browne's Block, Essex Street, Salem.

WHAT would the world do without Ohio men? When an Ohio man was being inaugurated to succeed an Ohio man as president, an Ohio man administered the oath, another Ohio man held his hat, another the Bible which he kissed, while a sixth Ohio man was grand marshal of the procession. Who was it gave New York the name Empire State?

IT is related of the late Senator Matt H. Carpenter that he once said, when president pro tem. of the Senate: "You may put me in a chair blindforded, and I can tell whether or not Senator Edmunds is in his seat by the character of legislation that is brought up. If it is known that he will be absent for a few days, every bill with a 'job' in it is brought to the front and pushed; whereas if he is present nothing is said about them."

THE child-like belief of the Democrats that they can humbug this nation borders on the marvelous. They only succeed, however, in humbugging themselves. During the last twenty years they have professed time and again to have just the issue they wanted to go before the people on, but when the people gave in their verdict it has alway been a peremptory command to "get out." They are deluding themselves in the same way now over the veto of the funding bill.

POSTMASTER GENERAL JAMES is said to have two important improvements in his department under contemplation. Judging from the progressive spirit which he has already shown in his new office, it is not unlikely that he may be successful in his attempts.—First, he wishes to make the post-office self-supporting; and next, to make the free delivery system as good as that of London, and perhaps better. This will do very well for a beginning. We wish the energetic postmaster general the fullest success.

A large number of hides are received almost daily, which would indicate a good business.

SOLDIERS' HOME. — Arrangements are making for a State Fair in aid of the Soldiers' Home in Massachusetts, to be held next December, and which is intended to be on the largest scale ever seen in Massachusetts. Gen. Sargent has issued a circular in behalf of the movement, in which an eloquent appeal is made for the assistance of all charitable men and women. "A hospital home in Massachusetts has become," it says, "a necessity for our feeble and destitute soldiers, some of whom are over seventy years of age. The Grand Army which has contributed largely, hails with joy such a coajutor. Under the pressing sense of a debt to patriotism, charity and justice, the incorporated trustees of the Soldiers' Home in Massachusetts have at last purchased, at a quarter of its original cost, and fully furnished, the Highland Park Hotel, on Powder Horn Hill in Chelsea.—It is near Boston, large enough for the present, and can be trebled in size.—They propose to make this Soldiers' Home a monument to the State's undying gratitude to soldiers so brave and citizens so beloved." Subscriptions, gifts, bequests are earnestly solicited, as a large fund is required for permanent support.

THE TRUSTEE PROCESS. — In the Massachusetts Senate, the bill concerning costs under the trustee process was amended so as to provide that the act shall not effect any suit brought upon a cause of action now existing; so as to provide that when a trustee writ is served it must be made valid by the tender to the trustee of a sum sufficient to cover the costs of said trustee; so as to provide that the writ shall contain a declaration setting forth the cause of action, the nature of the claim, and the time the cause of action occurred, failing which the trustee shall not be held to answer; and so as to provide that the act shall not take effect until July 1, 1881. With these amendments the bill was ordered to be engrossed.

"The almost universal confession of public men is that offices cost more than they bring. The honors do not pay what they cost. The political field is the hardest, the most disagreeable, and the most unremunerative one to till. It would be vastly better for a young and middle-aged man to keep out of it so far as it is possible to do so and perform their duties as citizens. Better sell peanuts at a street corner or black boots than buttonhole anybody for an office and neglect the means of earning an honest living to pick up crumbs of patronage from any political table. The most dangerous bees that ever buzz in a man's bonnet are of the political breed."—N. Y. Express.

THE American colonization society, organized 64 years ago as a bait to lure the North into the belief that the South was opposed to slavery, has at length got into a good shape, and is doing excellent service. During the past year 143 negroes from the South have been sent to Liberia, where good homes await them. The colony is in an excellent condition. Schools and colleges are increasing in number and influence; and, generally, the state of the country is such as to induce no less than half a million of the Southern blacks seriously to contemplate a removal to that country. Indeed the prospects of a new exodus are good.

FIFTY years ago James L. Gillis, now Judge Gillis, of Iowa, was one of the men tried for the abduction of Wm. Morgan, the betrayer of the secrets of Masonry. Nearly all arraigned in the trial for the alleged abduction came to some sudden end, and Judge Gillis long since was the sole survivor of those who were associated with him. A few years ago one of his sons was called to the door of his Iowa residence and shot down. Last week another son was shot in the same way; and the judge and his friends firmly believe the tragedies trace back to the Morgan affair.

Yes, Dr. Loring would make a most admirable Commissioner of Agriculture, and we would not take it to heart if he received the appointment; but then we had much rather see him Governor of the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts. And it is high time that Essex County should be allowed the privilege of designating the next Chief Executive, for we believe it is nearly seventy years since one has hailed from these parts.

Prof. Proctor, the eminent English astronomer, thinks it probable that the comet seen in Australia will fall into the sun, in which event all the higher forms of life in our solar system will disappear. Scientific men generally regard it with a great deal of interest.—Taking this with Mother Shipton's prophecy, it looks as though we were living in a remarkable era.

Another Veteran Skipper Gone: Mr. Augustin S. Roads died very suddenly at his residence on Bowden street, on Sunday evening last, at the age of 74 years 3 months. Mr. Roads, from the days of his early boyhood, followed the sea in the Bank fisheries, and was one of the old skippers of the past, having commanded the schooners William Penn, Fame and others, and lastly the schooner Elizabeth in 1845, which was the last trip he made to the Banks. For a number of years after he pursued the mackerel fisheries, until about 1853 when he retired from the sea and located in the then new settlement, near Reed's Hill, where he built a house and settled down with his boys in the shoe-making trade.—Marblehead Messenger.

John S. Learoyd, Jr., who has presided over the electric talking and writing machines at the post-office, and whose genial and pleasant face we have all been pleased to meet at the delivery window there the past year, started Wednesday for Austin, Minnesota.—Lots of people go West, and many come back because they cannot earn their living there; while others stay and make fortunes and become Governors, Congressmen and Presidents. John is good enough and bright enough to grow into either of those positions, and we are afraid, for Danvers' sake, that he will not be back in three or six months.

Senator C. B. Rice will deliver the Memorial Day address this year, by invitation of Post 90. The Lynn National Band will furnish the music.—Mirror.

The joint special committee having in charge the construction of the canal, and the filling of Frye's mill-pond has organized with Alderman Gifford as chairman, and Councilman Breed as secretary. Aldermen Gifford and Councilmen Peterson and Mack were appointed a sub-committee to take charge of the mechanical portion of the work and to advertise for proposals for building the canal, which will be 680 feet long with a width of 30 feet at the Peabody line and 40 feet at Grove street. Alderman Brown and Councilmen Jackman and Breed were appointed a committee to look after the claims of abutters, etc.—Observer.

IRELAND was once our chief fountain of immigrations. Germany now surpasses it enormously. The figures are for the past year at Castle Garden: Ireland, 66,399; Germany, 104,264. But the most remarkable of all the sources of immigration is the Scandinavian, considering the numbers it has to draw from. Sweden is the third highest on the list of our supply sources, sending last year, 35,217 to Castle Garden alone; if to these we add Norway's 9,937, we have the prodigious total of 45,154 for the united kingdoms. As a strange contrast either with Sweden or with Germany, take the great and populous republic of France, which last year sent us only 4,087—less than half as many as little Switzerland, and one-fifth less than little Denmark. It will not do to interpret the matter as one of Latin against Teutonic races, since Italy sends us no fewer than 11,190. Frenchmen in general seem wonderfully well satisfied with France, despite its cookery. But Germany's military tyranny and Ireland's bondage are too much for many of their people; while the roving of the Northmen toward America in early ages repeats itself less adventurously and more abundantly in their descendants.

THE INSANE. — One of the worst features in the treatment of the insane in asylums has been the secrecy of these institutions. There have been instances where the asylum was used as a prison by relatives who wished to get the alleged insane person out of the way that they might enjoy his property, or for some other reason which should not be admitted. Moreover the large hospitals are supervised by experts in insanity who are not always expert physicians, and they are generally too few to attend to the wants of the patients. Dr. Nathan Allen, of Lowell, has called attention to this matter, and Dr. Hammond, of New York, who is authority on matters of this kind, and of all diseases of the nervous system, has lately written to a friend in Boston that "The passage of the bill for the appointment of five visiting physicians for each establishment will do more to crush out the mystery of such institutions than anything that can be done. I hope it will pass and that other states will quickly follow."

POLICE NOTES.—March 26. Richard Leonard, for drunkenness, was committed to Salem Jail.

29. Timothy Connor of Danvers, was fined $1.00 for drunkenness.

The case of the Henderson boy, who set fire to the load of hay, has been continued one week longer.

We had a very pleasant call last Thursday from Rev. O. S. Butler, Postmaster of Georgetown.

The teacher's vocation, under a Republic where the institutions are based on the intelligence of the people, can hardly be assigned too high a rank. To him we are indebted for the acquired qualifications for honorable citizenship and a successful career, for "knowledge is power," and as knowledge is imparted by the teacher, we must look upon him as the original source of all that education and culture represent. Monarchical governments represent a union of church and State, but ours might be designated as a union of school and State, in which the former holds the dominant influence.

If then the teacher is of such paramount importance, the old question naturally arises in regard to the recognition of the value of his service; for so long as we need food and clothing and shelter, all value must be reduced to a money basis, all considerations of sentiment and honor to the contrary. In this matter the case of the teacher, as compared to the members of other professions, seems to be somewhat exceptional. The income of the doctor, minister and lawyer depends on their ability, qualifications and standing, the best earning more thousands than the ordinary men do hundreds, while very little discrimination is made in fixing a teacher's salary between the best and the poorest who can manage to pass; whatever distinction is made is based on the rank of the schools, rather than that of the teacher, the higher the school the higher the salary, though it might not be difficult to show that the best teacher, he who possessed the ability to best impart knowledge, would be of more value in the schools where the rudiments were taught and the foundations of the education laid, than in the high schools where the advanced studies follow in a natural sequence the preparatory course, and the pupils being fairly started on the right track can rely more on their judgment and experience.

But that the able and experienced teacher, in whatever department he is placed, is very poorly paid, when we consider the cost of fitting himself for his duties, and the exhausting, wearing nature of his work, must be obvious on comparison of his labor and salary with those of men in other vocations. As an illustration, no one will deny that the work of the teacher, confined to it, as he is, every day, as rigidly as a factory hand, is harder than that of the minister, who is actually in the traces during prescribed hours but one day in the week. Yet it has been stated by some statistician that the average pay of ministers is three times that of teachers, including, of course, both sexes. But if experienced teachers are paid too little, an offset is made by paying beginners too much, though two wrongs don't make a right. No matter what the natural qualifications of a would-be teacher may be, or how well up he is in the studies to be taught, there is need of experience more than in any other profession—except perhaps the medical—before he can take a high rank and be really worth a high compensation. The boys and girls just out of school themselves, with all their lessons at their tongues' ends, can pass a good examination, which is the only means the committee have of judging of their ability as teachers, and that is next to nothing. As well pronounce a stranger, who wants to build a house for you, a good carpenter because he makes a display of a nice new chest of tools. Practice is as necessary to a teacher as to a carpenter, and there is no reason why beginners at one business, as well as at another, should not be considered apprentices, till they have proved their competency, and be paid accordingly, their salary increasing with their increasing efficiency.

This view of the case is becoming more general as the interest of education increases, and good teachers are in demand, and in many places at increased remuneration over the long established rates. There is also a disposition on the part of committees to make the position of a good teacher a permanent one, so that he may feel that he is settled over his school like a clergyman over his church, which will beget an increasing interest in his charge and a growing adaptation to the particular pupils under his care.

But the rush of green and incompetent teachers—and it seems as though every high school graduate had teaching on the brain—will never compensate for the lack of really well-qualified and experienced ones, and if three-quarters of the aspirants for pedagogical honors would only "go West," and the remainder qualify themselves by teaching, for teaching, and make a life profession of it, instead of a mere makeshift, till something better turns up, as is too often the practice, teaching would acquire a dignity and character not hitherto generally accorded it.—Fireside Favorite.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

G. A. R.—The entertainment given on Monday evening last by Post 50, for its lady friends, was a success. At the appointed time the Post hall was comfortably filled by ladies and comrades. Miss Nellie Miles, of Lynn, performed excellently upon the piano, and also received hearty applause for her playing upon the zylophone and chimes. Mr. Clarence M. Mason, who is a skillful pianist, furnished the accompaniments for her. Miss Berry, of Danvers, read twice very acceptably, and Miss Annie Shaw, of this town, read a humorous selection in a pleasing manner. Miss Nellie F. Boyle, of Salem, sang several selections, and was cordially applauded. She possesses a remarkably strong, clear, sweet voice, of good compass, and her singing was highly complimented. Mrs. Foote kindly gave her services as accompanist to Miss Boyle. At the close of the first part of the programme the hall was darkened, and Prof. C. L. Walker, of Salem, gave a stereopticon exhibition for over an hour. A series of historical and fancy pictures, portraits of distinguished personages, views of natural scenery, comic designs and moving figures were thrown in succession upon the screen, and described by Prof. Hooper, formerly of this town, in an entirely original manner. Prof. Walker's entertainments are getting quite popular, as they deserve to be. About quarter past ten the audience dispersed in a good-humored and satisfied mood.

On Wednesday evening of next week the thirty-eighth annual Ball of Volunteer Engine Company, No. 4, will take place at Upton's Hall. The preparations are all made, and the prospects are that this will be the grandest Fireman's Ball for some years. The programme will include some twenty-four plain dances besides the fancy. The music will be furnished by Ryan's Band, of Boston, acknowledged to be the best in New England. The supper will consist of turkey, cold meats, pastry, etc. The tickets are selling rapidly, and are limited to one hundred and fifty, which will allow every holder to secure an order. The orders are the most elaborate that could be obtained, and will surpass any used in former years. Samples of them are on exhibition at the stores of W. Winslow, Starr C. Hewitt and B. F. Stevens. The committee having charge of the arrangements are thoroughly competent, and will do their "level best" to make everything thoroughly satisfactory.

Mrs. Catharine A., wife of Mr. William S. Osborne, died at her home on Central street, last Friday. She was the daughter of Nathaniel and Lydia Stevenson, of Billerica. Her health has been failing for the past two years, and she was a great sufferer during this last period of her sickness. She realized that the end was near and only longed for rest. Thus has gone a kind-hearted and good neighbor, who will be missed by her large circle of friends. As a wife and mother none was ever more true. She leaves a husband, one son and a daughter. Her funeral took place last Monday, and was largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. W. G. Sperry, of the South Church. She was buried in Monumental Cemetery.

A grand Old Folks' Concert will be given under the auspices of the Baptist Society, in Peabody Institute, next Tuesday evening. The chorus will be very large, and the participants will be dressed in the costumes of "ye olden times." A full orchestra will be in attendance. The services of Miss Rosa Stewart, a talented young lady of Boston, have been engaged. There will also be piano accompaniments, and the whole promises to be an excellent entertainment. Tickets are now selling quite rapidly at George Stevens', No. 1 Main street.

The Boston & Northern Telephone Company have decided to put in the Telephonic Fire Alarm, as voted by the town at the adjourned town meeting. The office will be kept open day and night; one line will connect every engine house in town with the central office; also the residences of Chief Engineer Littlefield and Assistant Engineer Folsom. Work will probably be commenced this week.

Postmaster Ward, for the better accommodation of the business men, will put in a limited number of lock draws at the Post Office, under the lock boxes on the right. They will be larger than any in use, and be found quite convenient for those who have a large mail. The cost will be only about $1.50.

The Neck: Things are beginning to stir at the Neck. Peach's men are at work on cellars for Tilden and Fenno. Painters are busy at Morey's and the Club House. The frame for Tilden's house has arrived and that for Fenno's is expected. A number of prospective purchasers are looking up desirable lots, and it is thought that the coming season a large number of buildings will be put up. So may it be.

Mr. John Munroe will make the alterations of the club stable. John MacAllister will have charge of the stable, the coming season.—Marblehead Messenger.

☞ Because composed malt and hops, without fermentation, Malt Bitters are popular.

A Lucky Speculation: Albert Titcomb, of this city, who bought about five thousand barrels of apples last season, during the time that they were plenty, has made quite a nest egg by keeping them through the winter. He bought them very low, paying eighty cents for Baldwins, of which he had three thousand barrels, and $1 for russets, having two thousand barrels. At present the Baldwins bring $1.75 a barrel and the russets $2.—Newburyport Herald.

☞ KILLS THE PLEASURE.—Illness in the house affects the whole family in some manner. When the sickness is serious the children's laughter must be hushed, footsteps must be softened, all goes sadly and wrong. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy stands in your doorway and says to sickness: "Keep out!" It will cost you only a dollar to put the sentinel on duty, and for his faithfulness thousands can vouch. Ask your druggist or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Large Haddock Trips: Sch. Edith M. Pew, Capt. William Corliss, on her last trip, in Boston, landed 60,000 lbs. haddock which sold for 3 cents per lb. The crew shared $90 each. February 12th she also landed 60,000 lbs. which sold for 2 1-2 cents per lb. Capt. William is great on the haddock fishery. He made the best season's fishing in this branch ever made—that of 1872-'3 in sch. Eastern Queen, when in five months he stocked $10,250 net, crew sharing $560 each.—Gloucester Advertiser.

☞ It is not the quantity eaten that gives strength, life, blood and health. It is the thorough digestion of the food taken, let it be much or little. Therefore, do not stimulate up the stomach to crave food, but rather assist digestion after eating, by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator. mar 30—1m

Alexander of Russia inherited a despotic form of government from his ancestors, and he had some personal faults of his own, as who has not? But in the main he was desirous of doing right, and of governing his people in a much more liberal manner than they had ever been accustomed to. He set free five times as many slaves or serfs as it was Lincoln's good fortune to liberate, and it was his desire to make his people contented and happy. The plotters against his life and dynasty made his existence miserable, for, as has been shown, they were determined to be dissatisfied with government of any kind, and if the Czar had been a Washington and a Lincoln combined, they would have been equally determined to destroy him. Naturally, he followed some of the old precedents of the Empire, and banished to Siberia those who were engaged in these conspiracies.—This seemed harsh, but we well remember how Lincoln was charged with being a despot, and how it was howled through the country, both North and South, that no man was safe from imprisonment in those "Bastilles" of his, Forts Warren and Lafayette. Perhaps there were a few who were unjustly incarcerated during the troublous times, but it is now admitted that on the whole the government of the Martyr President was as free from error as the lot of humanity would permit. So, but to a lesser degree, of course, it must be said of the late Czar. He was not faultless, but his face was toward the light, and it was both cowardly and wicked to take his life. He was our true and faithful friend in the dark days of 1861-5, and we ought to sincerely mourn his death. The sentiments of the great body of the American people have been expressed by Mr. Blaine, the Secretary of State, and the government has done well in so expressing them.—Cambridge Press.

There is now a substance which is both professionally and popularly indorsed and concerning which Mr. J. B. Ferschweiller, Butteville, Ore., writes: I have often read of the many cures effected by St. Jacob's Oil and was persuaded to try the remedy myself. I was a sufferer from rheumatism and experienced great pains, my leg being so swollen that I could not move it. I procured St. Jacob's Oil, used it freely and was cured.

CORDON'S ADVICE TO THE CHINESE.

Colonel Gordon's advice to the Chinese is briefly to this effect: "You have a military organization and discipline which is suitable to your people—do not alter it. Only arm them in large numbers with breech loaders which will carry one thousand yards. Better these than a superior class carrying one thousand five hundred, and do not manufacture them yourselves. You can buy them abroad cheaper and better; and they should be on one system applicable to the whole. Then numbers, in which China has the advantage over all other nations, will tell. "Chinese power," he sums up, "is in her numbers, in the quick moving of her troops, the little baggage they require, and their few wants." Hence, he concludes, "China should never engage in pitched battles; her strength is in her quick movements, in cutting off the trains of baggage, and the continuous worrying of her enemies, and in night attacks not pushed home. Rockets, not cannon, in such service, to be moved with the troops. China should never attack forts; she ought to wait and starve her foes out, and worry them day and night." These directions, it will be seen, all have reference to defensive operations on land if invaded, and in the calculation that rapid marching, surprising convoys and cutting off supplies, with the aid of the heliograph, would enable them to weary out their enemy and sicken his troops. As to the coast defense, he recommends that it should be protected by torpedoes, sown thickly—even at the risk of occasional blowing up a junk or two—and so scattered that the enemy cannot learn where to look for them. "Anxiety as to their whereabouts would make people ill and cross," he adds, "and they should be cheap and fired by fuse—not expensive and complicated ones—fired by electricity. China should buy no more big guns; they cost money and are a great deal of trouble to keep in order, and the enemy's ships have too thick sides to be pierced." Again, "China should defend her sea-coast by very heavy mortars; they cost little, are easy to use, can be fired from places the enemy cannot see, and he cannot get safe from a mortar-shot—it falls on the deck, and there it breaks everything. China can get five hundred mortars for the same money she gets an 18-ton gun for, and if she loses them the loss is little. No enemy could get into a port which is defended by fifteen hundred mortars and plenty of torpedoes. So, also, the Chinese fleet should consist, on the principle, of small, quick vessels, with light draught and no great weight of armor. China's strength is in the creeks, not on the open sea. China needs no European to help her to carry out this programme, and it is a cheap as well as a feasible one. If China cannot do this for herself, then no one else can do it for her. But as long as Pekin is the seat of Government, China can never afford to go to war with any first-class power—it is too near the sea. The Emperor (queen bee) must be in the centre of the hive." Finally, and the sting as well as the moral of the whole is there, "No iron-clads or iron gunboats can help China till she has a place to keep them in. But China can have no place (asylum) to keep them in till she has an army, and China cannot have an army when Generals keep two thousand men and draw pay for five thousand. These generals ought to have their heads cut off."—The Contemporary Review.

FASHIONABLE FOOTWOMEN.

Footmen are going out and footwomen are taking their place. Dining the other night in Eaton place, the door was opened by one of the latter in a most charming and becoming livery. Black and white mob cap for headdress, stand-up collar with white cravat and small pin in it, rich brown cloth coat with livery buttons, cut somewhat like a man's hunting coat, and a buff waistcoat with a high church collar—such was the uniform. I was so struck with the upper portion of the dress that I never thought of looking at the extremities, but I fancy my eye once got a glimpse, going upstairs, of red stockings and shoes with silver buckles. During dinner four winsome lassies, all similarly attired, waited on me hand and foot, and certainly never was a dinner more deftly handed and served. Why not? Women are, by their nature, much better suited for this sort of work than men. The latter think nothing of eating onions or smoking vile tobacco before serving the soup, or putting their thumbs in the gravy of one's mutton, or breathing stentoriously at your ear, or perceptibly on your cranium if it lacks a covering. Besides, there is a decided economy—foot women are not taxed, nor do they eat so much.—London World.

THE LABORER'S HOUSE IN JAPAN.

A Japanese laborer lives in a house of not more than four rooms; one for eating, sleeping and sitting; one for cooking, one for bathing, and one to spare. He never wears boots, nor brings mud into the house. He and his family sit on the floor when they eat, and take their meals at a low table. The floor of their dining and sitting room is covered with clean soft mats, upon which at night cotton comforters are spread to sleep under. Such a house can be built and furnished for one hundred dollars, and though cheap and small, is comfortable. The bath, found in almost all laborer's houses, is in daily use.

No man ever offended his own conscience, but first or last it was revenged upon him for it.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with washy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is raising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the Ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results. Indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

The old Welsh laws of Howell the Good, (A. D. 948) laid down:—"The worth of a kitten until it shall open its eyes is one legal penny: from that time till it shall kill mice, two legal pennies; after it shall kill mice, two legal pence, and so it shall always remain." There could be no legal hamlet in the old Welsh constitution unless it possessed a cat.

The reason alleged in China why Chinese become Christians on reading the Bible is, that the ink used has a power to stupefy the reader and take away his reason, and so make him believe the false doctrine. The people are warned against buying or reading foreign books. The missionaries are suspected of desiring to kidnap Chinese children to sell them.

All noted diamonds have been cut at Amsterdam, and it has been supposed that a secret art in this matter existed there, known to a few only, who monopolized the business. But now expert diamond cutters in New York city are improving the brilliancy of Amsterdam gems, by recutting them with mathematical facets, according to scientific laws of light. This process reduces somewhat the weight, but generally increases the value of these precious stones.

Dried potatoes have not yet come into our market to any extent, but it is said preparations have this year been made in California for drying large quantities and shipping them to England, where last year they met with a ready sale. A machine has been invented for pressing and drying potatoes so that they will keep for years, and yet preserve their natural flavor. After being thoroughly dried, they are ground into a coarse meal, resembling rice.

One of the most striking objects seen upon approaching Paris is the dome of the Hotel des Invalides, which glows in the sunshine like a ball of gold. During Napaleon's reign, when it was reported to him that an ominous discontent prevailed among the Parisians, "Go," said the emperor, "and gild the dome of the Invalides." It was done, and the people forgot the tyranny of the government in their admiration of the new wonder. The gilded dome is a monument to Napoleon's knowledge of French character.

A dealer in parrots, in Liverpool, Eng., was recently fined for sending a number of these birds by rail without providing water. Mr. Bartlett, the superintendent of the Boston Zoological Gardens, stated that he was acquainted with several species of parrots which die at once if allowed to drink water. Moreover, it has been found by the trade that the only way of preserving the lives of the little parrots and love-birds which are brought to this country in such numbers from Australia, is by rigorously cutting off their water supply throughout the voyage.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

HER LOST BAGGAGE.

Down in the Union Depot there are a thousand carpet-bags, satchels, grab-bags and parcels piled up on shelves to await owners. The collection is known as stray baggage, and it is added to or taken from almost daily. The man who has charge of it knows pretty well the contents of each, and what he doesn't know he can guess at. Yesterday, when a woman entered his domain and said she was looking for a lost satchel, he promptly replied:

"Very well, madam. We will begin our search in division 'A.' Were both handles off your satchel, the bottom partly ripped off and a red woolen rag sticking out of the side?"

"No, sir."

"Ah, then I missed it. Let's see. Here's a satchel which has been here about four weeks. The first thing on top is a red wig and a pair of blue stockings."

"That isn't mine, sir."

"Just so. Belongs to some poor soul who can't be happy without it. Here's a satchel which bears your description, but it can't be yours. The principal contents are a bottle of poor whiskey, an old hat, and a dime novel. Can't belong to you nohow?"

"No, sir."

"Well, here's another bundle. I should say by the feel that it contained two nightcaps, a volume of poetry and a set of false frizzes. Do you identify it?"

"No, sir, I don't."

"Does this satchel resemble yours?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any familiar remarks about it?"

"Yes, several."

"Did your satchel contain a package of sixteen love letters, each one leading off with 'Dear Ben,' and closing with 'Your own darling?'"

"No, sir—no, sir—that's not mine."

"This one isn't yours, either, because it contains a euchre deck and some faro chips. Now look up there. Third one from the right, eh? Well, here it is. Is this yours?"

"Yes, sir."

"Glad of it. Can you describe its contents?"

"Yes, sir. The first thing on top is a—a——"

"Yes, I know—a pair of stockings with holes in the heels. They belong to your sister, of course."

"Sir!"

"No offense, ma'am. Many impostors come here, and we must be particular. Please go on."

"The next thing is a—a——"

"An old corset with a shoestring for a lace—perfectly correct. Please describe the next article."

"I won't do it," she exclaimed.

"Pshaw, now! but you musn't take offense. There is a pair of shoes with half the buttons off, a bottle of face powder, a pair of gloves with the fingers out, and—"

"That isn't mine at all."

"Oh, it isn't, eh? Well, I'm sorry."

"I don't believe mine is here, and you needn't go to any further trouble."

"Very well. I shall go to dinner in half an hour. I place this satchel in this corner, and I shall tell the old man who relieves me at noon that a boy will come for it. That's all—good-bye—hope you'll find your baggage."

When he returned at one o'clock the satchel was gone.—Detroit Free Press.

HOW A BRAKEMAN SAVED HIS LIFE.

A brakeman on the New London Northern railroad had a narrow escape from death in the freight yard in New London recently. The man was walking down the track in front of the cars being switched into the yard to see if the switches were all right. The cars moved with greater velocity than he anticipated, and in the gale and snowstorm prevailing he did not hear them. He was struck and knocked down in the centre of the track and the cars passed over him. The brakeman on the car did all in his power to stop the cars, but failed. No one ever expected to see the man alive again, but the snow on the ground saved him from severe injury, and, having presence of mind, he seized the axle, threw his legs upon the wheel-frame, and when the cars stopped, quietly crept out and went home. His only hurt was a slight contusion on the back of the head. Had he failed to do just what he did, he would undoubtedly have been crushed to death.

A STABLE ON THE HOUSE TOP.

It must be confessed that the building of a stable for twenty horses on the top of a private mansion,- access to which is obtained by means of a lift, is calculated to awaken a feeling of astonishment even in these days of marvels. Yet this is the case of a house just erected in Belgrave Square, London, by Mr. Sasson. Ground is very valuable in that fashionable part of London, and by relegating the horses to the top of the house two birds are killed with one stone, for space is saved and the smell of the stables avoided. The horses do not seem by any means to object to the mode of ascent; possibly they are unconscious of it on account of the closed shutters of the lift.

A silent man is easily reputed wise. A man who suffers none to see him in the common jostle and undress of life easily gathers round him a mysterious veil of unknown sanctity, and men honor him for a saint.

If religion is anything it is the whole of a man's life; it is the carriage of his soul and of his body; it is the disposition of his time: it is the whole being aright.

At the election of officers of this company on Monday evening, March 28th, Major Wm. N. Tyler presiding, Lewis F. Brown was unanimously elected Second Lieutenant, in place of J. F. McMurphy, resigned.

Miss E. F. Punchard is advertising in to-day's paper a nice assortment of new Spring Goods. Ladies should give her a call. No. 76 Federal street, Salem.

An Englishman went to church in Rome one Sunday to see some solemn service that was longer than he expected it to be, and got tired, so he reached for his hat to go out. As he did so, a man sitting behind him caught his arm. The Englishman, supposing the service was unusually important, and that it was against the rules to go out during it, relinquished his attempt without looking around to see the man who, he thought, was probably an official of the church. He waited a while, and then thought he would go anyhow in spite of etiquette. He again reached for the hat, but was again prevented by the man behind him. He tried a third time with the same result, and preferring not to be thought disrespectful, he waited till the service was over. Then he reached for his hat, but the inevitable man behind him once more clutched his arm, saying, "I beg your pardon, but that is my hat you are taking," and so it was.

MEANNESS NO NAME FOR IT.—There are mean men in this world.—The other day a heavy team, with a safe, drove up to a building. A clothes line was thrown from an upper window and attached to the safe. It was a cold day, but a crowd began to collect and brave the weather to see the safe hoisted in. They couldn't understand what the deuce the man meant to do with the clothes line. Bets were made on his hauling it up with that. After it was fastened to the safe he began to pull and hauled the safe up, hand over fist, and in two minutes took it in at the window. The men in the crowd stared at each other in blank amazement.—Then a man who had won a lot of bets explained that it was only a box weighing some twenty pounds, painted to look like a safe. This was a reckless admission, for he barely escaped with his life by swift running. But he cleared $250 by the job. There are some men who get a living durned easy.

We have received from A. M. Purdy, of Palmyra, N. Y., the January number of his Fruit Recorder and Cottage Gardener, which he sends free to all applicants. Send a postal card to him requesting him to send you the January number of the Recorder, (which he sends free to all applicants), and see if you don't thank us for this notice.

To Peabody's store the Ladies hie,

And dream at night of bargains made.

WHAT IS "SPLENDID?"—Is it splendid? Was it splendid? Will it be splendid? Well, what is it that is, was, or will be "splendid?" That word "splendid" is a rather lustrous and rather ponderous word, and not to be lightly taken on the lips. It cannot, without shocking vulgarity, be applied to trifles. Your washerwoman's daughter, madame, may be expected to air it on every possible pretext, for it is one of the bright words she has recently added to her meagre vocabulary; but don't let your daughter do such a thing. She may think it is "splendid" to be able to fling about promiscuously a word that has so much color in it; but for the sake of propriety and our dear language teach her moderation. Teach her in the first place, thta there are very few things to which the word can be applied. "Splendid" means shining, luminous, brilliant. A sunset may be splendid; and so may a comet, if an unusually large one; and so may a prairie fire, and the conflagration in Chicago. Even a diamond may be splendid, though other words would characterize it better. A great party procession and display may metaphorically be called "splendid," though it were far more accurate to call it grand, or imposing, or impressive. The trouble with "splendid" is that its frequent use shows poverty of language—or in other words, ignorance. We have heard a young lady speak, all within an hour, of a "splendid" fellow, meaning an agreeable companion; a "splendid" day, meaning a pleasant or clear day; a "splendid" painting, meaning an interesting painting; a "splendid" dog, meaning a faithful or handsome animal of that species; a "splendid" bonnet, a "splendid" servant, and finally, "splendid" candy! This word "splendid" is one of the current vices of American youth, particularly girls, whose ardent feelings much incline them to soar after adjectives that are comprehensive and full of color. If these frenzied devotees of this much abused word would see how paltry their "splendid" conversation appears, they would amend it and go seriously at work to acquire the habit of using one new adjective every day, and enlarging their pitiful vocabulary. Pedantry is not pleasant, but even pedantry shows scholastic tendency, and is preferable to this slovenly and indolent leaning on one word, when the language is so full of beauty and of strength. Every person who aspires ever to be ranked among educated people, should add at least ten words to his vocabulary every week. And meantime there ought to be a society started for the Prevention of Cruelty to Adjectives.—American Queen.

Mr. Gilfillan, a man of undoubted though erratic genius, was a passionate admirer of Carlyle, and at one time went a tour of the country lecturing on Carlyle and his writings. His professional engagements taking him to the south of England, he made bold to call on the sage at his house in Chelsea. On ringing the bell, Carlyle himself came to the door. "Who are you?" he said, in the gruff, abrupt way he had with strangers, for he took most strangers who called upon him without an introduction for mere curiosity-mongers and sight-seers. "I am George Gilfillan was the reply, "and I have been lecturing about you through the country." "You have! have you? —— your impertinence! Good morning." It is but fair to two such distinguished men to add that Carlyle was thus rude through ignorance of the worth and genius of his visitor, and though for many a long day afterward the name of Thomas Carlyle, much less a lecture on him, never crossed Gilfillan's lips, the matter was subsequently settled through the intervention of friends, and the authors of "Sartor Resartus" and "The Bonds of the Bible" became ultimately the best of friends.

Rochefort says that in the United States the confectionery shops for ladies are as numerous as the liquor shops for men. American girls have a passion for sweet stuff. They only leave one bonbon shop to go and sit down in another. We thought, he says, that the French women were the worst gourmandes of the Old and New Worlds. We have now to offer them our most humble excuses.

ITCHING PILES—SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

MEMORIAL BIOGRAPHY.

We publish to-day a Memorial Biography of Daniel Putnam King, formerly member of Congress from this district, and brother of our esteemed townsman, Jonathan King, Esq. This excellent biography was prepared by another townsman, Hon. B. C. Perkins. The occasion of this biography was a resolution of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, designed to publish a series of volumes containing biographies of deceased members of the Society. The biographies will appear in the Chronological order of the deaths of the members. The first volume has recently been published. It contains sketches of the lives of forty-three distinguished men, many of whom have a national reputation, and a few are known beyond the bounds of our own country. Among the Lives are those of Chancellor Kent, author of the "Commentaries on the American Law," John Quincy Adams, Albert Gallatin, Henry Clay and Daniel Webster.—These Biographies comprise about five hundred octave pages, and have been prepared with the greatest care by the various authors. They are especially valuable as affording a serviceable knowledge of many local celebrities as well as epitomes of the lives and works of many famous men. This volume is even more desirable for a private than for a public library. The execution of the plan of the work has been so faithfully performed that the first edition ought soon to be exhausted and a second demanded.

DANIEL PUTNAM KING.

The first of the name, William King, emigrated from England to Salem in 1635. He was the father of Samuel, who also had a son, Samuel, who married Hannah Hanson. Their son, Zachariah, was born January 25, 1744, married Desire, a daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Dudley) Jacobs, and died November 16, 1832.

Their son, Daniel, the father of this sketch, was born March 12, 1769, married Phebe, daughter of Ezra and Mehitabel Upton, and died December 9, 1846.

Daniel Putnam King was born in that part of Danvers, Massachusetts, which now constitutes the town of Peabody, January 8, 1801. He was the son of Daniel and Phebe Upton King, both of whom were descendants of the first proprietors of the territory of that vicinity, and who were prominent in the community for uncommon mental and physical endowments.

Daniel P. commenced his education in the district school which at that time laid the foundation of the education of the strong men of New England. His education was continued at Saco, Maine, and at Phillips Academy, Andover, where he completed his preparation for college. He entered Harvard College in 1819, graduating in 1823. During his college course he was faithful and attentive to his studies, always performing well and conscientiously all duties assigned him. He was not ambitious in the rivalry of college life,—in that system of emulation which has been so prevalent in our institutions of learning, and which is distasteful to minds of broad views, and to those desirous of general culture. His modest and courteous bearing won for him the respect and good-will of his classmates, and his conscientious devotion to his duties secured the highest esteem of his instructors. After graduation he immediately commenced reading law, but he never completed his professional studies.

In 1824 he married Sarah Page, only child of Hesekiah and Sally Putnam Flint, and immediately took up his residence upon the farm left by his wife's father in the westerly part of the town, and which he made his future home. Here he devoted himself to agriculture, and those pursuits which were congenial to his tastes as a scientific farmer.

In 1835 he commenced public as one of the Representatives of his native town in the State Legislature. After a service of two years in the House he was elected one of the Senators of Essex County. He was a member of the Senate four years, the last of which he was President of that body.

As a member of the Legislature in both branches, Mr. King was known as a faithful and efficient member, and as President of the Senate he was noted for promptness and accuracy of his decisions and for his impartial courtesy toward members of all parties. In 1842 he was again elected to the House as Representative, and was chosen Speaker after a long and heated canvass. The position of Speaker of the House in 1843 was peculiarly a trying one, as the Governor and Council and both branches of the Legislature were Democratic, and in opposition to the party represented by Mr. King. But so skillful and impartial were his conduct and administration while Speaker that he won the confidence and compliments of all parties. Seven years' service as a member of the State Legislature closed his career in that body, but it prepared him for a broader field. In December, 1843, he took his seat as a member of the House of Representatives of the Twenty-eighth Congress, and was re-elected at each succeeding term until his death, which took place July 25, 1850. As a member of Congress Mr. King was an uncompromising opponent of all measures which tended to strengthen the hold of slavery upon the institutions of the country. His whole course upon the slavery question was open, candid, vigorous and consistent, and his honest candor in the avowal and maintenance of his opinions won for him the encomiums of his Southern opponents, which the cowardly and patronizing course of so many Northern members failed to win.

As a member of the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, and as Chairman of the Committee on Accounts, Mr. King was most efficient, and his reports and statements were always received with full credit by opponents as well as friends of the measures in question. It is not necessary nor proper here to designate the details of the work in which Mr. King bore the most prominent and honorable part. It is enough to put upon the record the high standing which he assumed and maintained in every work which he undertook, and the respect and courtesy which he won from all parties, for the faithfulness and honesty which marked everything which he did and said.

In his speeches, in his votes, and in his position with the minority of fourteen as an opponent of the Mexican war, his course was also actuated by high and fixed principle, by his love of peace, of liberty and his country. Mr. King left Washington on the day when the death of President Taylor was announced to Congress. He was much worn by his labors and the excitement of this critical period of public affairs. His death occurred at home July 25, 1850, and before his illness had hardly become known beyond the circle of the family and friends. His death was announced in the House of Representatives, July 27, by his colleague, Mr. Rockwell, who, in his eulogy of the deceased, characterized him as "unassuming, industrious, and conscientious in the discharge of every duty. In all the relations of private life he was without reproach; his life was an active blessing to all around him. It was made such by the religious principle which was the living spring of all his conduct. He was an humble, active, devoted Christian."

Mr. Winthrop gave his testimony as follows: "I can truly say that I have rarely met with a juster or worthier man, or with one more scrupulously faithful to every obligation to his neighbors, his country, and his God." These words are the highest eulogy that can be paid to the memory of any man.

Mr. King left a widow and three sons and three daughters to mourn his early death.

The names of his children, with dates of birth and death of four, are as follows:—

Ellen Maria, born January 16, 1825, died March 4, 1849.

Caroline Watts, born Jan. 21, 1826.

Sarah Page, born April 14, 1828, died June 28, 1863.

Benjamin Flint, born Oct. 12, 1830, died Jan. 24, 1868.

Daniel Webster, born March 1, 1833.

Edward Everett, born Aug. 1, 1835.

Rebecca Cleaves, born Nov. 18, 1837, died Feb. 15, 1867.

In this notice of the public career of Mr. King we have to add that he was an active member of the scientific bodies of the State into which his well-known scientific taste had introduced him. He was a member of the Essex Historical Society, of the Essex Natural History Society, was admitted a corresponding member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, November 25, 1849, and was also a member and Trustee of the Massachusetts Society for promoting Agriculture. He was Secretary of the Essex Agricultural Society from 1842 to 1844, and was one of its Vice-Presidents and Trustees until his death.

In the personal appearance of Mr. King there was nothing striking. His deportment and bearing would not suggest to a stranger any adaptation to positions of influence. His address was pleasing, but retiring and unpretentious. In statue he was of medium size. His countenance indicated a genial and amiable spirit rather than one born to rule. He was always scrupulously neat in his dress, with no aim to be fashionable. In fact, it seemed to be his aim to avoid notoriety in the various ways by which so many young public men seek it. His voice was flexible, and capable of great strength and endurance. In the choice of his religious associations he exhibited the same love of truth and independence which characterized him in every other sphere of his life.

He was a member of the Unitarian Church of South Danvers (now Peabody), and was always known as a sincere, devoted, and constant worshipper. He did not seek to make known his religious faith by criticism or controversy, but by a devout and and Christian life,—a life which fully sustained the highest eulogies pronounced over his grave, a life which has given to history a model for the honest statesman and the Christian gentleman.

Letter from a Former Resident.

DEAR PRESS,—The PRESS is always a welcome guest at our office and in our home, for aside from the ability and skill with which it is managed, it is exceedingly interesting as a reminder of the long ago, when we lived in your thriving town and bore an active part in all that pertained to the interest of the then undivided town of Danvers; and in nothing does your weekly visits awaken the memories of the past more than the reports of your annual town-meetings; and if your report of the last annual meeting of the town can be relied upon, it has lost nothing of its ancient renown for the display of the highest type of patriotism and oratory. It is gratifying to notice your increasing interest in the education of your youth, in maintaining a well-equipped fire department, and roads or streets that are not surpassed by any town in the county, and also to see that you do not forget your soldier boys, now that the fruits of war have ripened into the glorious harvest of peace. But in reading the reports of your annual town-meetings we are surprised and pained to miss most of the old familiar names that figured so largely in town affairs of thirty-five years ago.

Among the business men of that time we remember the names of Joseph Poor, who was then leaning upon the staff of age, Wm. Little, Sam. Harris, Caleb Osborn, Abel Proctor, among the tanners, and P. R. Southwick, who built the "big chimney" at the Southwick tannery; then there was the senior Upton, who had just graduated his glue business from boiling hide trimmings in a wash boiler to his enlarged works on the hill, while his son, E. W. Upton, had just formed a partnership with Walker to erect the Bleachery buildings, since grown to be one of the most important industries of your town.—Ben Goodrich, and Sam'l Ham, and Dustin were the first hotel keepers that we knew. The Kings did the farming, excepting what was done on Hog Hill and by the onion growers up the Lane. The shoe business was represented by the Putnams and Mudges, in the northern part of the town, and at the southern part we had Lewis Allen. A. P. Phillips, David Daniels, Francis Dane and Kendall Osborn had just commenced to lay the foundation stones upon which Mr. Dane reared and maintained his colossal business: his Burnet brogans were simply immense. Geo. R. Carleton published the Danvers Courier, but Fitch Poole made it sparkle all over with his unparalleled wit and wisdom. Who of you ever saw the equal of "Giles Cory's Dreams?"

Dr. Shedd was Town Clerk, and he held the office so long he thought he owned it, like Wingate Merrill, who was chosen Overseer of the Poor so many years that the Moderator, at one of the town-meetings, said: "Gentlemen, you will now prepare and bring in your ballots for Wingate Merrill as Overseer of the Poor." Dr. Nichols was the leading physician of the town, and as physician, poet, philanthropist or man he had no equal in the county in those days. Drs. Osgood and Osborne were young men at that date, the latter endearing himself to our family by his many kind attentions. We knew him first when we boarded with Mr. Wardwell in the Lunt House, near the Dr.'s home. Jown W. Proctor was not only a limb of the law, but about all we had of the law at that time.—Perkins and Wiley came along soon after. Speaking of Mr. Proctor, we are reminded of the fact that he never was fortunate enough to be found on the winning side of any movement in town, although he was a man of superior ability and proverbial common sense. We remember one instance where this peculiarity was turned to good account: When the first steps were being taken to secure a division of the town, the committee in favor of the project called on Mr. Proctor to secure his services as their legal adviser. Mr. Proctor, who was strongly in favor of the movement, calmly surveyed the whole question, and then remarked that he had been approached by the gentlemen on the other side, "and, perhaps," said he, "you had better let the other side retain me; then I shall be sure of my fee, and make the opposition unpopular, and thus help your cause better than I could by a direct forward movement." And so it was; for after the object was secured, Eben Sutton declared it was the best movement Mr. Proctor ever made. But what was Proctor without Upton the Sheriff, and why does the Sheriff live on while the Judge has pined away? We thought Stephen Upton was an old man when we were boys, and his hair was as white as his character. Perhaps he lives to disprove the old adage that the good die young.

But those town meetings! they were the events to be remembered! They were lively times, you may believe, when Winthrop Andrews, with his then young brother, Israel Andrews, used to come down from the Plains to warm us up on the subjects of the roads and sidewalks and the High School.—And then the next year we of the south would go up to North Danvers and unmask our batteries on the dwellers of the Plains, while the Warrens and Fowlers and Blacks, at the Port, and Matthew Hooper, at the Iron Works, held the balance of power, and gave it where it would do the most good, i. e. to themselves. Well, say what you will of those stormy town-meetings, and the bad blood that is sometimes stored up, and the animosities sometimes engendered, it is, nevertheless, true that these annual gatherings, with their exciting debates, are not only the conservators of the peoples' rights, but very efficient educators of the public mind and sentiment, and they also furnish favorable opportunity for the young orators to improve themselves in the whole art of a systematic arrangement of their thoughts, and a graceful, forcible delivery of the same. We very well remember our own maiden speech in old Winon Hall; we never felt so good in all our life as we did when we began, and we know we never felt so mean as we did when we got through, and we determined we would never try it again. But we did try again; for that first speech secured to us two of the best and most helpful friends of our life, Fitch Poole and Francis Dane.—Perhaps, my dear PRESS, we will tell you more about that when we see you again in your pleasant sanctum.

POLICE NOTES.—April 2. Honora Reardon came before the bar of justice to answer to two charges—drunkenness and assault. She was fined $1.00 for the former, and $3.00 and costs, $9.25, on the latter offense. Paid.

Michael Fenton, for drunkenness and assault, was fined $4.25.

April 4. Honora Reardon again appeared to answer for being intoxicated. Her case is continued four weeks.

The police are arresting young men in Lowell, who stand on the street corners Sunday nights, smoking, spitting tobacco juice on the sidewalk, swearing and insulting ladies.

It will be the means of giving the city a better name to strangers at least.

PEABODY.

Oh! Oh! Oh! Read the advertisement of the Shawmut Hat Store.

At the town meeting in a neighboring town a cross-eyed man who had in mind his war experience was heard to declare that he proposed to vote as he shot. His vote was probably counted among the "scattering."

After a long and tedious winter, the sunny days of spring tempt the unwary to cast aside carelessly the overcoat and recklessly discard winter flannels, and a severe cold is the result. These are the very days of all the year for us to guard against sickness by being prudent.

Friday and Saturday, April 8th and 9th, the Essex County Teachers' Association meets in City Hall, Newburyport. Free return tickets over the Eastern and Boston & Maine Railroads will be furnished by the Secretary at the meeting. A large attendance is expected.

Mr. C. H. Goulding, Walnut street, has a large and fine stock of furniture to select from, and is offering it at a very reasonable price. He has in his employ experienced workmen, who are prepared to do all kinds of upholstery work with promptness and in a thorough manner.

Our friend Mr. J. W. H. Ferguson has given us grounds for another item, probably, however, against his will. This time we mention that he has entered the employ of Starr C. Hewitt & Co., and may be found behind the counters of that well appointed store, which is always adding some new feature to accommodate the public.

The New England Conference of the Methodist Church will commence its eighty-second session in Worcester today, (April 6th) Bishop J. T. Peck presiding. As the conference will hold over the Sabbath, there will be no preaching services at the Methodist Church next Sunday. There will be Sabbath School in the morning, and a prayer meeting in the evening.

Mr. George B. Gay, an employe of Pinder & Winchester, while at work at a splitting machine last Monday, became unconscious, and it was thought he had been caught in the machine. He was conveyed to his boarding place at Mr. Smart's, on Lowell street. Medical aid was called, and it was pronounced apoplexy. He lived about seven hours after the attack. He was 57 years of age, and belonged in Concord, N. H.

JOHNSON'S UNIVERSAL CYCLOPEDIA.—The success which Captain Fentress, the gentlemanly and polished agent of the firm of A. J. Johnson & Co., of New York, has met with in our town in his canvass for this great national reference book, is somewhat wonderful, considering the magnitude of the work. It speaks well for the intelligence of our people to place such a work within reach of the young folks. The work is the best in our language, considering its large scope of subjects, and when we consider that each subject is written over the name of the leading authority in our country upon that subject, we feel that we have an authority at hand, worthy of consultation and credit. The terms upon which the work is sold enables every person to procure it, who may feel disposed to save three dollars per month for this purchase. The agent will be in Peabody and vicinity for several days longer, and will be happy to call upon any one wishing to examine the work, whether they wish to purchase it or not. It is an education for any young person to be applied as required. Success to the captain and his truly valuable work!

September 20, 1879, the New England Boot and Shoe Store was established at 186 Essex street, Salem, since which time, by the liberal use of printers' ink, backed up by keeping such a stock of goods that they could warrant them to be just as represented, and by polite and gentlemanly treatment of all customers by the manager, Mr. F. W. Lucas, and his assistants, it has become the leading boot and shoe store in Salem, and is to-day better known in the city and county than any of the old established firms in that line of business.

The Wakefield Rattan Company sent letters of thanks and checks for $100 each to the fire departments of Malden, Melrose, Stoneham and Wakefield.

Poet's Corner.

We Love The Absent Best.

Oh, the absent are the dearest
To a mother's loving heart;
And the depth of our affection
Is not known until we part.
We may view our sleeping darlings,
With a watchful pride and care;
And may breathe an earnest blessing
O'er each dusky head and fair.

But if there remains a pillow
Too uncrumpled, and too white;
And the chair a-near the bedside
Hold no garments for the night—
If we miss the shoes and stockings,
A torn jacket, or a dress—
If we miss a "Good-night, mother!"
And a dear one's warm caress—

Then our hearts yearn with affection
For the rover from our nest,
And we feel of all our darlings
That we love the absent best.
Ah, the absent are the dearest—
Mother hearts will answer yes!
The dear lips by far the sweetest
Are the lips we cannot kiss!

Robin Redbreast In The Snow.

Robin redbreast, sing your song,
On the tree-tops swinging!
Winter hoars are bright and long
Promised treasures bringing.
Ice and snow are left behind,
And our tropic splendor
Almost lures your throat to find
Songs with love-n tes tender

Robin redbreast, see! the rose
In her pride is blushing,
And the mocking-bird, at close
Of the day, is hushing
All the listening woods to hear
Notes of wond'rous trilling,
Till you think the spring is near
With her glances thrilling.

Many a day will come and go,
With its shade and shadow,
Ere the orange blossoms wi'l blow
Or the sunlit meadow
Don a robe of brighter green,
Starred with lillies lowly,
Or the Passion-flower be seen,
With its message holy.

Many a moon will wax and wane
Ere, in wooded hollow,
Birds will build their nests again,
Or the summer swallow
Seek a cooler sun and clime,
Hope to sad hearts bringing,
Or the northern brooklets chime
With the robin's singing.

Selected Story.

St. Agnes' Eve.

"And turn, soul-thoughted, to one lady there,
Whose heart had brooded all that wintry day,
On love, and wing'd St. Agnes' saintly care."

"And this is St. Agnes' Eve," said Mabel Hastings, laying down the volume of Keats' poems she had been reading aloud to her cousin Millicent. "Oh, Milly, let us try some charm to-night."

"I would gladly, Mabel, had I but the courage."

"Courage! Child, what have we to fear? And grandma won't know. She'll be fast asleep before 'the witching hour' of midnight—the time for the performance of spells and charms. But what further says Keats on the subject?

"'As supperless to bed they must retire,
Nor look behind, or sideways, but require
Of heaven, with upward eyes, for all that they desire.'"

"My dear Mab, if I saw anything, I should scream loud enough to awaken the Seven Sleepers."

"Milly, what a little goose you are! Now, I shall take Norah into my confidence and bid her say I have a headache, if Mr. Durnford and his nephew make one of their neighborly visits."

"And if they should, Mrs. Hastings will play piquet with the old gentleman, and Arthur will be so disconsolate in your absence, it will be out of my power to entertain him. But, Mab, wherefore raise up these fearful, shadowy spooks, when the substantial reality is prepared to throw himself at your feet? 'Himself,' did I say? Themselves, rather! There's Arthur Durnford—handsome, gentlemanly, wealthy—the owner of Elm's House. There's Raymond Carr—"

"Yes, one for each finger; for I see you are so preparing to count them; and all come here and make flattering speeches. But the only one I care for rarely enters these doors, and makes no sign, either by word or look, that I am aught to him. Yet I think he loves me, and it is to know that sweet truth that I would fain try some spell upon this St. Agnes' Eve."

"Wait, in patience, Mabel. Perhaps he has found no opportunity to reveal his sentiments?"

"He never will! He is poor, and I am rich."

"What is to be done—how surmount the difficulty?"

"It is insurmountable; unless, like a story we once read, it came to light that some other was the Chatelaine of grand old Ravenscliff, and I only a poor foundling. Now, Milly, you know all my little romance."

"The commencement only, dear. May the Fates send a happy ending."

The entrance of Norah interrupted their conversation. She was a pretty, bright Irish girl, and had lived some time at Ravenscliff, having been employed to assist Mrs. Brand, the housekeeper, during the absence of the family—now a very small one, consisting of Mrs. Hastings and her orphan grand-daughter, Millicent Grey being merely a visitor.

Mabel's mother had died in Italy, whither she had been ordered, too late to arrest the fell disease—consumption—to which she was so predisposed. Her father she had lost in her childhood.

To Norah—who, upon Mrs. Hastings' return to Ravenscliff, had been installed as her grand-daughter's maid—the two girls now related the former portion of their dialogue.

"An' shure," was her reply, "if there's a livin' sowl knows all about the spells an' the fairies, 'tis meself. But, me ladies, you should run down to the ould haunted well near Clifton Lane, where, upon a midsummer's night, an' Hallow E'en, an' this blissid St. Agnes' Eve, you'll see the face of your future husband. Indade, an' it's thrue"—for they looked incredulous—"for me sisthur, who then lived at home, went there a year since this very night."

"And did she see any one, Norah?"

"Troth an' she did, Miss Milly—a young man who was a-l'aning over the well, making belave to draw her a draught of the water; but whin about to take it, there wur nothin' but a branch of the green ivy in her hand. An' only a month after, me sisthur met the very same young man in his proper form, and now they're married, an' happy as the days are long."

The sound of the dinner-bell put an end to Norah's recital, and in the presence of Mrs. Hastings the conversation flowed into widely different channels.

Then, later in the evening, for they had no company upon that occasion, the old lady and the two younger ones adjourned to the library, where Mabel wiled her grandmother into relating tales and legends of the olden days.

Ravenscliff was situated upon an eminence in one of the northern counties of England, surrounded by great woods; on one side, in the far distance, rose a range of hills, while on the other might be discerned the blue line of the ocean.

But in the fair spring days many a grassy nook, spangled with wild flowers, could be found within those dark woods, where the little brooklet sang as it wandered along, and the birds echoed its sweet song—'twas little wonder that some of the latent superstitions of the "north countrie" lingered amidst such surroundings.

Upon parting at their several chamber doors, the wiser and less romantic Millicent decided upon going immediately to bed, "the night," she said, "being intended for repose;" but not so, fair, love-lorn Mabel, who, gazing from her window upon the wide expanse of the starry heavens, softly repeated:

"Most gracious night! thou were not made for slumber."

It was irresistible—she would seek to know her destiny that night! So, flinging a warm white shawl over her head, and wrapping it closely over her throat, she crept quietly down the wide oaken stairs, then out by a little door into the garden, where the white frost glittered upon each leaf of the dark evergreens. Unless by the carriage-road, which was circuitous, the paths from Ravenscliff were steep and rugged; but Mabel was brave and determined; and inspired by love, of what is not one capable?

"If I see him, in imagination, for it can be in no other manner," she whispered, to herself, "I will wait—yes, wait, faithful to the ideal; for love me I know he does."

The haunted well was, as Norah had described it, near the wayside upon the road to the little town of Clifton, and the few lights glimmering there took somewhat from the loneliness of Mabel's walk. Then a little dingle, lying all in shadow, was reached, and the gentle gurgling of the well's water announced its close vicinity.

Mabel, drawing her shawl more closely around, prepared to descend the few steps cut in the rocky cleft. They were slippery from the unceasing plash; the girl lost her footing, and the next moment lay prone and senseless on the cold, hard ground.

There must have been some powerful link of sympathy—one of those strange chords which unites heart to heart—for a passing horseman was impelled to take that very path, following close upon Mabel's steps.

He was returning to his home in Clifton, and had left the high road for a nearer one, but, fearing the stumbling of his horse, was leading the animal along. A lady's handkerchief lay at his feet, and as he gathered it up, a peculiar subtle fragrance brought the fair image of Mabel Hastings to his mind; then imprinting a reverential kiss upon that delicate morsel of lace and cambric, he hid it within his coat breast, to be laid away with a few now withered flowers, treasured as her gift. A faint moan struck upon the traveler's ear.

"Who is there?" he demanded.

There was no answer; but looking around, he descried poor Mabel lying where she had fallen.

"Great heavens!" he continued; "it is Miss Hastings."

He raised her carefully, holding her in his strong arms. With a little, shuddering sigh, the dark eyes unclosed and fixed themselves upon his own.

"I thought you would come, Doctor Vane," she murmured; then her head sank upon his breast and she relapsed into forgetfulness.

Well might Ernest Vane feel bewildered by that strange apparition and still stranger words, joy, surprise and fear for her safety all mingling in his thoughts. Then he was compelled to place his lovely burden upon the cold steps, while searching in a little wallet he carried for some restorative, and bind his own handkerchief over her sorely-cut and bleeding temple, all the while imploring her by endearing words to arouse herself, or both must perish of the cold. To Pygmalion's statue, life was given by all-powerful Love; so, surely, by the same means, the fainting Mabel might be restored to consciousness.

"Miss Hastings," was the doctor's first mark, "will you leave all matters to me in this emergency? Think it is a brother who is caring for you."

That was not a very easily supposition, but Mabel acquiesced.

He lifted her light form upon the horse, saying:

"Try to sit firmly, for I know you are a good rider. White Surrey is very gentle, and I shall soon lead him out of this rugged path."

Then, mounting behind, he turned in the direction of Ravenscliff.

How safe she felt, sustained by his protecting arm, though all the time wondering by what wild words she had addressed him.

"Oh, Doctor Vane," she cried, "what will grandmamma think, and Cousin Milly, and every one, when they hear of my visit to the haunted well?"

"My dear Miss Mabel, we will not name it. Where I found you shall remain a profound secret between ourselves and—St. Agnes."

"I thank you, Doctor! You are very considerate. But there are the old lodge-keeper and his wife? How scared they will be!"

"We are certainly a rather weird-looking party. You, enveloped in that snowy wrap and mounted upon White Surrey, have some resemblance to a wraith, or water-kelpie, or some other dream of the imagination; while I must be the demon-knight who has spirited you away. But here we are at the lodge, and, out of consideration to the old couple's nerves, I will alight and open the gate."

In a few minutes the Hall was reached, and to Mrs. Brand, Norah, and others of the wondering servants who came at length in answer to the doctor's summons, he explained that Miss Hastings, tempted by the beauty of the evening, had most imprudently rambled beyond the park gates, and had fallen on the frost-covered road, where he, upon his homeward ride, had fortunately found her.

Then Mabel, desiring that her grandmother might not be made acquainted with the accident until morning, was taken upstairs to her own warm room, where the wounded temple was dressed, a portion of Mrs. Brand's celebrated elderberry syrup administered, and Mab bidden to think of nothing but rest and sleep, though probably that injunction was not fully obeyed.

Well, the formidable barrier was eventually broken down, and Ernest Vane did speak the few words that never would have been uttered but for that eventful night.

At first, Mrs. Hastings strongly objected; but, on ascertaining the doctor's family were very well connected, she somewhat relaxed.

"And you know, dear grandma," urged Mabel, "if I were to marry Mr. Durnford, I should be compelled to go and keep up the dignity of Elm House; or that Florentine nobleman, who writes those long love-letters—how far snudered we should be! Doctor Vane has a good practice. He will be rich some day; and, grandma, I love him."

That was unanswerable; so, as usual, Mab had her own way. The young couple were offered a suite of rooms in the old Hall; but Ernest declined, saying he should be at his office all day and with them for relaxation only.

Mrs. Hastings, at length, liked him greatly. He was, she said, kind and attentive as her own son had been.

He would bring her the newest magazines and books, tell her the events of the day, and read aloud when her own eyes were tired.

"Are you satisfied now, dear grandma?" whispered Mab.

"Yes, dear, fully. Youth, and love, and life do not last so many years. I thank God for your deep happiness, my children; and for myself, I am content."

Miscellaneous.

There were several loungers gathered in the back room of a Galveston saloon, says the News, and somehow or other the subject of newspapers came up for discussion. One man said that editors were more jealous of each other than any other class; that they never had a good word for each other. A long-haired youth, with a solemn look, spoke up, and, heaving a sigh, said that he had some experience with editors, and he found them the reverse of jealous of each other, and that a Texas editor was always willing to deny himself comforts for the benefit of a brother editor.—"Where did that happen?" "It happened in a Western Texas town where I lived," sighed the young man. "I had dashed off a little poem of ten or fifteen cantos on "Beautiful Spring." There were two rival newspapers in the place—the Bugle and Trombone. I had heard that the editors were deadly enemies and sighed to shed each other's gore, and I was afraid if I let the Trombone publish my poem first there would be a deadly encounter. I finally resolved to have it appear simultaneously in both papers. When I called on the editor of the Trombone he said that the editor of the Bugle had a large family and that he would prefer it to appear in the Bugle as personally he loved the editor of the Bugle. I then went to the Bugle man, and he said the editor of the Trombone was his warmest personal friend, and he would be glad if I would let him have the poem, as it would be putting bread in his mouth and clothes on his back. So owing to the love those editors had for each other, I couldn't get my poem into either of their papers, and it hasn't been published yet. I never saw men so anxious to help each other out of distress," and once more the long-haired poet sighed like a bellows. There was a pause, and an old coon with a frost-bitten nose drawled out: "Yer never tried them same editors with a cash advertisement, did yer?" The poet answered in the negative, whereat the audience significantly nodded their heads and winked at each other.

"Your name is Sargent, I believe," said a fierce looking man, as he entered the editorial room of a newspaper in southern Illinois, a short time since.—The man who was writing looked up. "You are the editor of this paper, are you, sir?" "I am." "Well, Mr. Sargent, in your last paper you said I kept a fierce dog that was a nuisance and ought to be shot. I have come, Mr. Sargent, to tell you that you are an infamous liar." "Ah," replied the editor, "your name is Swisher, I believe." "That is my name." "Well, Swisher, you are an insolent puppy. If you are not out of this office by the time I have finished writing this article I shall give you a kicking." Swisher squared himself and danced about the room, daring the editor to come on. The editor kept on writing. "Be calm, Swisher," said he, "take a seat if you're going to stay. I will attend to you, Swisher, when I have finished this." The visitor glared fiercely at him, braced himself up against the wall, and drew up his feet again in fighting attitude. The editor headed a fresh page of paper with a "14" and continued to write. A hour passed by.—Swisher changed his position occasionally, and struck out now and then, as if knocking down an imaginary foe, and was as fierce and savage in his aspect as when he came in. Oblivious of his presence the editor wrote on. Another hour passed away. Swisher was wilting, but the editor scratched away as vigorously as when he began. "Wha—what's that infernal long article about?" inquired the visitor at last, in a somewhat altered voice. The editor looked up. "Ah, Swisher, you here yet! I'm writing an editorial about the Necessity of Reform in the Civil Service.—When I get it finished, Swisher, I'll attend to your ——" "Great heavens!" said Swisher, as he sat wearily by the door, "he'll write for six hours yet, if he's got on that subject. I'll pulvurize him, gosh dern him, if I have to stay here till to-morrow morning." [We have kept the forms open to the last moment, hoping to give the full particulars of this affair, but at this writing the editor has not finished the article.—Ed.]—Printer Advertiser.

A Letter to Chancellor Crosby.—Dr. Howard Crosby has, since his lecture on temperance, been the recipient of scores of epistolary favors.—Some of these are official and ought to see the light. We publish one:

DARE TO DO RIGHT.

The Reform Club,
Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 3, 1881.

Mr. Howard Crosby—Dear Sir: Judas Iscarrot after betraying Jesus Christ had common decencey anough to go out and hang himself and you will wish you had done the same thing before you are 10 years older for in that time you will have sent 10 Thousand Souls down to Hell by your teachings in your late article on Temperance there is not a Bar Room Bummer a Harlot or a Saloon Keeper in the County but what is taken shelter under your cunning devise or excuse of making Drunkards you will not be the Twin Brother of Bob Ingersoll and evry moderate drinker in the land will laud you to the Skies and then when they get where I was they will curse you as I have a Thousand times Bob Ingersoll only ten thousand times more for you come under the guise as a Christian just such teachings as you proclaim are carrying 60,000 Thousand Souls down to Hell evry year and you know it. you could have provd for Slavery just what you have proved for Drunkard making from the Bibel and on just such strong grounds. this from one that got just such teachings as you quote and was nearly destroyed by them I say again you will wish you had done as Judas did before you are 10 years older or you have not as much Religion as Bob Ingersoll has the curse of every reformed drunkard will always follow you and your teaching Truly yours J. Schumacher, Pres't of Ann Arbor Reform Club, and a Reformed Drunkard if you want to know eny more about me I will refer you to the Hon. Thomas M. Cooly Judge of the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan and Dr. J. B. Angel President of the Great University of the State.

Mr. J. Schumacher is, perhaps, not more intolerant than Neal Dow, but he is a little more intense.

Upon being spoken to concerning St. Jacobs Oil, our fellow townsman, Mr. Theodore Wakelee, said: I had been suffering with rheumatism, and obtained the greatest relief from the use of St. Jacobs Oil. It has also been used in my family for some time, and has never been found to fail in giving prompt relief.—Battle Creek, (Mich.) Daily Journal.

Many have an idea they are serving the Lord when they are meddling with what is none of their business.

When certain powers are claimed for an article, and everybody testifies that it does more than is claimed for it, to gainsay its worth is useless. This is the substance of the St. Jacobs Oil record.

A Mysterious Woman.

A MYSTERY TO PHYSICIANS—A SHOP GIRL'S EXPERIENCE — SOMETHING ABOUT A WELL-KNOWN NURSERY MAN—THE OPINION OF A HANOVER-STREET MERCHANT.

The name of the Shakeress, Faith Whitcomb, has become a household word. Her remedies are performing the most remarkable cures, as our best physicians and druggists freely admit. Messrs. G. C. Goodwin & Co., the extensive patent medicine dealers, state that they have never known a new remedy to become so popular in so short a time. The demand is simply wonderful.—From a visit to the other wholesale druggists we obtain the same report. The demand has become so great that a branch of Faith Whitcomb's Laboratory has recently been established in this city, and in order to fill orders has been running day and night for the past ten days. The fact is, as the manager of Dr. Gleason's pharmacy on Harrison av. remarked, "It is a remedy that people come back the second time for." Wm. A. Chapin, the popular druggist under the United States Hotel, says:—"We have known of very satisfactory cures being effected among our customers by Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. It is certainly the best lung remedy now in the market, and we sell more of it than of any other." Mrs. L. M. Pratt, an elderly lady living at 38 Hudson st., was cured of a very dangerous cough in an incredible short space of time. Sam'l E. Brown, 299 Washington st., the engraver, says it cured his cough and is the best remedy he ever used. George Ellis of Charlestown, the veteran crockery man, for 40 years the largest importer in this city, says his wife was cured of consumption by Faith Whitcomb's Balsam after her physician had given her up, and after all other remedies had failed. E. C. Mackaye, 178 South st., was overworked in business, with a bad cough and no appetite; two bottles of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam cured his cough and gave him a good appetite, and, as he says, "made a new man of him." The noted horticulturist, J. W. Manning, who for 34 years has conducted the largest nursery in New England, by overwork brought on weakness of the kidneys, and was generally run down; Faith Whitcomb's Balsam has given him an appetite, and he pronounces it "a wonderful tonic." H. H. Mayville, 18 Lyman st., was cured of a severe cold, and is loud in his praise of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. Miss Sturling, 10 Utica st., reports to the druggist that six weeks ago she lost her voice by an attack of bronchitis; the doctor could not relieve her, but a dollar bottle of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam effected a complete cure. Miss Josie A. McMaken, who was forewoman at the factory of the Boston Elastic Fabric Co., 175 Devonshire st., was obliged to give up her situation last summer because of overwork and a distressing cough; her physician pronounced her lungs diseased and thought she was going into quick consumption; two other prominent physicians (whose names she will give you) gave the same opinion; she was advised to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam—she immediately commenced to gain—her cough is gone, and the third bottle has effected a cure which astonishes her physician and all her friends. This Balsam is composed of pure herbs, carefully gathered and cured by the Society of Shakers—warranted free from all deleterious substances, and is of inestimable value to the weak and debilitated. The aged receive new life; young girls, overtasked at school—growing too fast, with insufficient exercise, should take Faith Whitcomb's Balsam every morning.—It will be a blessing to them that will influence their whole lives. The price, 50 c., enables all to try it. Mrs. H. L. C. Walcott, 114 Shawmut st., Chelsea, says she was almost at death's door, and seeing Faith Whitcomb's Balsam advertised, she bought a 50 c. bottle, which has removed the soreness from her lungs, has already eased her cough, and she has faith to believe that it will cure her. Inquire of either of the parties, and decide for yourself, if this Shaker preparation, which is creating such a sensation, really has the wonderful properties that are claimed for it.—Boston Herald.

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes for $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price in currency, or three cent postage stamps. Prepared only by Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth Street, Philadelphia, Pa., to whom letters should be addressed. Sold by all prominent druggists.

☞ Thousands of Drunkards are made annually by the use of medicines called tonics and bitters, containing a large portion of rum and other kinds of spirits, (all of which should be labeled Destruction and Death.) Dr. Kennedy has put up the "Favorite Remedy" in form of a Syrup, without one drop of spirits. Hence, it may be given to persons of all ages, of either sex, who require a medicine to purify the blood, regulate the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, or to give tone and strength to the system. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 a bottle.

☞ There are many forms of nervous debility in men that yield to the use of Carter's Iron Pills. Those who are troubled with nervous weakness, night sweats, etc., should try them.

☞ Teachers, authors and others of sedentary habits highly prize Malt Bitters.

LIFE-SAVING BY FIREMEN.

The symbol of the old Volunteer Fire Department of the city of New York was the figure of a fireman holding in his brawny arms a child whom he had rescued from the flames. It was an emblem not less true than beautiful, yet many an old comrade does not recall a single instance of a comrade's saving anybody's life. Mr. Carlisle Norwood remembers but one case. Nor does Mr. Peter R. Warner, who adds, however, that "any human being would exert himself to save a fellow-creature's life, and I am sure that if I had gone into a house and saved a woman or child, I should have dismissed the subject from my mind in a month. If a fireman could save life he would do so, and not think much about it afterward." Mr. Michael Eichell, once an engineer in the department, and for twenty-four years in actual service there, does not remember a single case in which a fireman saved a human life. Mr. Harry Howard, ex-Chief Engineer, says that "firemen often saved lives, but they are too modest to talk about it," yet he remembers only two instances. "J. R. Mount, recently a messenger in the Department of Public Buildings, saved the lives of a woman and child at a fire at No. 89 Bowery, a furniture establishment. The Common Council voted him a silver pitcher as a testimonial. I don't care to speak of myself, but I remember that at the fire in Jenning's clothing store, No. 231 Broadway, after the roof had fallen in and killed thirteen firemen, I heard a boy shouting from the second story, 'Save me! save me!' I went up and found him wedged in, surrounded by a part of the fallen roof, an iron safe, and a wall. Many years afterward, when a rich merchant of San Francisco—his name was S. A. Van Praag—he called at my house, and as I was out, left his card, inscribed with the words, 'The boy that you saved from Jennings's fire.'" Mr. John A. Cregier describes Mount's performance as a most heroic act—the most remarkable instance he remembered of a fireman's saving life. The ladder being too short, it was put upon a hogshead, Mount ascended to the fourth floor, helped a woman out of the window and down the ladder—a most difficult feat—and fainted when at last he saw her safe. Another old fireman, who is unwilling to have his name mentioned, says that on the Fourth of July, 1831, he saved a child from a burning building. "Soon after we reached the place with the engine, a mother came rushing down stairs, shrieking that her baby was left behind. I immediately hurried up stairs, took the infant from its cradle on the second floor, descended with it amid considerable smoke and handed it to her." This old fireman never told the deed to any one but the members of his own family, and he is unwilling at this late day to set up as a hero. His many friends would be surprised if they heard his name. He is one of the most prominent capitalists in the city of New York. In the voluminous manuscript minutes of Engine No. 13, in five large folio volumes, dating back as far as the 9th of November, 1791, and continuing until the 8th of June, 1847, there is not a solitary record of a fireman saving anybody's life. Of the almost as voluminous manuscript records of Engine No. 21 the same observation is true. After a careful reading of both series of minutes, I have failed to find even mention of such heroism. The minutes of Engine No. 5 and of Engine No. 42 tell the same story so far as I have been able to discover them. Yet the the well known symbol of the fireman with a saved child in his arms, which stands in white marble upon the top of the Firemen's Monument in Greenwood Cemetery, which formerly stood over the facade of Firemen's Hall, in Mercer street, and above the entrance to Engine No. 2's house, in Eldridge street, and which in varied forms graces the engraved pictures on firemen's certificates and ball tickets, is appropriate in the highest degree. It represents the readiness of brave men to become the saviors of their fellows, and the modesty which in song and story has so often been the accompaniment of valor.—Harper's Magazine.

WHERE OUR FORESTS ARE GOING.

To make shoe pegs enough for American use consumes annually 100,000 cords of timber, and to make our lucifer matches, 300,000 cubic feet of the best twine are required every year. Lasts and boot-trees take 500,000 cords of birch beech, and maple, and the handles of tools 500,000 more. The baking of our bricks consumes 2,000,000 cords of wood, or what would cover with forest about 50,000 acres of land. Telegraph poles already up represent about 800,000 trees, and their annual repair consumes about 300,000 more. The ties of our railroads consume annually thirty years' growth of 75,000 acres, and to fence all our railrords would cost $45,000,000, with a yearly expenditure of $15,000,000 for repairs. These are some of the ways in which American forests are going. There are others; our packing boxes, for instance, cost, in 1874, $12,000,000, while the timber used each year in making wagons and agricultural implements is valued at more than $100,000,000.—Fishkill Standard.

One watch set right will do to set many by; but on the other hand, one that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighborhood; and the same may be said of the example we set to those around us.

The idle word that I speak to-day, shall I not meet it again and again at the crossing of the ways until the world shall be no more.—Arab Proverb.

CLOSE COMMUNIONISTS.

"If there ain't a change in the religious world pretty soon I'm going to throw down the gospel and take up the grubbing hoe," remarked an old man yesterday. "I've rid a circuit for forty odd years, and I'm treated worse now than when I fust began."

"What is your cause of complaint, parson?" asked a bystander.

"My recentest cause is one what flanks all others," answered the circuit rider, wiping a drop of water from the end of his peaked nose with the sleeve of his brown jeans coat. "I have preached a good deal here in Little Rock, and until recently it had allers been my belief that if a man could pull through here, he could pull through anywhere. But I was blind wrong. Yesterday I went in the Gum Lick District, where I had an appointment to preach in the school-house. When I got there I found that old man Wiggles, a Hardshell Baptist, had got in ahead of me. I went in without any ill-feeling, intending to wait until he got through, when I would muster my congregation and take the field. After awhile he got through preaching, and announced that sacrament would be taken when the boy got back from the still-house. 'My congregation uses whisky instead of wine,' he went on, 'and Arkansaw cornbread instead of your wheat fixens." Just then the boy arrived, and the old man took the cob stopper from the black chunk bottle and began to pour out the whisky. Now, if there's anything that strikes me natural, it is whisky, and thinking that I could preach better after being warmed up a little, I went up to the table and reached out after the bottle, when the old man looked at me and said:

"Ain't you a Methodist?"

"Yes, sir."

"Don't you know that we don't allow the Methodists to commune with us. Do you take this place for a free lunch counter, eh? No, sir; if you are not a customer of the Lord you can't eat and drink here."

"I've got a right to the table," I said, "and I'll help myself."

"Tech that bottle and I'll lift you."

"I grabbed the bottle, and the old man struck me with a pone of corn-bread and knocked me down. Then somebody kicked me, and all hands dragged me out."

"You got into a nest of close communionists, did you?" asked the bystanders.

"Ruther like it. Why, them fellers would snatch a piece of bread from Jacob, and tear the bosom outen Abraham's shirt. No, sir; until there is more freedom in church I shan't renew my connections. Where can a fellow get a two-pound hoe?—Little Rock Gazette.

BOILING WATER ON PAPER.

The following experiments for boiling water and melting lead on a sheet of paper are given in Nature: Take a piece of paper and fold it up, as schoolboys do, in a square box without a lid. Hang this up to a walking-stick by four threads, and support the stick upon books or other convenient props. Then a lamp or taper must be placed under the dainty caldron. In a few minutes the water will boil. The only fear is lest the threads should catch fire and let the water spill into the lamp and over the table. The flame must, therefore not be too large. The paper does not burn, because it is wet; and if it resisted the wet, it still would not burn through, because the heat imparted to it on one side by the flame would be very rapidly conducted away by the water on the other. Another experiment of a similar nature, but perhaps even more striking, is as follows: Twist up the edges of a common playing card, or other bit of card-board, so as to fashion it into a light tray. On this tray place a layer of small shot or bits of lead, and heat it over the flame of a lamp. The lead will melt, but the card will not burn. It may be charred a little round the edges, but immediately below the lead it will not be burned, for here again the lead conducts off the heat on one side as fast as it is supplied on the other.

FREAKS OF A SOMNAMBULIST.

Somnambulists perform some strange freaks in their sleep. A young man of our acquaintance, says the Napa (Cal.) Reporter, a while ago got up from his bed, dressed himself, went to the stable when it was pitch dark, harnessed a working team of horses and put them to a wagon. The boy's father had been awakened by the noise of the barn door opening, and got up in time to observe the greater portion of his proceedings. The sleeping boy, after hitching up, got upon the wagon, drove through a very narrow gate to a pile of manure and loaded up. He then took his course for the field to sprinkle the load, when his father put a stop to his further somnambulistic proceedings by shaking him into a wide-awake state. The boy was employed at least half an hour in the above way, and when awakened was completely oblivious of everything that had transpired.

Some clocks do not strike. You must look at them if you would know the time. Some men do not talk their Christianity; you must look at their lives if you would know what the gospel can do for human nature. But a clock need not be incorrect because it strikes; a man need not be inconsistent because he speaks as well as acts.

Stories first heard at a mother's knee are never wholly forgotten, a little spring that never quite dries up on your journey through scorching years.

The mind has more room in it than one would imagine, if you would furnish the apartments.

SPRING CLEANING.

Pumice Soap—the Foxboro make—the best thing out for taking off dirt from paint or the hands. 3 cts. per cake, or 30 cts per dozen. Also Ball Soap at 25 cts per dozen. These are both way under price, and should be bought at once.

COMBS.

Children's Rubber Round Combs, in pretty styles, at five cents each; with wide fancy backs very nice and durable, for ten cents. Rubber fine Combs, five cents each, usually sold at ten cents. Heavy fancy back rubber dressing Combs, at ten cents each. The above are from a job lot of combs and are decided bargains.

CORSETS.

We will show you the same Corset that is sold on Essex Street for half a dollar—for thirty-one cents—and we give a Set of Cards with each pair. Our fifty cent Corset is superior to any offered at that price. Corsets for 75 cents and $1, Madam Foy's and Dr. Warner's Corsets, at PEABODY'S.

N. B.

Those Linen Diapers at eighty-eight cents, and the White Quilts at eighty-nine cents, are almost gone. Don't blame us if you do not get a supply; we have told you the whole story for two weeks—only a few left—come at once.

WE MARK DOWN

To-day a thirty-five cent Silk Hdkf to twenty-five cents. They were cheap at the old price, and are a big bargain at the new one—twenty-five cents—large size and nice colors. We have also a full stock of nicer Hdkfs—50c, 75c, and $1 each. A Stock second to none in the State.

THOSE

10 cent yard wide Cambrics, in choice colors, are selling rapidly; they are the same goods that are sold for 15 cents all about. Also a full line of spring colors in Prints. Black Cashmeres from 38 cents up. Black Silks a specialty.

REMNANTS

Of White Linens at about two-thirds their market value. This is a chance seldom offered, as linens are staple goods and very rarely come into the market much under price—all grades, from 25 cts. to $1 per yard, in short lengths. Examine them.

NEW MILLINERY.

Choice Ribbons in all widths; nice Flowers and Feathers; Straw Hats, Bonnets, &c., in all the newest and best designs. We shall receive all the new designs as soon as they appear in the market. We have connections with the importers, so that we shall be able to show a very attractive stock this season.

THAT EMBROIDERED TIE

At twenty-five cents, has been ordered by mail from all over the New England States, and from several States out of New England. We will guarantee to send a better Tie for the money than can be bought anywhere. Send us your orders—send three cent stamps anywhere from 25 cts. to $1, and you shall have the full value of your money, and more than you can obtain at home. A few only of the Tie that we send for nine three cent stamps are left.

HOSIERY.

As we have done for nearly a quarter of a century, we shall continue to do this season—i. e., have very better stock of Hosiery for Ladies and Misses than any other dealer, and we shall sell them at such prices that no one will try to compete with us. We have Hosiery for 5 cents, and from that up to $2.50 per pair. All the latest and choicest designs. Handsome pencil stripes, for 25 cents—regular 38 cent goods, &c.. &c.

GLOVES.

Our stock of Gloves, which we open to-day, is choice and desirable. As our orders were given very early, we are enabled to offer many styles that late buyers cannot obtain. We have given Kid Gloves especial attention, and are prepared to show a very choice stock at way down prices. In Lace Mitts and gloves we show pretty novelties.

BUTTONS, &C.

Dress Buttons, Garment Buttons, Gimps, Fringes, Ornaments, Tassels, Girdles, &c., we shall show as good a stock as usual, and our customers know that ours is always the best and cheapest line in the county. In Silk Girdles we we have just opened a fine line of the new shades. Also black and black with beads, &c.. &c.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Now we strike at the root of the business. We offer pure Linen Hdkfs., in ladies' sizes, at 4 cents each, or six for twenty-one cents. Better ones for 5 cents, or six for twenty-seven cents. Better still or 6 cents, or six for thirty-three cents. Better still at 8 cents. or six for forty-three cents. And one more lot at 10 cents, or six for fifty-two cents. These are all splendid bargains—way below the regular price and well worth the attention of the public.

OUR STOCK

Was never in better condition, and we anticipate an increase on the very large sales of previous seasons. We shall try to show bargains that will make it for the interest for every lady to visit our store before making her spring purchases.

Respectfully,

JOHN P. PEABODY,

227 & 229 Essex Street, Salem.

The White Murder.

Just 51 years ago to-day (April 6, 1830), Capt. Joseph White, an aged and wealthy citizen of Salem, was murdered in his bed. There was great excitement caused, and very extraordinary measures were taken to obtain knowledge of the murderers; but for some time nothing definite was ascertained. At length, and almost accidentally, light was thrown upon the tragedy, and a number of persons were arrested, including Richard Crowninshield and George Crowninshield, (brothers,) and Joseph J. Knapp (Jr.) and John Francis Knapp, (brothers.) The elder of the brothers Knapp was the husband of a relative of Captain White, the daughter of his niece, Mrs. Beckford, who lived with the old gentleman, perhaps as his housekeeper. The evidence given on the trials that took place proved that Joseph J. Knapp, Jr., procured the murder of Captain White, with the expectation of getting his property.—The assassin was Richard Crowninshield, who was paid a sum of money—a thousand dollars, we think, was the amount—to enter the chamber of Captain White, and there slay him. Crowninshield did his devilish work, and did it, too, not only thoroughly, but brutally, as if he liked the bloody job. At noon on the day of the murder, Mrs. Beckford quitted her uncle's house, and even Salem, going to Wenham; and it was said that the window of her room was left unfastened, and even open, and that the assassin entered the White mansion through it, and so was able to get at his victim. Richard Crowninshield committed suicide, leaving a scrap of poetry (so called) behind him, of which the writer recollects, though perhaps not quite correctly, only two lines:

"Where imps of hell and devils rome,
There go, seek out your native home."

His motive in killing himself was said to be his desire that all others of the accused might escape, as he supposed that if he, the principal, were not tried and condemned, no proceedings could be taken against the lesser offenders. But John Francis Knapp—he was commonly called Frank Knapp—was put upon trial, and convicted and executed, though it may be doubted if he suffered legally and justly. The matter was severely discussed among lawyers, and the general impression, out of this state was, that he did not have fair play for his life. But the real object of putting him upon trial, and executing him, was to get at his much elder brother, Joseph Jenkins Knapp, Jr.—Frank was only about twenty years old—who was the grand villain of the whole infernal business. The elder brother was tried and convicted, and speedily executed.—George Crowninshield was tried and acquitted. There would have been more trials, and more executions, but that public sentiment was against further bloodshed; and unpleasant allusions to the Salem Witchcraft murders began to be made, and hints were becoming common that Salem loved blood. This may have been, and most probably it was, very unjust; but the feeling was strong, and three deaths for one was held to be sufficient atonement. Captain White was killed, and Dick Crowninshield and the two Knapps were gone from the world. As if nothing might be wanting to make the case utterly exceptional, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, the able, learned and experienced Isaac Parker, died very suddenly, after having charged the Grand Jury. He would have presided at the trials, had he lived. Justice Putnam, senior member of the Court, presided, Wilde and Morgan being his associates. No subsequent tragedy in Massachusetts has equalled the Salem Murder of fifty-one years since.

"Old Abe," the famous Wisconsin war eagle, died at the State Capitol on the 28th ult. He was in more than thirty engagements and battles. When purchased for the Eighth Wisconsin Regiment he was about two months old, having been captured by an Indian. He was lost in St. Louis while on the way to the front, but was found on the top of a chimney, and captured. It is estimated that the receipts for exhibiting him in aid of charitable exhibitions were not less than eighty thousand dollars.

The Republican who writes this paragraph thinks that the Republicans in the United States Senate have done themselves no credit by their alliance with Mahone of Virginia. It was a nasty bargain, and it ought never to have been entered into. — Cambridge Press.

PEABODY.

Old Folks' Concert.

The Institute was well filled last evening by an audience who were gathered to hear the songs of the olden time, rendered by a chorus of ladies and gentlemen connected with the Baptist Church. This chorus, under the leadership of Mr. Littlefield, gave their numbers with a precision which reflects great credit upon them and their efficient leader. The costumes of the ladies of the chorus were such as add new admiration to that with which we have regarded the ladies of our town, and ample opportunity of scrutinizing each was given by the dress parade or procession about the hall of the full chorus. This procession was headed by ye timeist, Jerubbabel Littlefield, resplendent in an antique suit of black velvet, silver embroidered, with the appropriate embellishments of white queue, wig, etc.

Next came Miss Grace Thomas, to whom we must give the palm. She was dressed in a plum colored silk, with white lace at neck, and with plumes in her powdered coiffure.

"Deliverance Sunlight" Shackley, glorious in a dress of yellow print, besprinkled with flowers, with sleeves cut a la leg of mutton, and with a face beaming with smiles, gave full warrant for the assumption of her middle name.

Miss Josie Locke, whose stage name we could not discover, was enrobed in a most striking costume, which consisted of a rich silk brocade of a general green color, with scarlet skirt, and with a cuir colored calash, the form of which it would take a geographer to describe, but which gave a rich setting to the brilliancy of her face, and added much to the dignity of her presence.

"Angel Mehitable" Chute, with an enormous calash of green silk above a costume which must have made somebody's grandmother perfectly irresistible, was paired with Timothie's wife Hannah, (she that was a Thomas) who appeared in a changeable brown silk, cut with a remarkably short waist; while Miss French, of South Peabody, appeared in a white pointed waist, which dress adorned her grandmother on that lady's nuptial day.

Many other dresses of as many different styles were equally noticeable, but memory fails us, and we can only say that those who did not see with us last evening were great losers.

The programme included some twenty numbers, the larger portion of which were well-known hymns, which formed the repertoire of our musical ancestors. A few "worldlie songs" were interspersed, one of which, "Cousin Jedediah," was received with great enthusiasm.

Dame Bartlett, as one of our grandmothers, sang "Grandmother's Advice" in so taking a manner as to cause a demand for a repetition, which was kindly given.

Goodman LeFavour, of Salem, added to the variety of the concert by two solos on banjo and zylophone, which were repeated in deference to the demands of the audience.

The instrumental parts of the programme and the accompaniments to the choruses were performed by the orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Benjamin Upton, and which appeared upon the programmes as Shalmenezer Gideon's Band, and we can testify that ye fiddling and ye blowing were in moste harmonious concorde with ye singing.

Dame Foote, helpmeet to Goodman Foote, which sings tenor, did play the harpsichord for the women singers.

The chorus was assisted by Miss Rose Stewart, of Boston, who, by a brilliant rendering of Rode's Aire and variations, won an enthusiastic encore, to which she replied by a bewitching song, entitled "Supposing." Her second number was Abt's Cuckoo Song, which so pleased her audience that a second encore was called, when she sang with much expression and tenderness Gounod's Slumber Song. Miss Stewart's brilliancy of execution and clearness of tone, coupled with her very bright and pretty presence and manners, won the favor of our people, and many expressed the hope that this introduction might lead to her further appearance here.

At the close of the concert the chorus and their friends repaired to the vestry of the Baptist church, where a generous feast of good things for the inner man was served, the same being given by the friends of the chorus.

In closing, we must congratulate the originators of this concert, and those who have aided them, upon the success which has resulted from their endeavors.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

A CURIOSITY.—By an unexpected combination of circumstances, there is on exhibition at B. F. Stevens' an object, not particularly noticeable in its appearance, but which is very interesting from its connection with the late tragic events in Russia. In searching the houses of suspected Nihilists in St. Petersburg, the police discovered a large number of bombs similar to the one by which the death of the late Emperor was caused. Several of them were given to the representatives of foreign powers. Our own American minister sent some to the Smithsonian Institute at Washington by Lieut. Judson, of the U. S. Army, who was returning from Europe at the expiration of a leave of absence. A Masssachusetts gentleman who occupies high official position in Washington, managed to obtain one, which he lent for a short time to a gentleman in this neighborhood, who kindly permits the exhibition. It is made of dynamite, with a thin coating similar to cement, and an outer coating of dark glass. These bombs will stand considerable handling, but if dashed against a hard substance explode with fearful havoc. Resting quietly in its present position there is no danger, so that none need hesitate about going to see it. We will endeavor another week to give further particulars in relation to this interesting memento.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The tenth meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held last Friday evening, at 7 1-2 o'clock, the President presiding. It was opened by a selection from the quartette. The subject for discussion, "What a Farmer ought to know about Law," was opened by Hon. W. P. Upham. The speaker gave a very able address upon the subject, explaining clearly such points on law as relate to deeding of real estate, leasing of the same, points on trespass, obligations on fencing, both by roadside and as to line fences, damages by cattle, the obligations of employers and of employes, of the easement law, and such legal points as are most likely to be of common interest to the husbandmen in general. Appropriate remarks were made by Mr. James P. King, Rev. Mr. Spaulding, and others. Subject for the next meeting is to be "Domestic Animals, their uses and care." To be opened by Mr. Charles S. Emerton.

Andrew S. Oliver, formerly principal of the Bowditch School, but recently a graduate of the Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, has located in Milford, Mass. Dr. O. achieved his education by his own exertions, amid hardships that would have deterred a person of ordinary energy and spirit; he is a worthy young man, pleasing in manners, and, doubtless, will make a very successful practitioner. His friends in town wish him success, and congratulate the people of Milford in having such a conscientious and faithful young man in their midst.

At the close of the regular session of Holten Lodge, I. O. O. F., last evening, a fine entertainment, consisting of selections upon the violin, organ, harmonica, and other musical instruments, was given, together with negro recitations, clog dancing, songs, etc. The talent was from out of town, and gave an hour's entertainment that was thoroughly enjoyed.

Capt. Charles P. Lowe, formerly of this town, but now of Santa Barbara, Cal., recently visited here. He was the guest of Mr. Stephen Blaney. While here he attended the adjourned town meeting on the 21st ult., and was much interested in the proceedings, as well as pleased in meeting so many of his old acquaintances.

An alarm of fire between 12 and 1 o'clock, last Sunday morning, was caused by the partial burning of the old shed on Lynn road, formerly used as a blacksmith shop for sharpening tools, but recently used in connection with the quarry of Mr. Lewis Brown. The services of the whole department were not required, as the Sidneys soon had it under control.

He Did Not Advertise.

There is a man of our town
  Of reason so bereft,
He does not advertise at all,
  And so is always "left."

He sits within his store alone,
  As in a dreary den—
A customer a wondrous sight,
  When one comes now and then.

He wonders why his neighbors thrive,
  If he'd but use his eyes,
He'd see they prosper in their trade
  Because they advertise!

Their stores are thronged, their goods are sold,
  While his untouched remain,
And all his schemes for drawing trade
  Are profitless and vain.

Around his shelves the spiders' webs
  Are filled with gnats and flies,
And dust is over all his goods—
  He does not advertise!

And when he dies, as die he must,
  His name will be forgot,
And he'll be buried 'neath the dust
  That gathers round the spot.

And o'er his grave the printer men,
  With sadness in their eyes,
Will raise this monument of woe—
  "He did not advertise!"

☞ It is not the quantity eaten that gives strength, life, blood and health. It is the thorough digestion of the food taken, let it be much or little. Therefore, do not stimulate up the stomach to crave food, but rather assist digestion after eating, by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator. mar 30—1m

"Pa, what is ensilage?" "Why—h'm—ensilage, my son, is—ur—ensilage is—oh, something like mucilage, my son; something like mucilage; used to stick things together, you know. There, now, run away to your play, and don't disturb me now." And that boy thinks his pa is a very encyclopædia of wisdom. Happy child! Ere many years have elapsed, the boy will think he knows everything and his pa nothing! Happy childhood!

☞ No Words in the English Language," writes a lady who is using the Compound Oxygen Treatment, "can express the gratitude I feel for the benefit I have received and the hope I have of possessing tolerable health again. It will be ten years, January, 1880, since I was taken sick, and the mental agony alone has been indescribable. I have two little girls who have never seen me walk. * * I think I shall be able to walk alone after a time. I have been so hungry this summer that I have scarcely been able to wait for meals. Every one remarks upon the improvement in my complexion, and I am putting on flesh rapidly. My bowels, which have been constipated all my life, and terribly so since my sickness, are now better than I have ever known them to be." Our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, its nature and action, and full information for use, sent free. Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Johnny," said his father, as the boy took the primal biscuit from the plate, "don't you know that it is impolite to help yourself before your elders?" "Why, pa, mother told me to help myself before you." "What do you mean, sir?" asked his father, while his mother looked up with astonishment depicted in every feature. "Why, I heard mother tell Aunt Hannah that she hoped I wouldn't take after you, and so I thought I'd take my biscuit first."

☞ Wait a Little Longer."—So we are told sometimes. Things will come out all right, people say, if we wait awhile. That don't do with disease. The longer you wait the worse it is. It's no use to plant corn in November. Do you "feel a little bad?" Strike the trouble right away. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is what you want. It will at once relieve the bowels, stimulate the liver and cool your skin. Take One Dollar in your hand and stop at your Druggist's, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

A little miss, residing not far off, had got into the naughty habit of not stating things as they were, or, to put it plainly, of stating them as they were not. Rather than reason with her on the wickedness of lying, her mother one day took down the New Testament and very solemnly read the story of Ananias and Sapphira and their sudden death because they disregarded the truth. The little lady heard the story through, and looking up, said, "Mamma, I don't believe it; I've told lots and lots of lies." What answer could be made?

☞ Derangement of the liver, with constipation, injure the complexion, induce pimples, sallow skin, etc. Remove the cause by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. One a dose.

Punch is undoubtedly an Israelite. He believes in Judyism.

☞ The use of Malt Bitters increases the flesh and prevents pulmonary or wasting diseases.

PAPER PULP FROM WOOD.—The following interesting description of the process of making wood pulp is from an account of the opening of the Thorold Pulp Paper Company's establishment, published by the the Thorold Post, Canada:

"The wood, four feet in length, and of any thickness, is brought in at the basement, placed in the barking jack (one stick at a time), where two men, with draw knives, rapidly peel off the bark. It is then conveyed by the elevator to the first floor, sawed in two-foot lengths with cross-cut saws, passed on to the rip saw, where it is slabbed (that is, a small portion of wood on opposite sides taken off), to permit it resting firmly in the grinding engine. It is then passed to the boring machine (an upright one and a half inch auger, with foot attachment, driven by power), where the knots are bored out. The wood is then placed in racks of the same size as the receptacle in grinding engine and carried out to be ground. The grinding engines are upright, and receive at a filling one-twentieth of a cord of wood. The wood is placed in a receptacle, and by a simple, variable, automatic feed process is pressed flatwise between two outward revolving rolls, composed of solid emery, which are flooded with a spray of water, carrying off the fibrilized pulp in a stream through revolving screens to the tank or stuff-chest in the basement. It is then pumped up into a vat that forms part of the wet machine. In this vat is constantly revolving a large cylinder faced with fine brass wire cloth, which picks up the particles of pulp out of the water and places them on the felt (an endless piece of woolen goods which make between rolls, for different purposes, a continual circuit of the wet machine). On the cylinder is turned a heavy roll, called the couch; between the two, where they meet, the cylinder leaves the pulp, with most of the water pressure from it. The pulp now makes its appearance on the felt above the concha roll in a beautiful sheet, thirty-eight inches in width, and is carried along in a steady flow a distance of about eight feet, where it passes between (the water here again being pressed from it) but not beyond two heavy rollers, the upper iron, the lower wood; it adheres to the upper roll, which is constantly turning, wrapping it up, and when a sufficient thickness is attained, is cut off by a knife being pressed to the roll, attached to the machine for that purpose. It now leaves the roll in a thick white sheet, 38x38 inches, which is received by the boy in attendance on a table conveniently attached to the machine and folded into sheets 14x26 inches: It is then placed on scales until the weight is 100 pounds, when it is placed in the press, and firmly tied into square compact bundles. It is now ready for shipment to the paper mill to be made into printing and tea paper. The wood paper pulp has been placed in the market and found a ready sale. Recently a contract to the amount of $1,000 was made with one of our large paper mills."

ARTIFICIAL INDIGO.—Mr. Adolph Baeyer, of Munich, has discovered that by the action of sulphuric acid upon orthonitrophenylpropiolic acid a new product may be obtained which is capable of being converted into new coloring matters, or a dyestuff, which he calls artificial indigo. The author says: "I take orthonitrophenylpropiolic acid, and in the cold I mix the said acid with sulphuric acid—say, for instance, with from about ten of twenty parts, by weight, of sulphuric acid of about 1.84 specific gravity to every one part, by weight, of orthonitrophenylpropiolic acid employed. In effecting the said mixture care is to be taken to avoid a considerable rise of temperature, say, above 20° Centigrade. The mixture thus obtained quickly assumes a bright yellow or orange color, and the reaction is allowed to proceed in the cold until a sample of the mixture, upon being tested for the presence of orthonitrophenylpropiolic acid by means of glucose and alkalies, no longer contains any appreciable quantity of the said acid. The sulphuric acid mixture thus produced is then submitted to the action of suitable reducing or deoxidizing agents in order to effect the conversion into artificial indigo. "In practice I have found a number of substances belonging to various classes of chemical compounds which act as deoxidizing agents upon the above-mentioned new product, and I may specially mention ferrous sulphate (green vitriol, copperas.) As an example of the manner in which I prefer to conduct the aforesaid operation, I take the orange-colored mixture resulting from the treatment of one part, by weight, of orthonitrophenylpropiolic acid with about from ten to twenty parts sulphuric acid, as above described, and I mix the same with a solution containing about five parts, by weight, of ferrous sulphate. The mixture is then allowed to stand at the ordinary temperature, until the blue color, which it quickly assumes, is fully developed, and the dyestuff or coloring matter thus produced may be separated out of the mass by diluting the result of the operation with water, by which this new dyestuff is precipitated, and may be filtered and washed. The dyestuff is then ready for use. The characteristics of my new dyestuff or coloring matter, prepared according to my above-described process, are the following: The dyestuff or coloring matter resembles in appearance vegetable indigo, and it can be used in dyeing in a manner similar to it; but it is in a great part soluble in analine at an ordinary temperature, and also in an aqueous solution of sulphurous acid."—Scientific American.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflamatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I anvise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will sure y cure those diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

According to the correspondent of the Troy Times, charges are trumped up, or grossly exaggerated, against colored men of fine physique, and they are then sentenced to very long periods, in the interest of the enterprising firm to whom at Atlanta, Ga., convict labor is farmed out. A West Alexander, Pa., magistrate is reported to have married 1,800 couples within two years, and to have built a fine house with his fees. The reason for his popularity is that his house is located two miles from West Virginia, and twelve miles from Ohio, so bridal couples can easily come over the line and be married by him without a licence, according to the laws of Pennsylvania.

One of the growing industries of Australia is the cooking and canning of rabbits. The Colas preserving Co., near Melbourne had on an average 7,000 of these agile rodents brought in every night at the beginning of the past season, and the supply increasing, orders were given to limit the daily quantity to 2,700 pair. During the season, which lasted for 25 weeks, 675,000 rabbits were canned by this establishment alone.

A romantic wedding was celebrated at Cincinnati, recently, a Philadelphia widower of seventy years marrying a Cincinnati widow of sixty-eight, after half a century had elapsed since their first engagement. They were promised in marriage fifty years ago, but the match was broken off and they are separated, not meeting again until last summer. The bride is worth a million dollars and the bridegroom half as much, and a trip to Europe is included among the plans for the wedding tour.

The deep sympathy which actors cherish for sorrow and suffering, despite all the friction with unpleasant sides of the world which most of them undergo, has been shown in London. A member of this body died some weeks ago from injuries received on the stage and left one little daughter, a friendless orphan. All the principal persons connected with the stage in London gave a performance at Drury Lane to assist the child, and between money taken at the doors and subscribed $10,000 were collected.

An invalid in New Orleans bought six bottles of a patent medicine, warranted to cure the disease from which she was suffering. A notice was printed on the wrappers that the money would be refunded if, after following the directions implicity, a complete cure was not wrought. The stuff did her no good. She demanded from the druggist, who was also the manufacturer, the $9 which she had paid him. He refused it. She has begun a suit and her lawyer assures her that, as she obeyed the directions in every particular, she has a clear case.

A Texas editor states that a negro in Houston county, that State, made $30 last fall in picking cotton after gathering his own crop. He and his wife had previously made ten bales clear of all expenses. He owes nothing and had $500 in the bank. He now intends to purchase a place for $1,200, paying his $500 down, and expects to make enough next year to pay the remainder. The editor who describes this says that about the time that the negro was negotiating for the property, four or five hearty, strong young white men came to the writer's house begging for food.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENEEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

A NOVEL MEDICINE.

We were talking, one day—a party of us on a pleasure trip—about the amount of faith required, on the part of the patient, to render the physician's medicine of avail. It was admitted, as a rule, that where the patient had no confidence in the attending physician, the administering of the prescribed drugs would not be likely to have full or proper effect. In short, faith alone oftentimes had power to work cure in spite of medicine.

By-and-by, when there had come a little lull, one of the party, a white-haired old man, of more than three-score-and-ten—who had gained a wide-spread reputation for judgment and skill, both as surgeon and physician, said he would like to tells us a story. Said he:

"I once knew a physician—one of the eclectic school—a sort of all-sorts—who furnished his own medicines. He always visited his patients in his own chaise, and carried with him two—and often three—good-sized trunks, containing the roots and herbs, and other substances which he used as curative agents. One day he took it into his head that he would save certain medicines not entirely consumed by his patients, and put them all together in a single bottle, and label it 'All Sorts.' He had a curiosity to see what he would get at the end of the year. And, to this end, when he saw that a patient was convalescing, or, on the other hand, approaching dissolution, he would caution the nurse to preserve such medicines as might be left on hand after they had ceased being administered. A large bottle was provided, labeled, as I have said, and into it the medicines—the doses—as returned to him by the nurses, were put; and in the course of a year he had filled the bottle.

"Within a week of the expiration of the year, and the filling of the bottle, our physician had a case that puzzled him. It was a chronic complaint—a sort of all-goneness—the patient a lawyer. The eclectic determined to try his All Sorts. Said he to the ailing man; 'Look you, my dear sir; I have a medicine which I am going to try in your case—a medicine for which I have no name, and which I have never used; but I have faith to believe that it can perform wonders. I want you to give it a fair trial.'

"And he brought a vial of the hodge-podge, and gave it to the lawyer, bidding him take it regularly—ten drops at a dose—three times a day, and, at the same time, he gave particular directions respecting diet.

"And now, gentlemen, I am going to tell you what I know to be true. Within a month that patient was entirely cured. He pronounced the strange medicine to be the most wonderful stuff he had ever taken. And he recommended it to others, and from that time when that physician has found a case that puzzled him—a case without a name—he has given that wonderful medicine, and I can assure you that in nine cases in ten it has worked like a charm. The happy compounder of that novel medicine religiously believes that there is virtue in it, and his patient believe it likewise."

"And what do you think, doctor?" asked one of his hearers.

"Why," he replied, "to me it is simple enough. The cases cured have been old, chronic ailments, requiring only rest and proper diet for a cure. The rest and diet he had been careful to prescribe, and the medicine has not prevented a recovery. And yet, very likely those same persons would not have recovered had not the medicine been given. Faith did much of the work, as it always must, and always will."
—New York Ledger.

A DISRESPECTFUL CAR DRIVER.

Gilhooly came very near being assaulted yesterday by a brutal street car driver. The Galveston Street Car Company, probably to save the wear and tear of the rails, has stuck up a notice: "Drivers must not stop on the curves."

Yesterday, Gilhooly halted an East Broadway car. The driver put on the brakes and stopped the car. Gilhooly went up to him and said:

"I don't care to ride just now, but I want to ask you a question."

"What do you want?" asked the driver, with very improper impatience.

"I see you are forbidden to stop on curves. Now, I want to know how it is about benders? You are not allowed to stop on curves, but does the company permit you to go on a bender?"

The rage of the driver exceeded that of a a defeated candidate, and he used some very unparliamentary language. Why is it the street car company does not employ polished gentlemen as drivers?—Galveston News.

NOT SO FAST, AFTER ALL.

Some colored philosopher in the crowd remarked that the telegraph could travel fast. Old Uncle Mose spoke up: "Mebbe so; but you can't prove it to this cullud witness." Jim Webster replied: "You do sumfin, and light out for de interior of de State, and you'll find ef de telegraf don't outtrabble yer. I's had some 'sperience in dat ar telegraf line." "Mebbe so," said old Mose; "but I paid two dollars for a message to my boy Jake, up in Austin, to send twenty dollars—dat's foah years ago—and de money hasn't got heah yit. Does yer call dat ar quickness?"

If the end of one mercy were not the beginning of another we were undone.—Philip Henry.

He must be a strong man who can conceal his inclination.

My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.

I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. MRS. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS,

The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Remedies are composed are gathered by the Harvard Community, and the public can depend upon their purity.

Apropos of the traffic in oleomargerine, now so extensively going on in this city, a good story is told of a boarding-house keeper. The other day she was inspecting some butter at one of the provision stores, when the gentlemanly clerk accosted her, and inquired if he could not sell her some good Vermont butter. She replied that she wished to get some butter, but did not care to pay too high a price.—He asked her about how much she desired to pay, when she replied: "O, I don't know; I want butter for boarders; almost anything will do." And she got a tub of "oleo."—American.

Ipswich, dear grand old town, how I love thee! Where on earth can there be found a spot so lovely, so enchanting? Happy is the man, who shall breathe its fragrant air in life, and lie down at last amid its beautiful hills.

"Where on earth can there be found a spot so lovely, so enchanting." We give it up, unless it is on the borders of our Salem Mill Pond or North River; we believe the air is said to be "fragrant" there at times. "So enchanting;" yes, we have no doubt there are persons so enchanted with that "dear, grand, old town," that they couldn't leave there until their sentence has expired. But, my friend, we wouldn't advise you to "lie down amid its beautiful hills" at this season of the year, or you might feel like retracting some of the rapturous sentiments you have written.

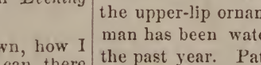
Water Question.

The water question before the people of the town is one of momentous importance to them for their weal or woe. Perhaps if the water takers paid a just price it might be made to pay for the running expenses, even after $125,000 more are spent upon it, leaving the cost of the works $300,000; interest, wear and tear and running expenses will be ten per cent. on $300,000 yearly. Let us consider the situation to-day. The water board estimate the consumption the past year at 1,125,000 gallons; that multipled by three hundred working days gives 375,000,000. Now allow 25,000,000 gallons to be used the other sixty-five days of the year, and we have the enormous amount of 400,000,000 gallons, which, if the town received the lowest price that the city of Boston sells to its manufacturers—two cents per one hundred gallons—would yield to the town $80,000.



In the past instead of two cents per one hundred gallons the town has received about $16,000, one-fifth of a just price; four mills per one hundred gallons, a trifle over one mill per barrel; seven barrels and twenty-five gallons for one cent—very cheap drinking. A bottle of champagne wine costs two dollars, equal to 1562 barrels and fourteen gallons of water. A private family pays about two cents per day for one faucet, and will probably use three barrels of water weekly, so it pays about four cents per barrel, while the corporation gets thirty-one barrels and eight gallons for its four cents.

Are the owners of the hundreds of homesteads in town, built with their little savings from year to year, willing to render their wells useless fixtures, and vote a new debt upon their homes, and pay yearly for one faucet more than the interest on the cost of two or three wells? One hundred and twenty-five thousand gallons will pass a four-inch pipe with 180 feet altitude at sixty pound pressure in ten hours. Is the poor householder willing to be taxed extra to sell that amount of water daily for five dollars, when he would not use that amount in less than ten years at one barrel per day?

Is a mammoth corporation in a neighboring city to be watered by the citizens of Peabody at a loss to them, when more than fifteen square miles in town can't get one drop of water, not because of the altitude, but because they are farmers and are sparsely settled?

Beverly was democratic, and gave every man a chance for water; all her streets are piped. Peabody will have about one-quarter of her territory piped. Where is the water for us the

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

IN THE YEAR ONE THOUSAND EIGHT HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-ONE.

AN ACT

to enable the Town of Peabody to improve its Water-works and increase its Water supply. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

SECTION 1. The Town of Peabody, for the purpose of increasing the capacity and efficiency of its water works, is hereby authorized to take and hold, by purchase or otherwise, such lands in said town as may be necessary and convenient for erecting and maintaining an engine house and pumping station, and a standpipe or high-service reservoir, and any structures required in connection with said works; and on said lands may erect and maintain said works, buildings and structures, and any other appliances necessary and proper for said purpose, and may connect said works and structures with each other and with the aqueducts of said town, whether now or hereafter laid.

SECT. 2. In the prosecution of said work, and for the purpose aforesaid, and for the purpose of connecting the water works now owned by said town or authorized by this act with the new sources of water supply hereinafter mentioned said town may lay and maintain pipes or other works over or under any water course, street, railroad, highway or other way, or any land whatever, and in general may do any other acts and things necessary and proper for the carrying out of said purposes; and if for said purposes said town enters upon or digs up any land, street or way, it shall restore the same to as good order and condition as it was in before such digging commenced, and the work shall be done in such manner and with such care as not to render such land, street or way unsafe or unnecessarily inconvenient to those entitled to use the same.

SECT. 3. Said town is also authorized for the purposes aforesaid, and to increase its supply of water, to take, hold and convey into the reservoirs, aqueducts or other works now owned by said town, or authorized by this act, the waters of Cedar pond in said town, and the waters of Humphrey's pond situated partly in said Peabody and partly in Lynnfield, and the waters which flow into and from said ponds, and any water rights connected therewith, and may also take and hold, by purchase or otherwise, such lands around the margins of said ponds, not exceeding five rods in width, as may be necessary for the preservation and purity of said waters, and may also take and hold in like manner such lands as may be necessary for maintaining dams and reservoirs for the storage of said waters, and such lands as may be necessary for erecting and maintaining any works proper for the taking and distribution of said waters.

SECT. 4. The water board of said town of Peabody shall execute, superintend and direct the performance of all the works, matters and things mentioned in this act, unless it is otherwise provided herein, or unless other officers or agents shall be by vote of the town expressly chosen for said purpose.

SECT. 5. Said town of Peabody within sixty days after the taking of any land as aforesaid, shall file in the registry of deeds for the southern district of the county of Essex a description thereof sufficiently accurate for identification, and the title of all land so taken shall vest in said town.

SECT. 6. Said town of Peabody shall be liable to pay all damages sustained by any persons or corporations by the taking of any land, water, water rights, franchises or property, or by the constructing of any aqueducts, reservoirs or other works for the purposes aforesaid. If any person or corporation, sustaining damages as aforesaid, cannot agree with the town upon the amount of such damages, he may have them assessed and paid in the same manner as is provided by law with respect to land taken for highways; but no application shall be made for the assessment as aforesaid of damages for the taking of any water rights or for any injury thereto until the water is actually withdrawn or diverted by the town; and any person or corporation whose water rights are thus taken or affected may apply as aforesaid at any time within three years from the time when the water is first actually withdrawn or diverted.

SECT. 7. For the purpose of defraying the cost and expenses which may be incurred in any work, or taking of property under the provisions of sections one and two of this act, said town of Peabody, through its treasurer, shall have authority to issue from time to time promissory notes or bonds to an amount not exceeding one hundred thousand dollars, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding six per centum per annum, the principal payable at periods not more than thirty years from the issuing of said notes or bonds. Said town may sell the same or any part thereof, from time to time, or pledge the same for money borrowed for the purpose aforesaid on such terms and conditions as it may deem proper. Said town is further authorized to make appropriations and assess from time to time such amount as may be necessary to pay the interest on said loans and the principal at the maturity of said notes or bonds.

SECT. 8. In case said town of Peabody shall take any waters, water rights or land, or construct aqueducts or other works in connection with said new sources of supply, under the provisions of section three of this act, said town is authorized, for the purpose of defraying the cost and expenses occasioned thereby, to raise sufficient money therefor by taxation, or by borrowing in manner provided in section seven of this act, and also to appropriate and assess such amounts as may be necessary to pay the interest on any sums so borrowed, and the principal when due.

SECT. 9. This act shall take effect upon its passage, and shall become void unless accepted within two years by a majority vote of the legal voters of the town of Peabody, present and voting at a legal meeting called for that purpose; and no more than three meetings shall be called for said purpose in any one year.

Spring Fashions.

SPECIAL EXPOSITION AT ALMY, BIGELOW & WEBBER'S, OF NOVELTIES IN WRAPS, COSTUMES AND MILLINERY.

Were our descriptive powers equal to t, we would like to give our readers a description of the grand spectacle witnessed at the spring opening of Almy, Bigelow & Webber, last week; but the large number of ladies present from this town can, no doubt, give their neighbors a better account than ourselves.

The character for elegance in style, merited and sustained by this establishment leads one to expect something out of the ordinary line when an announcement of an exhibition there is made, and no one was disappointed, when examining the endless variety of mantles and costumes in all manner of fabrics and newest fashions.

The Millinery room had the appearance of a tropical garden filled with blooming exotics in all rich and delicate hues, while caged birds filled the department with melody.

A large collection of trimmed bonnets and hats were exhibited on stands and racks, most of which were manufactured in their own workroom. There were lovely models in the rich colors of to-day, glittering in gold, silver and steel effects, or the rainbow hues of illuminated or irridiscent beads.

A Marie Stuart showed a shirred crown of ombre surah, ornamented with a spray of straw and steel wheat; very wide ribbon to match was passed around the crown, with a finish of steel and gold ornaments.

A leghorn hat in Rubens shape had a border of handsome straw trimming, inside shirred with mull, around the crown an exquisite spray of sea-moss, with white flowers, finished with mull ties.

A black chip pike had a border of pearl beads and pleated Maline lace, trimmed with white satin surah ribbon and long white plume, ornaments of steel and gold inside, shirred with white surah silk.

A large hat made of black Spanish lace trimmed at the left side with jet beads on edge, three French tips falling over the side, and a wreath of tea roses at side and back.

A very stylish bonnet of steel net, with a body of steel edge and white lace, had ostrich tips at side, finished with cut steel horse shoes, and ties of white satin ribbon.

A bonnet of black jetted crown and brim was trimmed with jetted lace, finished with steel pins and a monture of the old gold shades at back.

Exceedingly dainty was a bonnet of pale pink silk, with a covering of embroidered crepe lisse, a wreath of pink arbutus round face, olive plume shaded to pink at side and back, ties of pink silk.

The misses' and infants' department, which now is between the millinery room and the space devoted to the ladies' suits, was filled with dainty and sensible articles, lace caps and bonnets, beautiful cloaks and sacques in all manner of styles, while in robes and suits for the ladies, the assortment was most varied and complete, including hundreds of medium-priced suits in cloth, silk and satin; combinations of blacks in brocades and plain fabrics, with richer and more expensive costumes, up to elegant reception and evening dresses.

The specimens given hardly illustrate the great variety of styles which really merit more elaborate description.

From the West.

CHICAGO, April 1, 1881.

MR. EDITOR,—The last two weeks have been a busy time in clearing the snow from the sidewalks and dwellings; we have had a very severe winter and very cold, for five months, without much of any cessation, and have had a formidable snow blockade. This has been one of the severest winters for many years, and the oldest persons in the section can hardly trace it back where the amount of snow has been so great or of so long duration. A portion of the roads has been impassable for the greater portion of the winter.

About one hundred teams are now employed in cleaning the streets, and one thousand men have been at work on the sewers and crossings. If this snow was sent as a blessing then we are blessed to death. The state of the weather has well nigh shut up the avenues of trade for a while, but I think the volume of business will increase, rather than diminish, over last year, and that it will resume its proportion in a few days. The outlook for prosperity is exceedingly bright all over the great North West. The stagnation which has for a few years past sent its blight over the country is rapidly passing away, for it has nearly discouraged the whole business world, and the commercial, mechanical and laboring classes are rejoicing in their freedom from its embrace. The business of stock raising has been very much injured, although it is not so disastrous as was at first supposed. The transportation has been so impeded that it will be some time before the usual amount arising from that branch of trade will find its way to market. The country has lost a large amount of cattle by the severe weather, but the amount raised also has been large in anticipation of the exports. The whole back country and farther west are mostly depleted of dry goods, boots, shoes, etc., and that will increase the sales of those articles, and render the business throughout the manufacturing portion of the State lively.

Nellie, wife of Charles Chamberlain, (a native of Peabody,) has just deceased, at Englewood, which was their home, about eight miles from this city. In her he has lost one of the best of companions, a loving, affectionate mother, a noble councillor and friend, untiring in her efforts for the happiness and welfare of others, forgetful of self. Her best thoughts seemed to be directed to the elevation of the members of her family and spread their results far around her. The rays of light which she was constantly throwing all around her, has receded, and in its stead darkness for a time at least seems to be settling over their home.

I noticed in a late issue of the PRESS that you have some ill-disposed persons in Peabody, who are a pest to good society. I am sorry that in that industrious law and order community that is the case. You must find them out and send them to Chicago, and have them provided with some responsible office. As our mayor and his Eagle are about to retire, and as that class of individuals of whom you would be pleased to be rid, might be benefited, it would confer a favor to transport them and run them for mayor, for I think they would fill the office, aided by the 3100 saloons now in the city, to the satisfaction of many. We have a crowd at present, but a few more would only swell the list, and the police (an humane institution which we have here) would take especial care that they have places assigned according to their ability. I could designate the place: perhaps treasurer, or alderman, or some other office equally remunerative. Insanity is a disorder peculiar to Chicago, for, if a person commits a crime, he is certainly insane; if one beats his wife or murders his children, he is emotionally insane; if a person steals into your house, presents a revolver at your head, and rifles your dwelling, he is dreadfully insane, and must be sent to the Asylum for three weeks. This is the way that criminals often are treated here, and if it were not for the many noble institutions, and the kind hearts, and open hands for the relief of the sick, aged and unfortunate ones in our midst, one might despair of the government of our city at times.

The benefit to be given by the Murray Association to Miss Ada M. Hill will take place in the Universalist Vestry, on Tuesday evening, April 26th, when "Coupon Bonds," an interesting drama by Baker, and the laughable farce of "Putkins," will be given.

Comparatively speaking, Smith's Magic Hair Restorative is equal to "Green's August Flower," the only difference being Green's medicine works on the liver, and Smith's tonic works on bald heads. A widower or old maid had much rather have their heads in good order than their liver, and that is where William beats old Green. Green is supposed to be worth several millions, and Smith will be worth just as much after he advertises as much as Green, and gets people to using his tonic. Nobody should wait a minute until they have used William A. Smith's Hair Restorative. The reason that he sells it so cheap is, he makes a good profit cutting hair grown by its use. The man who don't use Smith's hair restorative only gets his hair cut three times a year, when if he should use this tonic he would be compelled to get it cut twelve times a year at least. This is no vision. It's a fertilizer.—Manufactured and sold by William A. Smith, 9 Main street.

The Banner of Light of a late date contains the following, under the head of Peabody:

Mrs. David Bailey has suffered for forty years from the effects of a fall by which a knee was injured. The most skillful of the "regular" physicians had exerted themselves in efforts to help her, but no permanent relief was obtained, and she had about relinquished all hope of escaping the almost unendurable distress she was constantly subject to. At length she heard the voice of an invisible attendant, saying, "Do not despair—you shall yet recover. Apply to Brave Ben." Of what followed Mrs. Bailey writes: "This reference of my dusky guide to a brother of mine, Mr. Benjamin F. Pickett of Georgetown, Mass., who was considered to be an excellent healing medium, induced me to seek his assistance. I soon after placed myself under his care, and after a week's time was raised from the shadows of despair into the sunshine of health and happiness. This was three years ago, and there has been no recurrence of my former troubles. In the belief that justice requires a public statement of the good he had done myself and others, I write this. And yet the Legislature has been asked to command by law these agents for restoring health to the sick, to desist from their humane labors. But law made by man will never subvert the law made by God."

Larrie O'Dee.

Now, the Widow McGee
And Larrie O'Dee
Had two little cottages, out on the green,
With just enough room for two pig-pens between.
The Widow was young and the Widow was fair,
With the brightest of eyes and the brownest of hair,
And it frequently chanced, when she came in the morn
With the swill for her pig, Larrie came with the corn,
And some of the ears that he tossed from his hand
In the pen of the Widow were certain to land.

One morning said he:
"Och! Misthress McGee,
It's a washte of good lumber this runnin' two rigs,
Wid a fancy petition betwane our two pigs!"
"Indade, sure it is!" answered Widow McGee,
With the sweetest of smiles upon Larrie O'Dee.
"And thin it looks kind o' hard-hearted and mane
Kapin' two frindly pigs so exsaidin'ly near
That whinivir one grunts thin the other can hear,
And yit kape a cruel petition betwane!"

"Shwate Widow McGee,"
Answered Larrie O'Dee,
"If ye fale in yer heart we are mane to the pigs,
Ain't we mane to oursilves to be runnin two rigs?
Och! it made me heart ache whin I paped through the cracks
Of me shanty, lasht March, at yez shwingin' yer axe,
An' a-bobbin' yer head, an' a shtompin' yer fate,
Wid yer purty white hands jisht as red as a bate,
A-sphlittin' yer kindlin'-wood out in the shtorm,
Whin one little shtove it would kape us both warm!"

"Now, piggy," said she,
"Larrie's courtin' o' me,
Wid his dilicate, tinder allusions to you;
So now yez musht tell me jusht what I musht do.
For, if I'm to say yes, shtir the shwill wid yer shnout;
But if I'm to say no, yez musht kape yer nose out.
Now, Larrie, for shame! to be bribin' a pig
By a-tossin' a handful of corn in its shwig!"
"Me darlint, the piggy says yes!" answered he.
And that was the courtship of Larrie O'Dee.

A Crown of Sorrow.

BY ADELAIDE PROCTOR.

A sorrow with early tears
Yet bitter had been long with me;
I wearied of this weight of years,
And would be free.

I tore my sorrow from my heart,
I cast it far away in scorn;
Right joyful that we two could part,
Yet most forlorn.

I sought (to take my sorrow's place)
Over the world for flower or gem,
But she had had an ancient grace
Unknown to them.

I took once more with strange delight
My slighted sorrow; proudly now
I wear it, set with stars of light,
Upon my brow.

Selected Story.

How Tom and I Kept House.

My chum and I had often, in the privacy of our room, wondered how a family of only three persons could make so much work, and why our landlady should on some particular days, keep on her feet from morning till night. Although we could appreciate the clear coffee, the tender steak, and the light biscuits that were placed before us, we could perform them in half the time, and not make as much fuss about it either, and we had much more than once freely expressed our opinion as in the manner in which household affairs should be treated.

But the merry twinkle in the eye of our good-natured landlady, and the oft-repeated expression, "a man's work is from sun to sun, but a women's work is never done," did not convince us, and bachelor like, we began to think of a home of our own, where we could have the privilege of trying our hand at the culinary business—provided Mrs. Somebody was willing.

One evening as we sat down to the table, our landlady informed us that she had been called out of town to see a sick friend, and as she expected to be absent a few days, she would try to find some one to take charge of the house and its occupants.

Tom and I protested against this unnecessary trouble, for was not this the opportunity we had long been wishing for? We were large enough to take care of ourselves, and she need have no fears on our account. After much entreaty on our part, and objecting on the lady's side, consent was at last won for ourselves, and after showing us the barrels, firkins and boxes containing the ingredients used in cooking, and delivering the keys of store-room and closets, our landlady bid us good-bye, with the wish that we might have a pleasant as well as a profitable time.

The anticipated baking of the morrow possessed for us more charms than did ever a box of marbles in our boyhood days. That evening we read all the receipts contained in the cook book, from making bread to frosting cake, and in our conceit thought we were wise enough to do anything. The next morning we made a visit to the closet to see what provisions were left for the day—but alas! were forcibly reminded of the old nursery song—"Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard," etc.; but instead of finding it bare, we found proof sufficient of a midnight revel, and we both exclaimed, "The rats."

It was arranged that Tom should kindle the fire and make the coffee, while I mixed the bread and laid the table. Tying on an apron to keep my dre—no, pants, clean, I went to work; the flour was sifted, but what next? The cook-book was consulted; "a little salaratus, yeast and salt, according to your judgment." "Tom," says I, "what does this mean—salt according to your judgment?" "Why, don't you know? a cupful, of course; I thought you knew how to make bread," and Tom blew into the stove till his face was what might have been called a celestial red. I went to the stove and found the dampers closed. "I must say, Tom, that if you are as long kindling a flame in a lady's heart as you have been in this stove, your prospects are not very flattering. I thought you knew how to make a fire?" My bread had been in the oven about an hour, and although I looked at it and turned it round, it looked as flat as when I first put it into the pan. By our united efforts we succeeded in building a fire, and soon the fragrant smell of coffee filled the room. The table was laid and we were patiently waiting for the bread to bake. "What on earth are you doing, Tom?" I exclaimed, as I saw him at work on an old fish skin. "Why, settling the coffee, to be sure; didn't you tell me to put in a fish? and I haven't put in a half one yet." "Oh, dear," I groaned, "your ears and generous disposition will be the death of you yet. I said a small piece of fish skin—but perhaps it is better than it looks—salt is good, you know."

The bread began to look brown, and we decided that it was done—brown. While placing it on the table I heard a groan and a faint "Come here, Bob," from the kitchen. Tom had poured hot water upon his hand, and he sat upon the floor blowing furiously upon his fingers. "Soft soap is good; go and put your hand into the pot of soap in the cellar." "Oh, murder, murder!" came in tones of agony from the region below; "soft soap is good for burns, is it?" and Tom came up, with tears streaming down his face and the salt brine dripping from his hand. "Confound this housekeeping, don't you say so, Bob? Let us have some breakfast or the coroner will have a case of starvation to investigate." We sat down to the table, but before we had eaten two mouthfuls of bread or swallowed two swallows of coffee we came to the conclusion that the waters of the far-famed Salt Lake could not equal our coffee, and if one of the biscuits were hung about a person's neck it would prove a millstone. We began to analyze the saline subjects before us, and we unanimously agreed that "salaratus and salt, according to your judgment" was no judgment at all. The striking of the clock warned us that we could investigate no more, and that it was time we were on our way to the office. We compared notes and found that we had been just three ours preparing our delicious breakfast. (Eleven o'clock found us taking a lunch at Taylor's.) As we had been disappointed in the morning, we were determined to make pies and cake, they were much easier than bread for new beginning. So two hours before the usual time for closing our office we bade adieu to books and documents, and were hurrying home to profit by the experience of the morning meal. We could not help but miss the cheerful face, the blazing fire, and well-laid table that always greeted our return from our daily toil; but we soon banished these sad thoughts by vigorously wielding the broom, and in a short time the kitchen appeared quite respectable.

I was to make the pies and cake, and Tom was to run the errands and make the custard pudding; that was nothing to make, a little milk and a few eggs; who could not make a pudding? Putting on a large apron and rolling up my coat sleeves, I prepared for my afternoon's work. First we dropped the curtain for fear we might have inquisitive neighbors. I took a table at one end of the kitchen while Tom took the one in the dining room, so that we should not interfere with each other. As I stood considering what to put in the pie crust besides sugar, eggs and allspice, I heard him saying to himself, "a pint of eggs, and six grains of sugar, spice, then taste." "Here, Bob, here's an enigma for you to solve; how in the world shall I weigh a pint of eggs and cut six grains of sugar?" "Oh, this is easy enough—use the scale for the eggs and miscroscope for the sugar; and for the spice, I should think ginger and cinnamon would do, I really believe you don't know the first thing about cooking—a pretty husband you would make—don't forget the milk, you will find it in the storeroom."

A smothered laugh came from the storeroom, and softly whispered, "look here, Bob." I tiptoed along expecting to find a rattlesnake, but what a sight met my eyes; there sat a Mrs. Grimalkin and her interesting family of four, lapping the milk reserved for our pudding. Woman's weapon was in great demand, and a divorce was granted between Mrs. Broom and Mr. Handle, and our biscuit also hastened the exit of the Grimalkin, Jr.,—two of whom never again made their appearance—while their affectionate mother made a shining path through a square of glass. As Tom was errand boy he took a large pitcher and went for more milk. While he was gone, I amused myself by singing "There'll be no more sorrow there," when to my sorrow the doorbell rang, and, being directly over my head, was the cause of a gymnastic exhibition, which closed with the downfall of China, and with pantomine gestures, I stood amid the ruins, and thought of the confusion of Babel. Ding, ding, went the bell, each peal louder than the last. I could not go to the door, for I was not dressed to receive callers. I could peer out of the side curtain and see who had favored me by calling. As I was creeping along, and when almost to the door, I stepped upon my apron, and like a dutiful subject I obeyed the laws of gravitation, and struck my head with such a force that I saw stars without looking for them. I heard a laugh outside, and some one said, "Oh, I can wait; please put the trunk on the steps." I groaned both mentally and physically. "Oh, if Tom would only come; he would go to the door, for he looked quite decent." Our caller, whoever it might be, seemed determined to enter. "Oh, Tom, why don't you come?" and, as if in answer to my wish, I heard a crash down below.

I ran down stairs, and there lay poor Tom on his face, completely deluged with milk—the pitcher broken, and the fragments scattered all over the floor—streams of milk running in all directions.

"I should think you ought to know bettter than to leave a broomstick across the doorway for a fellow to tumble over; I've spoilt my clothes, cut my nose, and I can't tell what internal injuries I have sustained, and all through your carelessness. If this is what you call housekeeping, I must say that I am heartily sick of it. You may finish that pudding — I won't touch it."—"Hush, Tom, don't speak so loud; if you do we are ruined men. We have no time to cry for spilt milk, for we have company on the doorsteps, and they are determined to gain an entrance. There's that bell again! It's no use, I might as well go to the door."

I took off my apron, smoothed my hair, washed my hands and put on my company face, while Tom went to his room to make himself whole, leaving footprints by the way, not such as Longfellow would have us leave to cheer the heart of a forlorn brother, but footprints that an ambitious brother might see, and, like his predecessor, aspire to tread the milky way.

I opened the door, and there stood the handsomest specimen of humanity my eyes ever beheld. As soon as she looked at me she burst into a hearty laugh, and when she recovered her breath, a laugh was introduced between each word, as she asked me if Mrs. C. was at home.

"No, Miss, she is not at home, she is out of town," I stammered.

"She will not be gone long, I suppose, and I can stop until she returns."

Visions of broken china, spilt milk, and half-baked pies floated before me, and I thought it no sin to tell one of Mrs. Opie's. "She will probably be gone some time, six weeks, I believe."

"I never knew my aunt to stay so long from home, but I must stop at least one night, for it is past car time, and I cannot return until to-morrow."

What could I do; surely I was born under an unlucky star—before me was the niece, the heiress of whom I had heard such extravagant praises, and what made me feel still more uncomfortable was the provoking smile that appeared whenever she looked at me. I wondered what could be the cause of her merriment. Surely it could not be me, who was called the finest looking young man in town. Something must be done, so invited the young lady in, and excusing myself, went to Tom's room to see if he had survived his downfall. The exclamation that greeted me as I opened the door was in no way flattering to my pride.

"My, Bob, you haven't been to the door with that face?"

"Of course I have; served not only as door tender, but as committee of arrangements and introduced the lady into the parlor, and am now waiting for you to go down with me and entertain her."

"Oh, dear, I shall die; look in the glass, Bob," and holding on his side he slid from his chair to the floor, and rolled over with such velocity that I really thought he had gone crazy. I looked in the glass. O, horrors! what a face presented itself. My head looked as if it had blossomed from the flour barrel; on my forehead were two marks commonly called beauty spots (but I called them horrid spots), my nose, my beautiful nose, that was the most marked feature of my face—it looked as if it had been dipped in ink.

"How do you like the looks? don't you think the lady will be charmed? Oh, dear!" and Tom went into a rolling fit—I made no answer, but made for the door.

"Where are you going? Going to complete the fascination?"

"Going to make a clean breast, as well as a clean face, of the whole matter;" and while Tom was dressing himself in his best, I explained matters to our lady visitor, and joined with her in laughing at our mishaps. She insisted on being shown to the scene of the disaster, and finding resistance useless, I went with her to the regions below.—Tom soon came down, and acting as her servants, we soon put things in shape and place. Donning one of her aunt's ample aprons, the little figure flitted from room to room, and soon despatched the baking. I tended the stove. Tom gathered up the fragments, meanwhile speculating upon the durability of Job's patience had he passed through the trying ordeal of housekeeping, and concluded my meditations by saying that if he had passed through the trying ordeal he never would have been handed down as a model of patience.

At the usual hour we sat down to a table loaded with bread, pies and cake, the custard pudding was not forgotten), as nicely baked as those ever put before us by our landlady. While enjoying the meal and laughing over the adventures of the day, who should walk in but our landlady, wearing upon her face such an innocent expression that I, being naturally of a suspicious nature, began to think she had not been far distant after all, but being also a wise man, I said not a word but thought a good deal upon the subject. My suspicions were confirmed by the knowing look which passed between aunt and niece. I could not for a time forgive her for the lesson she had taught me, but when her niece put her hand in mine and promised to make my bread during lifetime, I freely forgave the aunt, and thought that my experience in the line of cooking was not as unprofitable as it might have been. Tom said it was my nose that made my fortune, and "that perhaps he might have been the lucky one had it not been for the confounded broom-handle." I know not whether my nose won the lady's love, but one thing I do know, that I shall never meddle with that "work which is done," and to those who are wise in their own conceit, I would say: Let them try and see what they can do; perhaps their experience will coincide with my own.

One of my biscuits I have reserved in case of war; it might answer the same purpose as a bullet, and until that time arrives, I intend it shall occupy a conspicuous place in my cabinet of curiosities.

Among the Farms.

NUMBER FOUR.

Another invitation was given us to visit the farm connected with the Insane Asylum at Danvers. This institution and its surroundings need no description from us. Its locality and history are well-known to the tax-payers of Massachusetts. We will content ourselves by paying our respects to the barn and piggery. In the latter building, which is one hundred feet or more long, and nearly half as wide, with a row of pens on each side, and a wide walk through the centre, we found seventy as nice hogs as we ever saw. The most of them were to be fattened for the use of the Asylum. A few of the best were kept for breeding. They are a fine-boned, large-bodied breed, with short heads and noses, weighing, when well fitted for slaughtering, from three to four hundred pounds apiece, dead weight. From their general formation we should say they were well-bred Yorkshires—a breed that is very hard to be beaten.

So much for swine. Now for the representatives of the bovine race. In the stalls were forty-nine cows and two pure bred Ayrshire bulls. Some of the cows were very large, weighing from twelve to fifteen hundred pounds each, live weight. None of them were small or inferior; probably as good a herd of cows as can be found in Essex County. Some of them were giving over twenty quarts of milk apiece per day. Among them is a pair of twin heifers two years old, one of which is now in milk, giving sixteen quarts per day, so the gentleman that escorted us round informed us. These twins are of good size and very handsome, showing very fine points for great milkers. One animal in particular attracted our attention—a grade Holstein and Native. Her capacious udder and entire make-up indicated that her milking properties were of the highest order. The milk made here is all consumed on the farm. Our conductor told us there were six hundred persons at the Asylum now, and everything produced upon the farm is consumed there. A large area of tile draining has been done, and is now doing around the barn and piggery. This is certainly a spot where every lover of good stock should visit, for he would surely learn something before he went away. Upon this farm the foreman, Mr. Pratt, used last year eight tons of Ames' superphosphate, which will account in a great measure for the bountiful crops obtained. All of the farmers that have used this fertilizer speak volumes in its praise. We feel more interested in it because it is a home production, manufactured within the limits of this town by an adopted citizen, whose reputation for truth and veracity is like Cæsar's wife, far above suspicion. Undoubtedly this is the purest and least adulterated of any phosphate in the market, it being nothing more or less than ground bones and animal matter. The following analysis will sufficiently indicate its value as a fertilizer:

Nitrogen,	4 to 5 pr. ct.
Phosphoric Oxide, soluble in neutral solution of Citrate of Ammonia,	45 to 75 p. c.
Phosphoric Oxide, insoluble,	22 to 25 p. c.
Potassium Oxide,	25 to 30 p. c.

After a cursory examination of this place, we took our seats in the elegant Monroe buggy, the Professor taking the ribbons, and giving the matchless "Groton Boy" one turn around the Asylum, struck directly out for the farm of Francis H. Appleton, located in West Peabody, near the Lynnfield line, and known as the "Broadfield" farm. We soon arrived there, and found Mr. Farwell (the foreman) at home, and ready to give us all the information we desired. The farm consists of two hundred acres. The soil seems well adapted to the raising of corn and other varieties of grain. The large field in which is situated the summer residence of Mr. Appleton, probably was suggestive of its name, for it is in reality a broad field. Mr. Appleton does not engage to a very great extent in keeping or breeding of stock, having at the present time but four cows upon the farm, three pure bred Jerseys, and one grade Ayrshire and Native. The Jerseys are all of one family, mother daughter and granddaughter. They have been bred more for quality of milk than quantity. From the mother fourteen pounds of butter are obtained weekly, six and one-half quarts of her milk making a pound of butter. The daughter and granddaughter are in no respects inferior to the mother. We saw a yearling colt sired by "Winchester," the distinguished son of "Edward Everett," now owned by Robert Bonner, who paid twenty thousand dollars for him. This colt will make his mark if nothing happens to him. Mr. Farwell showed us the tool room, well filled with the most approved implements of husbandry; the carriage, harness and grain rooms. In the barn floor is a platform scale, used for weighing the productions of the farm.

We were shown an ingenious improvement for feeding the horses from the barn floor. In the cellar is a large apartment for the storage of roots. The bottom of the manure division is cemented, falling off towards one end, where is built a large tank for the purpose of holding the liquid manure, to be utilized with muck and soil. Mr. Farwell has used the Stockbridge fertilizer, but does not feel satisfied with it, and will use it no longer. Thinks better of that which is manufactured two years alike; gives the preference to Ames' superphosphate.

Here our examination ended, when we turned our faces homeward, well pleased with our afternoon's excursion.

☞ ONE MOMENT, PLEASE.—When winter is passing into summer, and summer into winter again, your health should be especially looked to. The humors which have accumulated in your blood should be cleansed away, and your system toned up to guard against bilious fever, or other sickness peculiar to the change of season. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" will do this for you to perfection. Get a bottle now and begin using it at once. A long fit of sickness and a long doctor's bill may be the penalty of neglect. If your druggist hasn't it, write to the doctor at Rondout, N. Y. Price $1.00.

After vainly spending five hundred dollars for other remedies to relieve my wife, I have no hesitation in declaring, that St. Jacobs Oil will cure Neuralgia, says M. V. B. Hersom, Esq., (of Pinkham & Hersom) Boston, Mass., an enthusiastic indorser of its merits.—Chambersburgh (Pa.) Herald.

THE NEW ENGLAND FAIR.—The details of the next New England Fair are well under way, the committee of arrangements wishing to introduce several attractive features that will require some time to work up, and they consider all the work done now just so much valuable time saved when the rush comes a few days before the fair. One attraction will be a flock of 25 Angora goats to be exhibited by James A. Hill of Lyme, Conn. These goats are milk white, and produce long hair from which nice shawls are made. They are a very hardy animal, and will clear a pasture or brush land much quicker than sheep. Extra inducements will be held out to owners of sheep and swine, the premiums for the latter will be increased from $75 to $200. Premiums will be offered to thorough-bred stallions and mares. Working oxen have been divided into classes, one for four-year-olds and under, and one for five-year-olds and over; a separate committee will be appointed for each class. Trained steers will all be under one class, instead of one for men and one for boys. The fat cattle class will be omitted. The chairman of the various committee will be paid $2 per day for two days. An invitation will be extended to President Garfield to be present, and the committee are confident he will accept.—Worcester Spy.

FELL AGAINST A SHARP EDGE.—This is furnished by Mr. Wm. Will, 1613 Frankford Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.: Some time since I received a severe injury to my back, by falling against the sharp edge of a marble step, the stone penetrating it at least a half-inch, and leaving a very painful wound. After suffering for a time, I concluded to apply St. Jacobs Oil, and am pleased to say, that the results exceeded my expectations. It speedily allayed all pain and swelling and by continued use, made a perfect cure. I really think it the most efficacious liniment I ever used—Rockford (Ill.) Register.

HIGH HEELS UNGRACEFUL.—Aside from the consideration that a foot encased in a comfortable shoe is more pleasing in appearance than one forced into a vice and mounted upon a high heel, the effect of bad boots upon the carriage of the person is worth attention, especially on the part of fashionable people. It is impossible for man or woman to walk gracefully when mounted on a high heel, and the hobbling gait of people whose feet are tortured by tight boots makes them appear ridiculous. Good walkers are very scarce, chiefly because the majority of people dress their feet improperly. It is indispensable to an easy carriage of the person and grace of movement that feet be clad in easy coverings. All who know enough to appreciate the charm of an unconstrained bearing and the beauty of a graceful walk will welcome the advent of the fashion of low heels. It would be sensible for fashionable women to rebel against another introduction of the iniquitous fashion of high heels.—Home Journal.

The editor of an Illinois paper took a boy to learn the printer's trade. He was careful to impress upon his mind the necessity of obedience and of doing everything thoroughly. After preliminary instruction, the lad was given a stick and rule, and was taken to a case to wrestle with a piece of copy. The editor went off to a political convention. The other boys in the office paid but little attention to the new recruit, and when the editor returned half a day later, he found the boy down on his knees, searching for something on the floor. "What's the matter, Johnny?" said he. "Why, I dropped a type before I got the first line set," replied the boy, "and you told me before I went to work that whenever I dropped a type I must stop and pick it up before I did anything else. I've been looking for that derned type all day and I can't find it." Need we say that boy succeeded in business? He grew up, went West, and two weeks ago he was hanged in Nevada for horse stealing.

The editor of the Cartersville, Ga., Express says: "There is a little brown-eyed, enthusiastic, high spirited lady, who, after she has cooked breakfast, cleared the things away, set the house to rights, attended the call of the bread wagon and milked the cow, dons her hat and cloak, comes into this office, yanks us out of the editorial chair, pounces on the exchanges, amputates every item of interest, stacks them on the copy hook, grabs up a Faber, travels it over a quire of editor's manuscript paper, removes her snowy-white apron, shoves up her sleeves, grabs a stick and rule and sets it all into type, reads the proof and corrects every error. That's our wife and she will get her reward in heaven." Now comes the very natural query: "What does the editor himself do?

IMPROMPTU INGENUITY.

Some years ago, a Spanish steamer, while crossing the Bay of Biscay in a severe storm, gave such indications by an unusual noise at the stern, that there was something wrong with the screw propeller or its shaft outside of the ship—that is, in the open space between the stern and rudder posts where the screw revolves. There was no dry dock in any of the ports on the coast where the ship could go to be examined; and on arrival at Vigo it appeared as if there was no alternative but to remove the cargo from the stern, and by placing it forward thus lift the screw propellor and shaft to the surface of the water. The alternative, simple as it was, meant a serious delay and great expense. Before commencing to remove the cargo, another consultation was held. It was then decided to put the stern of the ship over a bed of light colored sand; and as the water was very clear, there might be a possibility of ascertaining the extent or cause of the mishap. For two days after the vessel was so placed, the wind caused a ripple on the water, which effectually prevented anything being seen. It was then suggested by some one on board to try the use of oil on the surface of the water round the stern of the ship. The effect was most satisfactory. The water was becalmed as if by magic, and it was then seen that the wedge or key which keeps the propeller in its place on the shaft had come partly out, and thus left the screw loose on the shaft, which caused the noise. By continuing the use of oil for a few hours, the wedge was ultimately driven into its place and secured. Many days of detention and the use of costly appliances and labor were thus saved.

HOW FRENCH WOMEN CROSS THE STREETS.

"Cress" writes from Paris to the Chicago Inter-Ocean: It is a rare treat to see a Parisienne cross a muddy street. She advances tip-toe to the edge of the pavement. There she poises like a bird ready for flight, and then deftly she raises her dress more than enough to show her embroidered skirt, the dainty hose, and elegant bottines, and without more delay she trips across, toe and heel hardly touching, and mud refusing to cling to the fairy feet that hardly leaves an impression on it. Landed on the other side, she gives her fine feathers a little shake into place and passes on with shoes that look as if put on at that moment. Watch an English woman immediately afterward. She reaches the curbstone, comes to a dead standstill, and solidly contemplates the muddy road. Finally she selects a route. Then very cautiously she lifts her shoes, making sure that the tops of her boots are under cover, and then slowly advancing she puts her right foot out—plump it goes, the water oozing over it, and then splash! splash! until the other side is reached, when with soiled skirts and soaked shoes, she proceeds on her wet and muddy way. Nothing could be more characteristic of their respective nationalities, and nothing could be more amusing than the mutual contempt for each other's ways.

It is hard to personate and act a part long, for where truth is not at the bottom, nature will always be endeavoring to return, and will peep out and betray herself one time or another.

Conceit is to nature what paint is to beauty; it is not only needless, but impairs what it would improve.

SPRING CLEANING.

Pumice Soap—the Foxboro make—the best thing out for taking off dirt from paint or the hands—3 cts. per cake, or 30 cts per dozen. Also Ball Soap at 25 cts per dozen. These are both way under price, and should be bought at once.

COMBS.

Children's Rubber Round Combs, in pretty styles, at five cents each; with wide fancy backs very nice and durable, for ten cents. Rubber fine Combs, five cents each, usually sold at ten cents. Heavy fancy back rubber dressing Combs, at ten cents each. The above are from a job lot of combs and are decided bargains.

CORSETS.

We will show you the same Corset that is sold on Essex Street for half a dollar—for thirty-one cents—and we give a Set of Cards with each pair. Our fifty cent Corset is superior to any offered at that price. Corsets for 75 cents and $1, Madam Foy's and Dr. Warner's Corsets, at PEABODY'S.

N. B.

Those Linen Diapers at eighty-eight cents, and the White Quilts at eighty-nine cents, are almost gone. Don't blame us if you do not get a supply; we have told you the whole story for two weeks—only a few left—come at once.

WE MARK DOWN

To-day a thirty-five cent Silk Hdkf to twenty-five cents. They were cheap at the old price, and are a big bargain at the new one—twenty-five cents—large size and nice colors. We have also a full stock of nicer Hdkfs—50c, 75c, and $1 each. A Stock second to none in the State.

THOSE

10 cent yard wide Cambrics, in choice colors, are selling rapidly; they are the same goods that are sold for 15 cents all about. Also a full line of spring colors in Prints. Black Cashmeres from 38 cents up. Black Silks a specialty.

REMNANTS

Of White Linens at about two-thirds their market value. This is a chance seldom offered, as linens are staple goods and very rarely come into the market much under price—all grades, from 25 cts. to $1 per yard, in short lengths. Examine them.

NEW MILLINERY.

Choice Ribbons in all widths; nice Flowers and Feathers; Straw Hats, Bonnets, &c., in all the newest and best designs. We shall receive all the new designs as soon as they appear in the market. We have connections with the importers, so that we shall be able to show a very attractive stock this season.

THAT EMBROIDERED TIE

At twenty-five cents, has been ordered by mail from all over the New England States, and from several States out of New England. We will guarantee to send a better Tie for the money than can be bought anywhere. Send us your orders—send three cent stamps anywhere from 25 cts. to $1, and you shall have the full value of your money, and more than you can obtain at home. A few only of the Tie that we send for nine three cent stamps are left.

HOSIERY.

As we have done for nearly a quarter of a century, we shall continue to do this season—i. e., have a better stock of Hosiery for Ladies and Misses than any other dealer, and we shall sell them at such prices that no one will try to compete with us. We have Hosiery for 5 cents, and from that up to $2.50 per pair. All the latest and choicest designs. Handsome pencil stripes, for 25 cents—regular 38 cent goods, &c.. &c.

GLOVES.

Our stock of Gloves, which we open to-day, is choice and desirable. As our orders were given very early, we are enabled to offer many styles that late buyers cannot obtain. We have given Kid Gloves especial attention, and are prepared to show a very choice stock at way down prices. In Lace Mitts and gloves we show pretty novelties.

BUTTONS, &C.

Dress Buttons, Garment Buttons, Gimps, Fringes, Ornaments, Tassels, Girdles, &c., we shall show as good a stock as usual, and our customers know that ours is always the best and cheapest line in the county. In Silk Girdles we we have just opened a fine line of the new shades. Also black and black with beads, &c.. &c.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Now we strike at the root of the business. We offer pure Linen Hdkfs., in ladies' sizes, at 4 cents each, or six for twenty-one cents. Better ones for 5 cents, or six for twenty-seven cents. Better still 6 cents, or six for thirty-three cents. Better still at 8 cents. or six for forty-three cents. And one more lot at 10 cents, or six for fifty-two cents. These are all splendid bargains—way below the regular price and well worth the attention of the public.

OUR STOCK

Was never in better condition, and we anticipate an increase on the very large sales of previous seasons. We shall try to show bargains that will make it for the interest for every lady to visit our store before making her spring purchases.

Respectfully.

JOHN P. PEABODY,

227 & 229 Essex Street, Salem.

The Peabody Press.

Wednesday Evening, April 13, 1881.

For the Better Accommodation of our Advertisers we have opened a Branch Office in Room 12, Browne's Block, Essex Street, Salem.

The nomination of Dr. Loring as Commissioner of Agriculture by all accounts is agreed upon, and is only held back by President Garfield for a break of the dead-lock in the Senate so that it may be confirmed.

Mr. Thos. B. Breare, the well-known Lynn book-binder, died at Marblehead last Monday, after a protracted illness, aged 33 years. In June, 1879, Mr. B. was stricken with an attack of nervous prostration, doubtless superinduced by too close an application to business, finally terminating in his death. He will be missed by a large circle of acquaintances and friends.

William A. Andrews of Gloucester, who crossed the ocean in the boat Nautilus, contemplates to again cross the Atlantic, and, after sojourning at a few European cities, to proceed to Yokohama in Japan, and cross the Pacific from there to San Francisco, via the Sandwich Islands, if practicable. The boat will be constructed and managed on philosophical principles, and be much more diminutive and in his estimation safer and better than any previous effort. In all probability the crew will be the Andrews brothers.

Mr. Earle, the proprietor of Earle's Hotel, New York city, does not scare worth a cent. On the 6th inst. he received a letter from some unknown party, threatening to blow him and his hotel sky-high for entertaining Capt. Boycott, his wife, and two relatives. "We have boms heare as well as in Russia, and the shorter they stay in your house the better for your bisness." Mr. Earle was so indignant that he ordered the porter to hoist the English flag on his hotel, and offers a reward for information in regard to the author of the letter.

The attitude of President Garfield on the Mormon question is the most hopeful indication of the times that this blackest disgrace now resting upon the nation is to be thoroughly and promptly wiped out. The strongest and earnest words on this topic uttered in the President's inaugural will be found to have a meaning, and it is already announced that a policy is being framed which will prove effective in stamping out the iniquity that has thus far defied not only the public sentiment of the people, but the laws of the land that have been framed for its eradication. The present administration can win no grander achievement than the destruction of polygamy with all its degrading influences.

We are indebted to Mr. John B. Wilson, of Harvard College, for a copy of the Echo containing a canvass of the religious views of the students. This canvass demonstrates the fact that the college is no longer a Unitarian institution, and that the various sects stand in the following proportions:

Episcopalians,	28.8 per cent.
Unitarians,	22.5 "
Ortho. Cong.,	17.6 "
Baptists,	4.3 "
R. Catholics,	3.4 "
Presbyterians,	3. "
Swedenborgians,	2. "
Methodists,	1.6 "

Agnostics, Atheists and Non-Sectarians together make only 13 per cent., while of Trinitarians there are over 60 per cent.

Within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant we have never had so severe a winter as the one from which we are just almost emerging. The first borean blast that swept down on us in this section was in November. No one seemed to mind it as it was thought to be a mere chance wave that had drifted off from Greenland's icy mountains, and struck us just by accident. In fact no one was prepared for it. Few if any of our citizens had closed up their cellar windows, or made any preparation for their protection from the cold blasts of winter's storms. But after the first cold weather reached us it continued to increase in severity, and with the recurrent falls of snow and the icy condition of the roads, the people enjoyed a full three months' carnival of sleighing. The thermometer has been a number of times down as low as twelve degrees before zero, and most of the time the mercury has been standing in the vicinity at zero. The truth is we have had a regular old blizzard of a winter, and the children of to-day may live many years before they will experience any like it, and may recall it in days to come as one of the coldest ever known in the history of the country.

Messrs. Schollar & Donnell will receive shortly an invoice of Snow Flake Haxall Flour in Half Barrels.—Adv.

MR. EDITOR, — I am not familiar with the line of telephone wire as it is, or soon will be, laid as a fire-alarm in this town, but is it not possible to so extend it as to make it useful as a fire-alarm to the residents on the way to, and in the district around, the West school house? Might it not be advisable to extend the new wires so that a telephone could be established at some central point in the West District. I believe it would be patronized, also, beyond its use as a fire-alarm, and that, if the wires were so extended, some individuals would endeavor to have private telephones connected with those wires? Why not extend it along Lowell street, by Proctor's Crossing, passing Messrs. Walcott, Needham, Taylor, etc., and perhaps terminating at the West Peabody Post Office? F. H. A.

April 11, 1881.

LONG LINE TELEPHONING.—Boston and Providence are now regularly connected by telephone. On the opening day experimental connections were made between Providence and Weston, 15 miles beyond Boston, and afterwards the lines were connected with Haverhill, Mass., 100 miles distant and with Springfield, Mass., 150 miles distant, by the route the wire follows, and conversation was freely carried on with those cities. The length of the line from the Boston Exchange to the Providence Exchange is about 50 miles.—The number of poles is 1,666, beside several house-top fixtures and 535 feet of cable. The poles vary from 40 to 70 feet in height. The poles and cross-arms are calculated to carry 49 wires. The line was opened for business with eight wires, to run which 122,613 pounds of wires have been used. The line, it is said, is to be extended from Providence to New York as rapidly as possible.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The eleventh meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, April 8th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, the President presiding. It was opened by a selection from the quartette. The subject for discussion, "Domestic Animals, their uses and care," was to have been opened by Mr. C. S. Emerton; in his absence Mr. Farwell made a few opening remarks from his practical experience in the raising and treatment of young animals, the breaking of colts, and the general uses and care of all animals. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Spaulding, Mr. James P. King and Mr. Walcott, after which Mr. Farwell was called upon to take the floor, and questioned at considerable length upon the subject as to care and management of animals, the treatment of disorders, etc.; Mr. A. T. Newhall and others also spoke. The selections rendered by the quartette add much to the interests of the meeting. To all appearances this is one of the model Farmers' Clubs of New England, and much credit is due to the originator by setting on foot the noble enterprise, where all good citizens can meet to counsel on the many important subjects to the farmer which are brought up at these meetings.

The subject for next Friday evening is "Our Social Relations as Farmers;" the discussion to be opened by James P. King of Peabody.

Senator Mahone made a very good showing on Monday. He denied that the Virginia readjusters are repudiators, but that they only disagreed with their opponents within the State as to the method of meeting the State's obligations. His party held that two-thirds of the money the State had borrowed Virginia was bound in law and honor to pay, but that the other third belonged to West Virginia. He declared that the readjusters' platform was much honester than that of the Virginia Bourbons, and sharply criticised the repudiating tendencies of some of his critics. There seems now no prospect of any immediate termination of the discussion.

Isaac W. Sprague, "the living skeleton," who has been so long one of the curiosities of travelling shows, was presented the other day to a class at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.—Prof. Arnold considers this a remarkable case of progressive wasting, a disease of the spinal cord leading to wasting of the tissue. The remarkable feature of the case is that the man has lasted so long—twenty-seven years — for the disease usually kills in five years.

If a person of fair complexion exposes himself to the electric light for some time examining the action of lamps, the hands and cheeks will show all the symptoms of "sunburn," even in midwinter, and he will develop freckles on his countenance as quick as when he goes about unprotected by a sun-umbrella in mid-summer.

A person who had an opportunity to see a circus clown make up his show countenance, says that before applying the colors, he gave his face a good coating of mutton tallow to protect his skin from the paint. Here is a hygienic suggestion for those ladies who decorate their faces.

Baird's famous New Orleans Minstrels appear at Peabody Institute next Tuesday evening. This is the second time they appear here this season. A good minstrel show always draws a large audience, and when we consider the object is to add to the charity fund of Union Post 50, G. A. R., we can predict a hearty support from all.

To-morrow evening Rev. Dr. Miner, of Boston, will speak upon the temperance question, in the Universalist Church, under the auspices of the Peabody Temperance Union, the new temperance organization in town. The reputation of the gentleman as an eloquent and able speaker is such that none who can attend should fail to do so.

Business was generally suspended on Fast Day, though some of the stores were open in the forenoon. Some improved the opportunity to take off the double windows and scrape up the back yard. Rev. Mr. Sperry occupied the pulpit of the South Church. The trains to Boston were well patronized. In the afternoon a 200 yard dash was contested on Lynnfield street, for a purse of $12, between Thomas F. Kennedy and Thomas Black. Kennedy won.

Our friend, B. F. Stevens, tells us that the Bomb has gone off, but that nobody was killed. He will still continue to keep a good line of his class of goods, stationery, school books, fine cutlery and many other useful and pleasing articles. The Bomb was not genuine, but the bargains he will offer you are. Now that all danger is over he will repair watches and jewelry in the best manner, and try and repair by attention and fair prices the interest which the Bomb has excited.

The extensive piggery built a few years ago by Mr. Charles F. Goodrich, on the South Reading Branch Railroad, near Ship Rock, was totally destroyed by fire about three o'clock last Sunday morning. The building was some 400 feet long and 25 feet wide, divided into pens which extend outside the building. The building has been vacant for some time. The fire must have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is estimated from $3000 to $4000, and is partially insured. A general alarm was given, and was promptly responded to by the fire department.

The following officers and committees of the Peabody Temperance Union have been elected:

President—Rev. L. L. Wood.

Vice Presidents — Rev. J. W. Hudson, Isaac Hardy, Esq.

Secretary and Treasurer—Mr. J. T. Cassino.

Finance Committee — Messrs. Henry H. Proctor, Frank T. Arnold and Isaiah Chute.

Standing Committee — Rev. G. M. Harmon, Messrs. George Randall and Isaac A. Drown.

Music Committee—Rev. W. G. Sperry, Miss Mary J. Floyd.

Entertainment Committee — Rev. Daniel Steele, D. D., Miss Sarah E. Perkins and Miss Martha O. Barrett.

At a meeting of the Selectmen last Saturday, Mr. Thomas W. Peasley was appointed Chief, and Mr. F. O. Parker, Assistant. The petition of Mr. John Ruth for the position of Chief was withdrawn. Besides the above the following were also appointed:

Measurers of Upper Leather—Oliver Emerson, James S. Paul, Joshua Giddings, Warren Bushby, Geo. Randall, Augustus H. Harrington, Jr., William C. Beckett.

Measurers of Wood and Bark — Wm. S. Osborne, Samuel Donnell, James B. Newhall.

Weigher of Hay and Coal—William Frye.

Sealer of Weights and Measures—George R. Norton.

The alarm of fire at about 2 o'clock this afternoon proceeded from the cottage house on Lowell Street, recently owned by the Misses M. E. and H. L. Osborn. Fire was discovered in the rear attic chamber of the L, and but for the timely assistance of the many workmen in the vicinity serious damage must have ensued. The fire undoubtedly originated from a stove funnel protruding from the floor, and connecting a stove in the kitchen underneath and the chimney in the attic where the fire originated. Directly over this funnel, where it enters the chimney by an elbow about a foot from the floor, there are clothes hooks in a wooden partition, and the probabilities are that they were occupied with light clothing, which ignited by being in too near proximity to the funnel.

VOLUNTEER BALL.—No ball held in this vicinity this season has been productive of more genuine satisfaction to its participants than the thirty-eighth annual ball of the Volunteer Engine Company, No. 4, at Upton's Hall, last Wednesday night. A large party, numbering more than one hundred couples and made up mostly of of the firemen of this and neighboring towns, with their ladies, were present on this occasion. A little before nine o'clock Ryan's band of Boston tuned up their instruments and the grand march commenced, headed by Engineer Peirce and lady; dancing followed, which continued uninterruptedly till about midnight when an intermission and supper took place. The toilettes of the ladies were varied and tasteful, and, blending and harmonizing with the jackets of the firemen, made a grand and ravishing spectacle. The music by Ryan's band was rich, full and harmonizing, and their efforts to please were heartily appreciated. About seventy-five couples sat down to an excellent supper, which consisted of cold meats, turkey, pastry, fruits, ice cream, tea, coffee, etc. Mr. Ira A. Burnham did the catering. After supper dancing was resumed and continued till daylight when the party broke up. The weather was all that could be desired, the temperature being cold and agreeable. The floor was under the efficient management of Foreman Jas. S. Smith and his aids. The orders of dances were more elaborate than usual, the committee making extra exertions to obtain the best that could be furnished. They consisted of handsome valentine covers with twelve pages printed in two colors, and comprised, besides the dances, the several committees, bill of fare, music, etc. They bore the imprint of the Peabody PRESS. After the ball a breakfast was given to the out-of-town firemen, to the number of sixty. The ball was free from all rowdyism, and everybody was satisfied and had a good time.

THE BOMB.—The credulity of mankind is greater than we expected. The number of people who can not tell a preparation of potash and resin from a bomb-shell is large. The bomb on exhibition last week was a harmless compound. It is strange that any one who gave it a moment's thought should believe our friend Stevens would keep such a dangerous missile as one of the real bombs about his premises. It helped demonstrate with how little investigation some of our contemporaries make up their items. We have thought for some time that our Salem brethren depended too much for their reports upon inexperienced youths, earnest enough perhaps, but whose sense of dignity as correspondents outweighs their actual responsibility and care. It is evident beside that the bait was swallowed nearer home, hook and all. We hope none who were interested in the little ball as a curiosity will feel badly to be told it was not a real bomb; but there was a special object in carrying out the delusion, which proved what was expected it would. Hereafter when we see young fellows just out of school attempting to pass themselves off as veteran journalists, we shall be tempted to say "bomb, bomb, young man." When we see a whole column of items rehashed without credit given, we shall say "bomb, bomb, be careful." When we see items transferred verbatim et literatim, we shall think, "bomb, bomb, brother editor." In fact, the lesson we have intended to teach by our little bomb is one of great moral value. It is, don't believe all you hear, nor trust all you see, but take a real live, independent, careful paper like the PRESS, and read it carefully, and in addition do a little thinking on your account, and don't be afraid of bombs of any kind which are only such in appearance.

CHURCH MATTERS.—At the annual meeting of the proprietors of the South Church, last Monday evening, the following officers were elected:

Clerk—George A. Osborne.
Treasurer—Aaron F. Clark.
Standing Committee — Franklin Osborn, Jr., Henry H. Proctor, Chas. C. Pike.
Music Committee—Rufus H. Brown, Thomas M. Stimpson, A. A. Abbott.

It was voted that the Standing Committee be empowered to hire a Collector.

The receipts from weekly contributions during the past fiscal year have been about $2,500, and the church is free from debt.

At the annual meeting of the First Baptist Society, held on Monday evening, April 11th, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

Clerk—Abraham C. Osborne.
Standing Committee—Daniel Woodbury, Pyam D. Perkins, Geo. Stevens.
Collector—Alden F. Rowell.
Treasurer—James Cook.

The finances of the Society, as reported by the Standing Committee, are in most excellent condition. The Society is free from debt, with a good sum in the treasury.

At a Texas editorial convention the question was presented for discussion: "Resolved, that Amateur printers are a tremendous nuisance." "Gentlemen," said the president of the convention, pinning the paper to his desk with his bowie knife, "give us a question with two sides to it."—Printer Advertiser.

☞ It is not the quantity eaten that gives strength, life, blood and health. It is the thorough digestion of the food taken, let it be much or little. Therefore, do not stimulate up the stomach to crave food, but rather assist digestion after eating, by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator. mar 30—1m

"What do the Democrats want of Mahone?" asks a morning journal. Just what the darkey wanted of the 'possum. "Nice, fat possum; make dreffu good stew," said the darkey just as he was going to put his hand upon him; but the 'possum escaped. Then the colored brother shook his empty fist at him and cried out, "You old 'possum! you're not so berry fat arter all."—New York Mail.

Chas. McKnight, one of the editors and proprietors of the Philadelphia Evening News, and some time ago one of the editors of the Press, died in that city Jan. 22, at his residence in West Philadelphia. He was born in Pittsburg, September 4, 1826, of Scotch-Irish extraction, his father having been one of the most prominent of the early dry goods merchants of that city. His education was received at Princeton College, and when he was graduated from that institution he began the study of law, but ceased it to enter upon a two-years' tour to Europe. Upon his return from the Continent he became the editor and proprietor of the Pittsburg Evening Chronicle. About the year 1870 he commenced the publication of the Illustrated People's Monthly. In 1873 he issued in that periodical his historical romance entitled "Old Fort Duquesne," a work that attracted considerable attention both in this country and in Europe. Among other works he wrote "Our Western Border" and "Simon Girty."

☞ Mr. Jos. H. Denson, Clerk and Recorder of Sevier County, Arkansas, says in a recent letter: "I have forgotten whether I wrote you concerning the almost marvelous effect the Compound Oxygen Treatment had on me. I was suffering from Bronchitis, and had been for three months—had almost despaired of recovery—when I commenced the Treatment. I could feel a marked change on the first night I took it. I had not enjoyed a good night's rest for something over three months; but on the night I first took the Treatment I slept splendidly, and afterwards continued to improve rapidly until I was cured. If you see fit you can use this for the benefit of sufferers." Full information about this new Treatment for Chronic Diseases, sent free by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Phila., Pa.

Cities and newspapers spring up in the mining regions like magic. It is only a few months ago that the public first heard of Gunnison City, Colorado, but now we have before us the Gunnison Democrat with a double-sheet supplement, describing the new El Dorado of the mountains. Gunnison is given as the metropolis of Southwestern Colorado; Pitkin is pictured as the Golden Gate to Gunnison; Gothic City is portrayed as the city of silver wires; Irwin is presented as the ruby camp; Scofield is the Rook-Creek metropolis, and Crested Butte is the central city of the Elk mountains. All these new cities have been created within a few months, and they are now teeming with the restless, adventurous population that develops the vast wealth of the mines and lays the foundations for great States in the West.—Philadelphia Times.

☞ WOMEN WHO SUFFER. — The greatest sufferers in the world are women; their delicate organization being peculiarly susceptible to derangement and disease. Among those who have been cured by Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" we will name Mrs. S. A. McIlwain of Fergusonville, N. Y., Mrs. John F. Brinkerhoff, Highland, N. Y., Mrs. Edward Meyers, of Rondout, N. Y., and many others. "Favorite Remedy" purifies the blood, invigorates the system, and fortifies it against the disease. All druggists have it.

The editor of a country paper does more work gratuitously for the town and community than all the rest of the population put together, and as compensation therefor he gets more kicks than caresses.—Hackensack Republican.

☞ Derangement of the liver, with constipation, injure the complexion, induce pimples, sallow skin, etc. Remove the cause by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. One a dose.

☞ There are many forms of nervous debility in men that yield to the use of Carter's Iron Pills. Those who are troubled with nervous weakness, night sweats, etc., should try them.

Poor fellow! take that—I wish it was more." He was soon lost in the night. Upon approaching a street lamp the citizen found that the miscreant had given him a ten dollar bill. Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT,

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the receipt is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house ac Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

A MONUMENT AT YORKTOWN.

Congress, immediately upon the reception of Washington's letter with the information of the signature of the articles of capitulation, which were brought to them by Col. Tilgham, one of his aides-de-camp, walked in procession, attended by an immense concourse of people, to the Dutch Lutheran Church, to return thanks to the God of nations and of battles for the victory. A day was set for national thanksgiving and prayer, and proclaimed. On the 26th of October thanks were voted to the Generals, the officers and men. Two stands of royal colors taken were voted to Washington, in the name of the United States; two pieces of field ordnance were presented to Count Rochambeau, with a brief but suitable inscription. The Chevalier de la Luzerne was requested to ask the King, in the name of the Congress, to permit the Count de Grasse to receive a similar testimonial. A horse properly caparisoned and an elegant sword were given to the gallant Tilghman, the messenger of tidings. Later, a medal was struck at Paris, under the direction of Franklin, the American Minister at the Court of Versailles, with the device of the infant Hercules strangling two serpents, indicative of the enfolding and capture of the armies of Burgoyne and Cornwallis, and in perpetual memory of the event Congress resolved to erect at Yorktown a marble column adorned with emblems of the alliance between the United States and his most Christian Majesty. The Duke de Rochefoucauld-Lancourt, who visited the battle-field in 1796, noting the absence of the monument, remarks in a tone of natural bitterness that the resolution for its creation was as entirely forgotten as many of the American people would be glad to forget the services it was intended to commemorate. Adequate apology for the national neglect is impossible, but there is extenuation. The French Revolution, though founded on principles of liberty and justice, drifted far from the pure intentions of its authors. The Christian Majesty whose generous intervention endeared him to the American people fell beneath the guillotine. The imperial policy which upset and followed the Revolution was not friendly to republican government, and, on occasions, directly hostile to the interests and dignity of the United States. The Restoration had neither the respect nor the sympathy of freemen, and when at last Lafayette himself set a civic crown on the head of the citizen king, and harmonized for a time the royal authority with the liberty of the people, a half century had passed with its alienation and differences. The events of the last fifty years it is needless to recall. To-day how different. Through darkness and despair, through rivers of blood, France has risen to self-government and self-control. The Republic holds in secure grasp every element of power, every condition of existence. Firm and strong, she extends to us the hand of friendship. She recalls to us the glory of the elder time. She acknowledges to us her debt of example, and erects upon our shores a statute of Liberty Illumining the World. We cannot be deaf to her call, we must not be blind to her munificence. The centennial anniversary draws on apace. The national spirit is revived. The national wealth and power and pride are at their zenith. The infant Hercules has become the giant Republic. When the October sun shall hereafter rise in its perennial course may its morning rays as they lift from the Atlantic waves gild the spotless shaft which shall stand for countless ages the witness of a nation's gratitude, and as they fall upon each rood of surface of this broad continent, and finally sink in parting effulgence in the deep bosom of the Pacific Ocean, may we remember, and our children, and children's children after us remember, the obligations we owe France for our establishment and security in this vast heritage.—John Austin Stevens, in Magazine of American History.

A RARE OLD BIBLE.

There is an old Bible up in the Congressional Library at Washington which is well worth a walk to the Capitol to examine. It is of Italian origin, and is supposed to have been written in the thirteenth or fourteenth century, but the actual date is unknown. It is written in Latin, upon vellum, in clear bold characters, and extremely uniform. The writing is in two columns, about three inches wide, and a margin of two inches. It is embellished with one hundred and forty-six miniature paintings and upward of one thousand two hundred smaller illuminations, which are beautifully executed, and are as brilliant to-day as the day they were done. The initials on books and prologues are two and a half inches in height, and those of the chapters are one inch in height. It is contained in two large volumes, and cost the government two thousand two hundred dollars in gold when gold was at a high premium, and was purchased at a sale of the library of Henry Perkins, Hanworth Park, near London, in June, 1873. The skins in the first volume have all been repaired, except five; in the second volume they are nearly all perfect.

The only cure for indolence is work; the only cure for selfishness is sacrifice; the only cure for unbelief is to shake off the ague of doubt by doing your conscience's bidding; the only cure for timidity is to plunge into some dreaded duty before the chill comes on.

When one gets so much humility that he is proud of it, he is just too good to live.

When a friend corrects a fault in you, he does you the greatest act of friendship.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thigh-bone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

AT THE STAMP-WINDOW.

Just before eleven o'clock yesterday forenoon there were thirteen men and one woman at the stamp-window of the postoffice. Most of the men had letters to post for the Eastern trains. The woman had something tied up in a blue match-box. She got there first, and she held the position with her head in the window and both elbows on the shelf.

"Is there such a place in this country as Cleveland?" she began.

"Oh, yes."

"Do you send mail there?"

"Yes."

"Well, a woman living next door asked me to mail this box for her. I guess it's directed all right. She said it ought to go for a cent."

"Takes two cents," said the clerk, after weighing it. "If there's writing inside it will cost twelve cents."

"Mercy on me, but how you do charge!"

Here the thirteen men began to push up and hustle around, and talk about one old match-box delaying two dozen business letters, but the woman had lots of time.

"Then it will be two cents, eh?"

"If there is no writing inside."

"Well, there may be. I know she is a great hand to write. She's sending some flower seed to her sister, and I presume she has told her how to plant 'em."

"Two threes,' cried out one of the crowd as he tried to get to the window.

"Hurry up," called another.

"There ought to be a separate window here for women," growled a third.

"Then it will take twelve cents," she calmly queried, as she fumbled around for her purse.

"Yes."

"Well, I'd better pay it, I guess."

From one pocket she took two coppers. From her reticule she took a three-cent piece. From her purse she fished out a nickel; and it was only after a hunt of eighty seconds that she got the twelve cents together. She then consumed four minutes in licking on the stamps, asking where to post the box, and wondering if there really was any writing inside, but woman proposes and man disposes. Twenty thousand dollars' worth of business was being detained by a twelve-cent woman, and a tidal wave suddenly took her away from the window. In sixty seconds the thirteen men had been waited on and gone their ways, and the woman returned to the window, handed in the box, and said:

"Them stamps are licked on kind o' crooked, but it won't make any difference, will it?"—Detroit Free Press.

FEMALE DRESS IN ANCIENT TIMES.

In the wardrobe of a Hebrew lady, the most splendid article of clothing was the turban, for those who could afford it. The poor people had to be satisfied with winding a piece of cloth round their head, and fixing it as well as they could. The turbans were of various colors, and wound in different ways; some of them were like a high tower. Shoes and stockings were unknown, but soles of leather were fastened with two latchets. The ladies who carried luxury into every department, and who are supposed, even in the present day, to be far from indifferent to a nice, neat boot, or to elegant slippers, had their shoes, or rather sandals, and their latchets, made of colored leather; dark blue, violet, and purple, were favorite colors. The ankles were decorated with bracelets of gold or dainty silver chains and rings, with tiny silver bells. Hairnets and headbands were in great request. The latter were of gold and silver, and worn under the net, extending from one ear to the other. Ear-rings were much thought of; we are told of some that weighed a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold, and were so large that a man could easily put his hand through them. Some of the women wore several rings with little bells attached to them. They were generally made of horn or of silver. But the most popular ring was the nose-ring. The left nostril was pierced for the purpose, and a ring made of ivory or metal put through it. Bracelets were favorite ornaments, and generally worn on the right arm. Some of them were exceedingly large, so that they reached up to the elbow. Rings on the finger were not worn; chains of fine gold, or strings of pearls, with little silver balls, or small tinkling bells, were worn round the neck.

A SURGEON'S DEATH.

Dr. Wilms, the late distinguished and beloved German surgeon, came to his death by a pitiful road. Just as he completed an operation, his assistant accidentally pricked him with a needle under the thumb-nail. Dr. Wilms treated the tiny wound as all surgeons know how to do, yet, in attending afterward upon another patient, a particle of poisonous matter found its way to the wound. About an hour later a fierce burning set in, and the experienced operator, who knew every phenomenon of the human organization so exactly, told his colleagues that blood-poisoning had set in. His friends believed that the means which he used had expelled the poison; but Doctor Wilkes himself was less sanguine. He had just reached his fifty-eighth year.

As everything in the life of the creek depends upon the connection with the great, unresting ocean yonder, so everything in the spiritual life of man depends upon the soul's connection with God.

The more we study human nature the less we think of men—the more of man.—Tilton.

I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. Mrs. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

INSPECTION. — Grand Concert and Ball of the Salem Mechanic Light Infantry takes place in Mechanic Hall, Salem, next Tuesday evening, April 19. Gov. Long and staff, and Lieut.-Gov. Weston will arrive on the 7 o'clock train, and will be received by a committee of the veterans. They will be conveyed in carriages to the Essex House, where they will be received by the reception committee. At 7.30 o'clock the active company, with the American Band of Providence, will leave their armory on Washington St., march to the Essex House and escort their guests to Mechanic Hall. The hall will be handsomely decorated by Messrs. Lampiel & Marble of Boston. The American Band will give one of the finest promenade concerts on that evening ever given in Salem, consisting of the following music:

1. Hungarian March. Berlois.
2. Overture, Hungarian Sustipiel, Reler Bela.
3. Cornet Solo, Russian Air Varie, Levy
4. Chinese Patrol, Vuerner.
5. War Memories—"A day in camp. in 1862." Reeves.
6. Grand Fantasie—"A summer's day in Norway." Wemers.
7. { a Egyptian March. Strauss. { b Baby Polka. Rial.

The 19th of April is the twentieth anniversary of the departure of the company to the war in defence of the Union. The arrangements are under the charge of an efficient committee, who are striving to do all in their power to make it a grand success. Tickets can be procured in Peabody at the stores of Starr C. Hewitt, D. P. Grosvenor and of W. M. Ward, at the Post Office.

Mr. E. V. Emilio offers some rare bargains in pianos.

Mr. Wm. R. Weeks announces on our second page that he has opened a lot of the latest styles of Spring and Summer garments for ladies. Gloves, corsets, etc., in endless variety.

John P. Peabody has begun his spring cleaning, and is offering every kind of ladies' goods in his store at way down prices. His advertisement is as good as a story; combs, corsets, hosiery, gloves, etc., being the characters, and "that embroidered tie" the heroine, as near as we can judge. In this cleaning out there are no stove pipes to take down nor wash tubs to tumble over, but plenty of nice goods to fall in love with and to become the possessors of as speedily as possible.—Danvers Mirror.

Ladies can buy their goods cheaper at Frank Cousins' than at any milliner's. They have but to visit the Bee-Hive to appreciate this fact.

The Naumkeag Clothing House of Salem, have opened a branch store at Gloucester which is meeting with the success deserved. This firm will soon have a grand opening, and it has been our privilege to see some of the bargains they will offer; among them, a very neat business suit for only $6.00, and everything else as cheap in proportion.

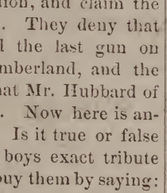
Marbleheaders are sensitive. They deny the truth of the old established legend:—

"Old Flud Oirson, for his horrd hortt,
Torr'd an' futhered and corr'd in a corrt,
By the women of Morble'ead."

They deny that Newburyport had the first men on Boston common in response to Gov. Andrew's call for troops to suppress the Rebellion, and claim the honor for their town. They deny that Nat Magowen fired the last gun on board the frigate Cumberland, and the Statesman asserts that Mr. Hubbard of Marblehead fired it. Now here is another for it to deny. Is it true or false that the Marblehead boys exact tribute from Salemites and buy them by saying: "Gimme a cent, Mister, and then I won't rock yer."—Georgetown Advocate.

"Inquirer" asks: "Is the Great Eastern the largest vessel ever built?" An impression has got abroad that she is, but such is not the case. The Mayflower, in which the Pilgrim fathers came to this country, was the largest ship that ever ploughed the waters.—The old furniture scattered over this country brought over by the Mayflower would fill the Great Eastern a dozen times or more.

The first woman to apply for admission to the bar of this State is a Miss Robinson, who has pursued a course of studies for the past three years. She was at one time a student at the Boston University Law School. As she is the first woman to claim the right to practice law in this State, the result will be watched with interest.



Browne's Phonographic Monthly for March contains the first of a series of lessons on shorthand reporting; also, reporting exercises interesting to the advanced student and the reporter, and has phonographic news from all parts of the county. D. L. Scott-Browne, Publisher, 23 Clinton Place, N. Y.

There was a young maiden named Rose,
Most fearful of mud on her clothes.
As she stepped o'er the gutter
We heard a boy mutter,
"She's seventeen stripes on her hose!"

We have received the following circular from the office of the Public Printer, Washington, relating to the official records of the War of the Rebellion, which will be published in series, as follows:

The 1st series will embrace the formal reports, both Union and Confederate, of military operations, with the correspondence, orders, and returns relating specially thereto, and will be accompanied by an Atlas. In this series, the events will be arranged according to the campaigns and several theatres of operations, (in chronological order), and the Union reports of any event will be immediately followed by the Confederate accounts. The correspondence, etc., not embraced in the "reports" will follow (first Union and next Confederate) in chronological order. This will be the series most desired by the public, and, according to the present estimate, it will embrace about eighty octavo volumes, averaging 800 pages each. The first has been issued, and will be sent, securely wrapped, postpaid. Price, bound in cloth, one dollar per volume; in half Turkey, two dollars per volume. Payment invariably to accompany subscription. Subscriptions received to but one volume at a time.—The second volume will be issued probably about the 1st of May. A list of subscribers is kept, to whom notice will be given when the succeeding volumes are ready for delivery. The 2d series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports and returns, Union and Confederate, relating to Prisoners of War, and (so far as the military authorities were concerned) to State or political prisoners. This series will probably embrace four octavo volumes. The third series will contain the correspondence, orders, reports and returns of the Union authorities, embracing their correspondence with the Confederate officials, and not relating specially to the subjects of the first and second series. This will embrace about eight volumes. The fourth series will exhibit the correspondence, etc., of the Confederate authorities not embodied in the preceding series, and will embrace about four volumes.

ADVICE TO MARRIED PEOPLE.—A worthy wife of forty years' standing, and whose life was not all made of sunshine and peace, gave the following impressive advice to a newly married pair of her acquaintance. The advice is so good and well suited to all married people as well as those entering that state, that we here publish it for the benefit of such persons: "Preserve securely the privacies of your own house, your married state and your heart! Let no father, mother, sister or brother ever presume to come between you or share the joy or sorrow that belongs to you two alone. With mutual help build up your quiet world, not allowing your dearest friend to be the confident of aught that becomes your domestic peace. Let moments of alienation, if they occur, be healed at once. Never, no never, speak of it outside, but to each other confess, and all will come out right. Never let the morrow's sun find you still at variance. Renew and renew your vow; it will do you good, and thereby your minds will grow together, contented in that love which is stronger than death, and will become truly one."

This is the reckless young compositor who inserted the puff for our pressman in our last issue. Don't do it again, John, be warned in time.

A good, stylish, well fitting and thoroughly made to order, Light Weight Overcoat is what you can get at WILMOT'S for the very low price of $9. Better quality for $10, and the best for $16. Dress Suits from $25 to $35. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed.

Speaking of India merchants, there is William D. Pickman, a Back bay resident—living at 25 Commonwealth avenue—where he has what may well be called a princely mansion. He is the son of Dudley Pickman of Salem, dead for years, an eminent merchant in the East India trade. He had many ships, and sent them loaded to India, and they came back full of money, sir; full of money, or money's worth. He had two daughters, one of whom married Richard S. Fay, and the other Richard S. Rogers of Salem. The old gentleman, Dudley Pickman, died very rich, worth about $3,000,000, I should say. His son has nothing to do, but look after the extensive interests left him. But he is very rich, sir; and, I am told, a good, gentlemanly man. He is not in robust health, I should judge. When the Pickman house at Beverly was burned, some years since, it is said that a collection of India curiosities—works or art of that Eastern people which were of great value, and could never be replaced—were destroyed in it. The money left by Mr. Pickman was probably not all made in the India trade.—Judicious investments at home, no doubt, swelled the volume of his fortune, as it has done those of many others.—Herald Cor.

"My name is Acton," said a man who visited the Gazette office recently. "Acton. Is there anything funny in that name?" "No," answered the weary brow-beater of all opposing factions. "Do you see anything funny in my appearance?" "I'm going to give you a joke, and then you will be willing to send me the paper free. In strict accordance with the philosophy of life, all animals are more dependent on the mother, and, of course, have more affection for her than for the father. Ain't that a fact?" "Yes, daily one year?" "Did I say all animals? I mistake. There is one animal that is equally dependent upon the father. Do you want to know what animal that is?" "See the advertising man, will you?" "That animal is the cub bear. Shall I tell you why?" "No, sir." "But I will. In the summer the cub bear sucks his ma, and in the winter he sucks his paw.—Send the paper to Gum Spring, Wilacut County. Good day."—Arkansas Gazette.

The wisest and most successful mothers are those who avoid, whenever possible, direct issues on trivial matters with young children who have a very positive will of their own. It is quite possible to "go one eye" on little delinquences without being blind to disobedience or wrong-doing. Those, especially, who cannot rule their own spirits should be very careful not needlessly to precipitate a conflict with those under them. There is sometimes more courage in running away than in fighting; more wisdom in avoiding the issue than in asserting authority.

A. T. Stewart's remains are now supposed to rest in the Cathedral in Garden City, built by Mrs. Stewart as a mausoleum for the cadaver stolen from St. Mark's churchyard in New York. If he had been poor, a politician, or beloved, there would have been no doubt about it.

Monopoly.

The consolidation and monopolization of the different telegraph lines throughout the country by a few of our bonanza-moneyed kings is a stepping stone to a power which is calculated to bring about an internal strife which in the end we are afraid may prove more disastrous to our home interests than the late civil war we have passed through. In order to obviate anything of the kind in the future the State or National Government in granting concession to corporations should place them under certain restrictions, more especialiy should this be the case where the means of transit are to be effected. We, for one, think the General Government should be the owner of all the telegraph lines in the country, and that it should fix uniform rates for the transmission of messages the same as they are fixed by the Governments of Great Britain and France. In Great Britain the telegraph lines are now owned by the Government, and one shilling is the tariff for sending a message of twenty words to any part of the Kingdom, including Ireland; while in this country the rates are fixed according to the distance the message is sent, and the expense here is no greater than there providing all the connections are thrown on. There is now practically but one solitary telegraph company throughout America, and its lines are not the property of the Government to be used for the benefit of its citizens, but they belong to one man—a rich broker and stock operator of New York, Jay Gould by name, who contrives to secure all the telegraph lines throughout the country. It is remarkable that all the shareholders in all the telegraph lines we have should have so readily consented to surrender their rights and privileges. Mr. Gould is now very little removed from an autocratic ruler or emperor, and has really more power to dictate to the people than many a European potentate.

Aside from the telegraph monopoly, there are our leading railroad magnates, Scott, Garrett, Vanderbilt, Gould and Huntington. How easy it would be, as suggested by an exchange, for these men, who represent a cash capital of $500,000,000, with the warehouses and elevators of the leading grain marts of the West and Southwest under their control, filled to their utmost capacity, with the demand heavy abroad and a general desire to push everything forward to the Eastern seaboard, and controlling the means of transit, to advance the rates of freight one, two or three cents per bushel on grain, thereby impoverishing the producer, and making millions for these moneyed monopolists. We think that it is time to call a halt; that the Government should take the matter in hand, and either control or restrict these great powers.

In a divorce case which was tried before a judge in New York, last week, the plaintiff's attorney said he had a letter from the defendant admitting the truth of the accusation on account of which the divorce was asked. This led the judge to express his opinion as to the value of such evidence by saying that he did not consider it "worth a snap of his finger." He also said that there was cullusion in one-half of the divorce suits brought before the courts, and that the rapidly increasing number of suits was cause for serious alarm.—While social reformers are anxiously combatting the evils of easily-obtained divorces, the gross proportion of collusive cases deserves their most careful and serious study.

Massachusetts must before long have New Year's also for a holiday. Its foreign population is becoming too large for the few days of festivity it legally regards. Fast day does not satisfy them. They do not like the name, and they are indifferent to the associations connected with it, though they join with the descendants of the Puritans to turn it into the feast day of which they feel the need.—New York Sun.

PEABODY.

Easter Sunday.

"The Easter sun rose on Sunday morn in a cloudless sky, as if nature shared with man the joy which, we are told, filled angelic breasts and spoke forth, 1800 years ago, into that glad refrain which still echoes round the world." During some part of the day nearly all of our churches held special services of song and thanksgiving, while some of them were beautified by ferns, potted plants and flowers, the latter artistically wrought into crosses and other Easter emblems. The musical portion of the services in some of the principal churches—always attractive—was of rare excellence, and the announcing in advance of the music to be rendered, with the names of the artists comprising the several quartettes, undoubtedly had the effect of greatly augmenting the congregation at some of the fashionable churches. The story of the resurrection formed the principal theme for the discourses. In some of the churches, however, the event was hardly noticed.

The Old South Church was well filled in the forenoon. The pastor, W. G. Sperry, delivered an able discourse, appropriate to the occasion, and the music by the choir, under the direction of Mrs. George Upton, was sweetly rendered, and the selections made with commendable taste. The pulpit was beautifully decorated. In the centre was a large cross, the base of which was made of calla lilies and pansies, from which a wreath of flowers wound around to the top, hanging over the left hand arm in a most beautiful festoon, composed of Easter lilies, roses, pelargoniums, General Taylor, Madame Vladimir, Sir James Ashur, and other choice kinds of flowers. Over the top of the cross was a crescent of evergreen, with the words "Christ is Risen" in white immortelles, which could be seen all over the church. There were two elegant baskets of flowers on the pedestals of the stairs, also two on the railing in front of the choir; around the platform was a row of choice pelargoniums, princep teck, one mass of buds and flowers. Great credit is due to the janitor—Mr. J. M. Ward—who arranged them, and from whose greenhouses they came. In the evening the Easter festival of the Sunday School—under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. B. N. Moore—took place, a large audience being present.

Rev. Mr. Eaton, of the Central Baptist Church, Salem, occupied the pulpit at the Baptist Church, taking his text from Job 42: 5th and 6th verses. In front of the pulpit was a large white cross adorned with choice flowers, while at the base were some elegant cut flowers and ferns. The effect was very beautiful, and was arranged under the supervision of Mrs. J. B. and Mrs. Geo. Thomas, the former of whom furnished the flowers.

At the Methodist Church Dr. Steele preached an Easter sermon from Acts 17: 31st verse. He represented the splendid surroundings of St. Paul as he stood on Mars' Hill. Then he expounded Paul's sermon till the resurrection of Christ was announced, and the audience dispersed with mockings, except a few who lingered to ask questions about the wonderful announcement that the man appointed to judge the world had actually arisen from the dead. These were so impressed with the truth that they believed and became disciples. The duty of repentance grounded on the fact of a future general judgment was then urged upon the audience.—The choir sung three Easter humns with unusual spirit and accuracy.

Services appropriate to Easter were observed at the Unitarian Church as usual, Rev. J. W. Hudson, the pastor, preaching on "The Power of the Resurrection." His discourse was earnest and practical. Long before christian times a spring festival had been observed celebrating the resurrection of nature from the death of winter, and whatever views men may have of the literal manner of the rising of Christ, hardly a soul can see the springing forth of buds and grass, and still doubt that he shall live after death. The joyful Easter season also teaches that every sorrow will be followed by joy if we will receive it aright. As light follows darkness, as spring life and beauty follow the coldness and death of winter, so shall all our trials bring their own rewards of comfort. The music by the choir was rendered very finely, and the attendance was quite large. Over the organ arch was the inscription "Glory to God," and upon the sides, "Fear ye not, for he is risen." The floral decorations were elaborate, consisting of pot plants and cut flowers tastefully arranged. An Easter concert by the Sunday School was held in the evening.

At St. Paul's Episcopal Church—Rev. George Walker, pastor — there were held the usual services and communion in the forenoon and evening. There was also a Sunday School celebration, with full choral service and presentation of Easter offerings from the children.

At the Universalist Church the pastor, Rev. G. M. Harmon, made a brief allusion in his sermon to the resurrection of Christ, but beyond this there was no change from the ordinary Sunday service.

At St. John's (Catholic) Church there were the usual Easter services. In the forenoon there were three Masses—a Low Mass at 7 o'clock, a Children's Mass at 8.30, and a High Mass at 10. After the Gospel, Rev. M. J. Masterson preached a thoughtful sermon on our Saviour's glorious resurrection. In the afternoon there was the customary Vespers service, Rev. M. J. Masterson officiating. All the numbers of the musical program, for this occasion, were well rendered by the choir, assisted by the following quartette: Miss M. A. Smith, soprano; Miss Nellie Noonan, alto; Mr. William Millea, tenor; Mr. Thomas McGrath, bass.—Deserving of special mention was the Tantum Ergo, a new duet, sung for the first time in America, and the solo, Ave Maria Stella.

The Trustees of the Danvers Insane Asylum have appointed twelve physicians as a visiting board to assist the trustees by their counsel in the management. On Tuesday of last week the visiting board met at the asylum and fixed upon their plan of operation. Two of the board are to visit the asylum each month, without notice to either the superintendent or trustees. The term of the visitors is to be two months, one to go off each month so that the same two will not visit together, and they are to report on the irreturn to the chairman of the board monthly. The board is constituted as follows: Dr. Samuel Cabot, Boston, chairman; Hasket Derby, Boston, secretary; Francis Minot, Boston; William Cogswell, Bradford; A. H. Johnson, Salem; William Mack, Salem; S. K. Towle, Haverhill; J. G. Pinkham, Lynn; G. S. Osborne, Peabody; C. G. Carlton, Lawrence; Benj. Cushing, Dorchester, and Francis A. Howe, Newburyport.

On last Thursday morning the discovery was made that burglars had been at work during the night in town. The store of Messrs. Schollar & Donnell, under our office, was entered by forcing of a door panel to which the lock was attached, and about $15.00 worth of cigars were taken. The liquor saloon of Mr. J. E. Millea, on Walnut street, was also entered, and a small sum of money taken from the drawer and some liquors. The report that Mr. Linehan's saloon was also attempted seemed to be only a rumor.

This has been the principal bonnet worn by the ladies at all entertainments the past winter. It is called the "poke," because gentlemen are obliged to poke their heads first one side and then the other to see the stage.

"Gran'ma Al'us Does."

I wants to mend my wagon,
An' I has to have some nails.
Just two or free'll be plenty—
We's going to haul our rails.
The splendidest cob fences
We're makin' ever was!
I wish you'd help us find 'em—
Gran'ma al'us does.

My hossie's name is Betsey;
She jumped and broke her head;
I put her in the stable,
And fed her milk and bread.
The stable's in the parlor;
We didn't make no muss;
I wish you'd let it stay there—
Gran'ma al'us does.

I's going to the cornfield
To ride on Charlie's plow;
I 'spect he like to have me—
I wants to go right now.
Oh, won't I gee up awful!
And whoa like Charlie whoas;
I wish you wouldn't bother—
Gran'ma never does.

I wants some bread and butter—
I's hungry, worstest kind;
But Taddie mus'n't have none,
'Cause she wouldn't mind.
Put plenty sugar on it;
Tell you what, I knows
It's right to put on sugar—
Gran'ma al'us does.

Eternity.

O sombre, vast eternity!
What has been and what is to be—
The past and future merge in thee.

I think of thee with nameless dread;
Thy roots enwrap the eldest dead;
Thy boughs of green wave overhead.

I cannot grasp thee with my thought;
The works that all the years have wrought
In thy calm presence are as nought.

The keenest vision cannot trace
One sign of change upon thy face;
I shudder in thy cold embrace.

I wrestle with thy mystery—
What has been and what is to be—
There comes no answer back to me.

The ages that have through thee rolled
Some fables or some truths have told,
But thou art calm and still and cold.

A child I stand upon the shore;
I hear afar the billows roar
That break and break forevermore.

No shore thy current ever laves;
No echo comes from out the caves
Wherein recede thy ceaseless waves.

There are no furrows on thy brow;
Cycles of time before the bow,
Thou changeful and unchanging now.

O gloomy, grand eternity!
The loved and lost are all with thee!
Some barren years are left to me!

Wolsey to Cromwell.

Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but this infernal
Rheumatism has forced me to play the woman.

Thus far, hear me, Cromwell,
When I am forgotten, as I shall be,
Inasmuch as I leave no fortune behind
To keep my memory green in the courts—
When I am forgotten, I say,
And sleep in dull, cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of—see to it,
See to it, Cromwell, that my body
Is not snatched for base uses.

Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition;
By that sin fell the angels. How can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by't,
Much less a fellow of your stamp and style?
Love thyself last, and a rich man's Daughter first; cherish those hearts that hate thee,
That is to say, cherish a kindred hatred for them,
And never lose an opportunity to get even;
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
And in thy hip pocket a seven shooter;
Then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a thoroughbred!

Selected Story.

THE WRONG MASK.

The sheen of silks, the flashing of jewels, silvery laughter, and strains of sweet music, all serve to produce that intoxication of excitement which takes possession of one in a brilliantly-lighted, well-filled ball room; and no one felt more the influence of such a scene than did charming little Mollie Remsen, on the night of the French ball, in 187—.

Dressed as a flower girl, in a dainty costume that served to make her look more piquant than usual, if such a thing were possible, she threaded her way in and out among the crowd, with a grace that was bewitching, and a vivacity that rose as much from the great love that had just blossomed in her heart as from her surroundings.

But one week previous to this ball, Charlie Richmond had whispered the old, old story to her, and she felt herself blessed among women.

She had come to the ball in his company, but enveloped as she was in a long, dark cloak, it was impossible for him to discover what her costume was: and although he had pleaded very earnestly, she had positively refused to enlighten him on the subject.

She knew of his disguise, because she had helped him to select the costume — a court dress of the time of Louis XIV.—so she promised herself much amusement and felt that she could extract much sweetness from that evening's pleasure.

Several times did Mollie pass her lover, who, all ignorant of her proximity, was searching for her everywhere.

Then she lost sight of the court dress—it seemed to disappear among the dancers at the farther end of the hall; she turned about and was considerably surprised to find herself face to face with it.

"How did he come here so quickly?" she thought to herself. "I wonder if he has recognized me?"

Her question was immediately answered, as he approached her, took her hand and placed it on his arm, and said:

"I have found you at last. I have hunted everywhere for you, and had just concluded that further search was useless."

"How did you know me?" she asked, with a laugh, as they joined the promenaders.

"Intuition, I suppose, as I had no other clue to help me. The moment I saw you I knew it was the little girl I love so dearly."

Mollie pressed his arm gently, as if to thank him for those words; and then, with the perversity that seizes all womankind at times, she said, archly:

"So you intend to devote yourself to poor little me; I have not dared to expect that."

"Fortunately I have succeeded in ridding myself of my gushing fiance; I lost myself in a crowd, and I shall take pretty good care that I am not found."

Mollie's heart seemed to stand still. What was the meaning of his words?

"Shall we dance, Jessie?" he asked, pressing the white-gloved hand that rested on his arm.

Mollie could not speak; she simply shook her head.

She understood it all now. Charlie had supposed her to be some one else—some Jessie with whom he had made an appointment.

It was with almost superhuman effort that she controlled herself. At first, she felt as if she would faint; then anger took the place of pain, and that gave her strength, and she resolved that she would drink the bitter cup to the dregs, learn all this hateful story, and then, after showing him how she despised him, she would bury herself in some secluded spot away from all the world. She had not quite made up her mind whether she would die, or live to haunt him, when he asked:

"What is the matter, darling? You are strangely quiet to-night. Are you ill?"

She was strong enough to speak now, and she said, in a voice which no one would have recognized as Mollie Remsen's:

"No, not ill, but afraid. She might see us — the one you came with, I mean."

Mollie could not trust herself to mention her own name, for she felt that her voice would waver if she did.

"I have no fears, Jessie. I am keeping the whole width of the hall between us. I wish we might never be nearer."

"Then why have you asked her to marry you?" and her voice trembled, spite of all she could do.

"Why do you ask me that troublesome question, darling? But I will tell you now; her father is rich—I am poor, and I marry her to better my fortune."

"Then you do not love her?"

This time her voice was so mournful, so full of pleading that, but for the crash of the music, it must have betrayed her.

"Love her! Why, how foolish you are to-night, Jessie. Have I not told you again and again that I love only you? You know, darling, that I value one smile from you more, much more, than all the love she has for me."

Gone now was all the brightness and joy of the evening. There had been very little amusement, very little sweetness; all that was left was the dry, hard ashes of love turned to hate.

Yes, she said to herself, that she fairly hated him now; and had her hand been one of iron, she would have crushed his arm in her grasp, and enjoy the pain she caused.

Mollie tried to speak several times after that, but the words refused to come to her dry, parched lips.

"I scarcely know you to-night, Jessie," he said. "What has occurred to change you so?"

"Nothing," she replied, faintly.

"Are you not going to dance?"

"No; not now at any rate. I think I will leave you for a moment," she added, hurriedly.

"You will return soon?"

"In half an hour."

"I will meet you here, then, Jessie."

Mollie felt that she must be alone for a while to regain her failing strength of will, ere she said that to him which she had determined upon—words that would separate them forever.

She went to the cloak-room, and there resolved upon what she would do, and that it must be done at once.

She hurried back to the ball-room.—She saw her faithless lover standing near the door, and going up to him she said in a low voice:

"Come out into the lobby. I must speak with you at once."

The gentleman seemed a little unwilling to accompany her, but after a moment's hesitation, he offered her his arm, and the two walked along the almost deserted lobby.

They reached a spot where they were alone, and Mollie, withdrawing her hand from his arm as though the contact was degrading, faced him resolutely, and said, in an angry tone, from which all love and sweetness had departed:

"Now, Mr. Richmond, you may know that you were talking to me, not to Jessie," and lifting her mask, she disclosed her pretty face, now flushed and darkened with anger.

"Why, Mollie," cried Charlie, "I've been looking for you all the evening.—Where have you been? And what a becoming costume you have."

"All this is useless," said Mollie, scornfully. "You know very well that you have been talking to me, calling me Jessie, and telling me about your dastardly engagement."

"Talking to you! Jessie! Why, what do you mean, Mollie?"

"You know what I mean, Mr. Richmond; you see that you have made a mistake. We will be strangers henceforth," and she passed to him the ring that he had placed on her finger only the week before.

"But, Mollie"—

She turned abruptly away, and hastened down the lobby, her heart throbbing with pain, and an uncomfortable lump rising in her throat.

He must not know how much she was suffering; above all he must not see her cry; she had discarded him with the scorn he deserved, and he must never know what pain it had cost cost her; so she hurried on to the cloak-room, hoping to reach its friendly shelter ere the threatened flood of tears came.

She was startled by hearing a voice say:

"Where are you going, Jessie? You said you would be back in half an hour, and now I find you rushing along as if you were mad. What is the meaning of this?"

Mollie looked up and saw a court costume before her, exactly like the one worn by Charlie.

Instead of replying, she turned quickly, hastened back to the lobby, where Charlie was still standing, looking downcast and sad; she half ran to him and, throwing herself into his arms, burst into tears, not of sorrow, but of joy.

Before she had time to say a word, the mask who had taken her for Jessie entered; but when he got one glance of the tear-stained face, from which Charlie had taken the mask, he quickly retraced his steps, with words not exactly complimentary to himself on his lips.

Mollie explained, and Charlie understood, and all was well again.

They are now man and wife; but never since that night in the winter of 187—, have either of them been heard to express a desire to attend a mask ball.

"Is This Seat Engaged?" Said a charming young lady with a musical voice to a commercial traveller, who was inclined to occupy a whole seat in a railroad car, while others were standing. He looked at her glowing cheeks and laughing eyes, and replied, "Oh, no! certainly not; you are entirely welcome. I shall be most happy—" "Then," said the young lady, "mother, you can sit down here beside this gentleman." An old woman of seventy-five, if she was a day, with no teeth, and poor sight, two band-boxes, and a bag, a reticule, and an umbrella, tottered into the proffered seat, and, piling her things into the young man's lap, sat down. The beautiful young lady took a seat with the passenger sitting opposite.

☞ Don't Trust Them.--When you feel badly and have pains here and there in your body that you don't know how to account for, it is the most foolish policy in the world to take the advice of people who say: Oh! there's nothing the matter with you. Let yourself alone and you will come out all right. These folks knew nothing about it, and may be trifling with your life. You may have Kidney or Liver trouble. Send right out to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" and then you will be all right, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. H.

A mother's influence always has the inside path.

☞ Why don't you try Carter's Little Liver Pills? They are a positive cure for sick headache, and all the ills produced by disordered liver. Only one pill a dose.

Miscellaneous.

A Physician's Reward.

I had been six years a surgeon in the navy, and for the last two of these six years I had been cruising on that dreadful Gold Coast. Perhaps I was not the best tempered man in the service, but I thought I was badly treated. The Admiralty and I had a slight disagreement, and the end was that I threw up my commission in disgust. My health was much broken, and while I was recruiting my strength in a little Devon village, I did the one thing which I have never regretted—fell in love with a good girl and married her. I had a certain amount of money, which I invested in a country practice; and for some time all went well with us.

But we were not to escape our share of trouble. My health, which had suffered more seriously than I imagined during my period of service, broke down; my practice went to the dogs; we got deeply into debt, and, to make a long story short, three years after my marriage, one miserable Sunday in November, found my wife and myself, with our two little children, occupying a single poor room in Grenville street off Guildford street.

We had then been in London about six months, and I had been unable—chiefly on account of my precarious health—to get anything to do. About a month, however, before the day I speak of, my only friend in London had held out a hope of obtaining for me the post of private physician to a wealthy relative. But my friend had been compelled suddenly to go abroad, and though he was daily expected back, yet three weeks had now passed, and I had gone to his house in Kensington day after day without getting any tidings of him.

Meanwhile our little stock of money was quite exhausted; everything that can be spared was sold or pawned; and on this Sunday evening, with a month's rent due next day, my wife and I sat before a miserable apology for a fire, with absolute want staring us in the face. We had not quite a shilling left, and when I looked at my sleeping children and thought of the future, I fairly broke down in utter despair. It was then I found what a treasure I had in the noble woman by my side. Affecting a cheerfulness which she could not feel, she imparted to me a portion of her own courage, and at length induced me—anxious to please her, and glad to do anything rather than sit powerless—to go once more to my friend's house.

It was ten o'clock, on a cold drizzling night, when I set out on my walk. I somehow felt a kind of fictitious hopefulness and walked briskly, resolutely shutting out the thought of failure. I stood some time at my friend's door before I dared to ring the bell that would change my hopes or my fears into certainty; and when at last the servant who answered my ring told me that her master had not yet returned, I fairly staggered into a chair in the hall, overcome with disappointment.

The woman, seeing my condition, brought me a little brandy, which revived me somewhat; but it was some time before I felt able to move, and it struck midnight as I left the door for my long and cheerless walk. The rain fell in a steady drizzle, but though I was lightly clad I never heeded it; my thoughts were fixed on my poor wife sitting alone and watching for me, and on the wretched news I was bringing her. I walked on, heedless of the bitter cold and of the constant rain, feeling the numbness of misery in my heart.

How it happened I do not know, but somehow I lost my way, and after wandering aimlessly for some time, I found that I was in a street that I did not know—the Gray's Inn Road, as I afterward learned. I could see no one to direct me, and was walking on rather anxiously when I stumbled over the form of a man, who was lying half in and half out of the covered entrance of a wretched court. For a few yards I walked, too absorbed in my own troubles to think of aught else; but then, thank God, I thought of the unfortunate man lying in the rain, and as a doctor, felt, perhaps more strongly than I otherwise should, that it was my duty to go back and assist him if possible. There was a gas-lamp in the entrance to the court, and by it I was enabled to see that the prostrate figure was that of a singularly tall and powerfully-built man; and on a closer inspection I was surprised to find that his dress was that of a gentleman. At once I thought that he had been robbed and perhaps murdered; but, taking his hand to feel his pulse, I saw that he had a remarkably handsome diamond ring on his finger, and the beating of his pulse, though very faint, showed me that he was not.

Then I thought, with something of contempt, that I had a case of mere drunkenness to deal with; but yet on careful examination I could detect no fume of spirits, and the faint action of his heart at length convinced me that the man was in a state of complete exhaustion, probably from want of food.

With considerable labor, in my weak condition, I managed—half lifting, half dragging him—to convey him into the covered passage, and determined to stay with him until some passer-by would assist me. I had not waited long when a half-tipsy woman, walking past, looked into the passage and came over to see what was the matter. She looked keenly at me and at my unconscious patient, and I noticed her eye gleam as she caught sight of a massive gold chain on his vest.

I asked her her to go at once and fetch assistance, but she immediately replied that I need not trouble myself any further.

"I know him well. He's Rooney, that owns the public-house close by. I'll get him home all right."

At first her assurance almost imposed upon me, but when I looked at the pale, aristocratic face that I supported on my knee, I felt convinced that she had invented the story with a view to plundering the helpless man.

I told her sternly that if she did not go for a policeman I would do so myself. She went off hurriedly—as I thought for that purpose—but came back no more; and now I was once more alone with my strange patient, and as the minutes went by I knew not what to do.

Help, however, was near. I noticed a poor girl—she did not look more than sixteen—walking slowly on the other side of the street; he called to her, and after a moment's hesitation she came over. I briefly explained to her the circumstances, and asked her, if she possibly could, to get me a drop of cordial, or the man would die.

"I have only got fourpence," she said, in a kindly Irish voice, "and I was going to pay for my bed with that at the kitchen in Fulwood's Rents; but, sure I'll get something from the chemist's instead, and I'll trust to God for a night's lodging—I've slept out before now."

And away she went—surely not the worst of Good Samaritans.

Very soon she returned with the medicine, and I sent her again to fetch a policeman. I forced a little between the man's teeth, and presently he came to and opened his eyes. I asked him how he came there; he said: "Tired and starving." And then I asked him where he came from, and he suddenly brightened up, and looking at me keenly for a moment, said, "Edinburgh," but from the way he said it I felt convinced he was deceiving me, and shortly after asked the same question again, and he, with the same look, said, "Glasgow."

In his weak state, however, I forbore questioning him further, and a policeman presently coming up, we got him into a cab and took him to the hospital, where I waited until he was put to bed. Before I left I asked the house surgeon to give a shilling to the poor girl—Mary Kennedy was her name. He readily did so, and she went off to sleep in "Old Walter's" lodging-house in Fulwood's Rents.

When at last I got home, I found my wife waiting anxiously for me. However, when I told my story she forgave the delay, and in talking over the strange circumstances of the night we forgot for the time our own troubles. My wife insisted that something good would come of the matter, and at eight o'clock next morning she roused me and made me set off for the hospital. As I was on my way there, my eye was caught by the following advertisement on a boarding:

"One Hundred Pounds Reward.—A Gentleman of unsound mind has escaped from the M—— Private Asylum. The above reward will be paid to any person finding him and restoring him to his friends."

Then followed a description which exactly tallied with the appearance of my patient. Everything was now clear to me, and I fairly ran to the hospital.

Here, however, my hopes were damped, for I found that Policeman Z had gone there before me and told a story very different from the true one which I have narrated, and had actually gone the length of warning the authorities against me. The solicitor whose address was given in the advertisement had been sent for, and the worthy constable had evidently determined to brazen it out and secure the £100. I saw the house surgeon, and told him the whole story. He thought for a few moments, and then said:

"We must get that girl at once."

I went myself immediately to the wretched den where she had stopped, and brought her back with me. A very short examination before the solicitor settled Policeman Z's case; and an hour afterward I was able to go back to my wife with more money in my pocket than I had had for many a long day.

But that was not the best of it. I visited my patient—who was no other than the wealthy baronet, Sir Charles Frampton—every day.

He seemed to take a strong liking for me, and when he was well enough to be moved his friends proposed that I should take him under my care.

He was perfectly harmless, and after residing abroad with us for a couple of years, he so far recovered that he was enabled to dispense with my services, and to manage his own affairs. He showed his gratitude, however, in most princely fashion; settled an annuity on poor Mary Kennedy (she had previously been liberally rewarded by his friends), and bought me the practice which I still hold.

A Scanty Costume.—Mrs. Homespun threw down the paper and pulled off her spectacles with a vicious jerk.

"It's perfectly scandalous," she exclaimed; "for my part, I can't see how any respectable woman would wear such a thing as that. When I was a gal we used to wear low necks and short sleeves; but mercy!"—and here she cast a withering glance at the paper on her lap before flinging it upon the floor.

"Why, what's the matter, aunt?" asked Cicely, picking up the paper.

"Matter? Matter enough I should say!" cried the excited old lady; "look at that fashion plate there, if you are not ashamed to look at it. It is perfectly scandalous, I say."

"Why, aunt," said Cicely, her eyes brimming with fun, "that is only a liver pad picture!"

"I don't care what sort of a new-fangled name they give to it," persisted her aunt, "it's scand'lous and disgraceful, and no woman that's got a spark of modesty about her would ever be seen in one of them!"

AVOIDING THE ISSUE.—When your play-loving boy asks to go out after supper, and you don't think it best, for any reason, that he should, do not snap out, "No, you can't! the place for boys is in the house at night." If the lad has any of the old Adam in him, he will either sulk or rebel, or manage to make himself and everybody near him uncomfortable until bedtime. You can rule him, of course, by force; but it isn't a victory to be proud of. How much better to make him prefer to stay in—or at least to reconcile him to it. Propose a game with him, taking a hand yourself; or read to him out of a book a little beyond his range of thinking, or quite within his line of thinking; or have a frolic, or corn-popping lark—anything to give the boy a good time and make him forget his disappointment. No time is better expended in family government, than in helping the children to profer or accept cheerfully your way. Things are going wretchedly wrong in that family where the little ones stay in the house as in a prison, or go to bed unhappy.

COULDN'T BEAT THE RECORD.—The witness who went to the Tombs police court to testify to the good character of his countryman, Patrick McGrath, charged with assault and battery, with a rifle, effused his remarks and delved too deeply into the genealogy of the McGraths to suit the defendant's counsel. Twice he tried to arrest the torrent of encomiums, and failing in it lost temper and said:

"Did you ever talk a man to death?"

"No; did ye iver do it yerself?" asked the witness, quite tartly.

"Yes," said the counsel, with an absent air, but watching his opportunity for a thrust. "Yes, a couple hundred of them, I suppose.

"Is that all?" quoth the witness, sharply. "Then ye haven't beat the record yet."

"Haven't beat the record! Whose record?"

"Samson's," returned the witness, calmly. "He slew three hundred Philistines wid the same weapon ye use yerself."

The subsequent queries put to that witness were remarkable for their brevity.

When a finger pricks as though there were a thorn in it, and throbs intolerably when held downward, and yet there is no external sign of mischief, the probabilities are that a felon is in prospect. Go at once to a butcher's and procure some of the spinal marrow of a beef creature. Take a piece, say about two inches in length, and having cut it open lengthwise, wrap it around the affected finger, covering it of course with a cloth. In a few hours change the piece of marrow for a fresh one, and continue to keep the finger so encased until all pain has ceased, and there is no discomfort when the marrow is removed. The finger will look strangely white and porous, but the cure is complete. This remedy ought to become professional, as it is vastly better than the surgeon's knife, and more effectual.

FINDING OUT IF HIS FEED WAS STOLEN.—An Englishman traveling in the East, not being quite satisfied with the appearance of the mare he rode, asked his Arab servant if he was sure she got her allowance. "Oh, yes," he replied; "my countrymen often steal from one another, and rob their friends' horses; but I can always find it out if your mare has been cheated. I put seven or eight pebbles in with the barley, counting the number exactly. The mare never eats the pebbles, and if any one steals from the barley he is sure to get two or three pebbles with it. If I find the pebbles short in the morning I have hard words, and they cannot tell how I know, and so they give up cheating her.

The New Hampshire supreme court has decided a question in which all taxpayers here and elsewhere feel special interest. It is in favor of the constitutionality of the law taxing church property in excess of $10,000, holding that exemption is a privilege rather than a legal right. This deci sion is an important one, inasmuch as its holds valid and constitutional the first church-tax law ever enacted in the United States.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.

Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.

Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,

A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

MILLINERY

OPENING.

Our stock of Millinery Goods will be on our counters ready for inspection to-day. We have a fine stock of Ribbons in all the new designs. at from 5 cents per yard up to $1.25, in plaids, shaded, brocade, satins, &c. Also pretty new Silks and Satins to match. In Flowers we show a very attractive stock in buds, roses, wreaths, sprays, etc., in every desirable color. We are sure we can suit any one in color, style and price. A pretty full-blown rose for 3 cents and up. Our stock of Straw Goods cannot be excelled. We have all the new shapes at our usual large discount from milliner's prices. Frames in the best styles. We have made especial effort to make our stock very attractive, and confidently invite examination and comparison.

TRIMMED.

We shall show to-day a stock of Trimmed Hats and Bonnets that will attract attention for their beauty and moderate price—from $5 to $8 will buy of us as good a trimmed hat as you can get made for from $8 to $12. Come in and look them over, and you are sure to buy, as you will see just how they look and avoid all the annoyance of waiting, and disappointment when the work is done—at PEABODY'S.

CORSETS.

Our 31 cent Corset is extra good in shape, and is the same as is sold about town for 50 cents. We give a set of nice Cards with every pair of Corsets we sell—no matter what price. We have a 50 cent Corset—long waist, double busk, side steels, embroidered in fancy colors, finished in good style, and taken in all it will beat anything offered for that price—fifty cents. We also sell Dr. Warner's flexible hip gore Corsets, which fit better than the usual style, because it is constructed after the analogy of the human body, the bones upon the sides passing like the ribs around the body. It is a perfect fitting Corset. Dr. Warner's Health Corset is a favorite corset; it is made with the Tampico bust, as soft and pliable as velvet, and yet so elastic that they retain their shape perfectly until the Corset is worn out. We also keep on hand a stock of woven imported Corsets, as some prefer them to the domestic article. Dr. Gray's Back Supporter and Shoulder Brace is so constructed that it gives a perfect support to the back, drawing the shoulders so as to expand the chest, and hold the body in an erect position, thus avoiding all tendency to stooping or round shoulders. We have them in all sizes.

CHILDREN'S

Corded Waists—a new and desirable article for Children and Misses before they put on stiff corsets—with shoulders and skirt holders; all mothers should examine them, as they are the thing that manufacturers have been trying to invent for years—now perfect in every way—full line just opened—at PEABODY'S.

Pride of the Kitchen.

This scouring and cleansing soap is the best soap for the purpose in the market. It is something like "Sapolio," only better, containing two additional elements which improve its cleansing properties. Another great advantage of the "pride of the kitchen" is its price, only 5 cts. per cake, each cake in a nice wrapper. We are authorized to refund the money where it does not do all that is claimed for it. Try it, and you are sure to use no other soap for scouring, cleansing, etc. Five cents buys a large, solid cake, and for this week we give a very handsome fancy card.

This soap is made by H. K. & F. B. Thurber & Co., of New York, and this fact is a strong guarantee of its being just what it purports to be.

FIVE CENTS.

We offer a lot of Fancy Ribbons for 5 cts, per yard, regular 12 1-2 cent goods—in all the best colors—in pretty fancy styles—new goods—at not half the cost to make. Come in and see them.

Liquor Traffic.

In many places there seems to be an awakening to the dangerous influences of the liquor traffic, and a desire manifested to curb its powers. It is true that there has been a great increase of drunkenness in our own community, and that the use of intoxicating beverages has reached an extent disgusting in its effects, and detrimental to public interests and private rights. Several of our most prominent citizens, without regard to party, have had the subject under consideration, and while differing in opinion as to the wisest mode of action, seem agreed that it is the duty of this town to check the sale of such beverages, and hold those who sell strictly to the requirements of the law. An interesting meeting has been held at which facts were brought out showing the wisdom of such action. One person, who knew whereof he spoke, gave the information that a very large percentage of the want which the town was called upon to relieve, was caused by intemperance, and that, in his opinion, instead of spending $10,000 a year the town could get along without an almshouse and take good care of all-deserving poor for $3000, were it not for the influence of drink.

It is probably not generally known that nearly all the licenses which have been issued have been given in violation of the law rather than in compliance with it, and this fact will be shown to the citizens later. It may not be possible to stop the sale and use entirely of such beverages, but every peace-loving, law-abiding citizen who desires to see every man sober and industrious, and getting the best results from his labor, should feel it his duty to sustain our town officers in all they can do legally to check the flood of drink which is being used in town.

We are not at liberty now to state just who are acting or what plan is contemplated, but within a short time decided means will be urged, when it is hoped there will be found enough ready to help bring about a new state of affairs in town. It is not a movement for political effect, nor of that class whose zeal outruns their judgment, but the sober verdict of some of our best citizens of different parties, and at the proper time will be so shown to be, if matters develep as expected.

As the case now stands by the vote yesterday, we are to have water at High Service. There has been an honest difference of opinion in regard to it, but the feeling among a majority for some time has been for more water, and when we consider the amount of money invested in manufactures, and the great damage that would result from fire, we can but feel that the town has acted wisely. This expenditure of money will involve an increase of taxes, but certainly we get an equivalent in sufficient water for fire purposes. The expense of the fire department will probably be reduced, and the lessening of the ratio of insurance on all property will follow. In the hands of the efficient committee elected everything should go forward in an harmonious manner, and we hope the committee will meet with that encouragement which they deserve, by an increase in the number of water takers, etc., and we may find in a few years that our water works are a paying investment.

New England is at last "recognized" by the nomination of Dr. Loring to be commissioner of agriculture. The claims of this genial and talented gentleman have been advocated in a dignified and agreeable manner, which is in marked contrast to the unseemly scramble for office shown by other claimants for positions under the government.—Dr. Loring is peculiarly qualified, by his scientific and practical knowledge of all branches of agriculture and by his enthusiastic love for his favorite study, become a most useful and efficient officer in this important department of the government service. It is generally conceded that Dr. Loring will be the right man in the right place.—Providence Press.

THE MOREY FORGERY. — James O'Brien, alias Robert or "Bob" Lindsay, who, during the last political campaign, deposed that he knew H. L. Morey, the individual to whom it was alleged President James A. Garfield wrote what is known as the "Morey-Chinese letter," and who subsequently confessed he had perjured himself, was recently sentenced to the State Prison for eight years by Judge Cowing of New York.

SALEM.

GRAND MILITARY BALL.—The Inspection, Concert and Ball of the Salem Mechanic L. Infantry occurred at Mechanic Hall last evening, and was by far the most brilliant military affair that this city has known for some time. The doors were opened at a little after 6 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock nearly all the available sitting and standing room had been taken.

At about 8.30 the company marched into the hall, and were then inspected by Col. B. F. Peach and staff, the Providence Band playing some fine selections at intervals; the drill immediately following the inspection, showed the company to be thoroughly proficient in military tactics. The Prominade Concert by the American Brass Band of Providence, R. I., from 9 to 10 o'clock, was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and fully realized every expectation, the Cornet Solo by Mr. D. W. Reeves, leader, being especially fine.

At a little after 10 o'clock, the Grand March, led by Capt. Dan'l Casey, served to introduce the remaining feature of the evening—dancing—continuing uninterruptedly, except for an intermission at 12.30 for supper, until near 4 A. M.

Among those present were Gov. Long and staff, Gen. Oliver, Mayor Calley, and many gentlemen of different military organizations. The Salem Cadets were represented in uniform, and a few from the Left Wing; the Veterans of the Mechanic Light Infantry also turning out in large numbers.

The Hall was beautifully decorated by a liberal use of the stars and stripes, Messrs. Lamprel and Marble having charge of that department. Around the hall were hung shields inscribed with the names of past captains of the company, and a number of gilt inscriptions also heightened the effect. In the rear of the stage the scenery was set for a camp ground, the white tents forming quite a pleasing effect. The floor of the hall was crowded with dancers until a late hour, the balconies also being well filled with interested spectators.

Mr. James G. Anderson of the Farragut House, furnished the supper, which was fully up to his usual standard of excellence.

The 11th and last Sociable of Hose Two occurred on Thursday evening last. A larger number were present than at any previous gathering, and everything, especially the eatables, went off well. At intermission the ladies presented a valuable hat tree and umbrella rack to the Hose Company.

The Grand Army will hold a Calico Ball at their Hall to-morrow evening.

Mr. Frank Cousins is offering new millinery at the Bee-Hive.

Miss M. B. Wilson's customers and friends will be pleased to learn that she has commenced her grand opening of spring and summer novelties in millinery goods. See adv.

Mr. David Conrad, at the Pavilion, is selling three button kid gloves at 49 cents a pair.

For all the latest styles of spring hats, go to the "Shawmut" Hat Store, corner of Central and Essex streets.

Peabody's adv. speaks for itself—Millinery, Corsets, Gloves, etc:—4th page.

By a fire, which destroyed her house in Danvers last Saturday morning, Miss Gustin, a very prominent young elocutionist, lost her entire wardrobe, worth several hundred dollars. The loss was caused by the burning of leaves and grass in the yard, which communicated flame to the house. A little furniture only was saved. No insurance. Burning grass around a house is dangerous business, and should be done in all cases with extreme caution.

A NEW ADVERTISING AGENCY.—Messrs. Willard Everett and Carl G. Zerrahn, both of whom have had a long connection with the advertising department of the Herald, have formed a copartnership under the name of Everett & Zerrahn, for the purpose of acting as general advertising agents. Their office is established in room 8, No. 257 Washington street, Boston.

The best argument that will be used against a further extension of the right of suffrage to women, is that out of 4566 who registered in this state last year, but 1967 voted for school committee men, while in the year preceding, the first year of the experiment, over two-thirds of the registered women voted.

The oleomargarine fiend is trying to make common folks believe that doctored tallow discounts pure dairy butter. That class of argument will suit the doctors; butter'll hardly suit anybody else.

Wm. H. Fellows, the painter, has embellished the outer surface of Mark Marston's new house with two coats of white paint; and the blinds with green.

Dr. Tanner says that he first derived his idea that a man could live on water alone, while present at a church oyster-supper in Michigan.

Patronage is one of those words in the English language which are often used loosely in a sense somewhat analagous to the true meaning, and yet widely different. The other day the Boston Herald used the phrase "newspaper patronage" as applying to the people who buy the newspaper, and the phrase is objected to by the New York Sun, which does not consider a person a patron who buys or subscribes for a newspaper. In our state Supreme Court, in a railroad, one of the counsel spoke of "the patrons of the road." The court asked who were meant by patrons, and the lawyer explained that he intended to designate those who bought tickets or who sent freight over the road. The court replied that these were not patrons but customers. The name "patron" comes from ancient Rome, where it was applied to a master who had freed his slave, but retained some rights over him, The patron defended the client, as the freed slave was called, in the courts, and it was not uncommon for poor citizens to place themselves as clients under some rich patron. The patron implies, beside the idea of aid, that of superiority; hence the definition given by Webster of a patron is "one who countenances, supports or protects; an advocate or a defender; one who specially countenances and supports, or lends aid to advance." The only patron a newspaper would be likely to have would be a person who supplied it with aid either in money or office or some material support, in order to have the use of the newspapor as an organ. The special horror of the Boston Herald is a newspaper organ, and of course it can have no patrons, although thousands buy it, and very probably other thousands regularly subscribe for it. A patron of a newspaper would lower its influence and dignity, and the knowledge that the paper stood in the relation of a client to a patron would at once give the impression that its expressions of opinions were servile. It is, however, a very common use of the word to confound patronage with business, and the patron with the customer, in all enterprises, great and small.

Essex county will soon be famous for palatial private residences. The great structure which Mr. J. E. Spring has been building in Danvers for a year or two past is approaching completion. It is of granite, and will cost about $100-000. All that art could devise and money procure has been put into it. He paid Faxon of Salem $1000 for the stairways alone. Mr. John S. Phillips of Boston will build a residence on a high hill at North Beverly, which is expected to equal anything in the country. Frederick Law Olmsted of New York has been engaged for a long time in laying out the grounds. The mansion when built will be an imposing structure indeed.

Between April 1, 1879 and April 1, 1880, our Alms House lodged and fed 396 tramps. In the month of April, 1879 alone, 27 tramps were harbored. In the year ending April 1, 1881, under the action of our Tramp Law, which E. M. Boynton and others denounced, only 8 tramps called at the Alms House for shelter. Can there be a greater proof of the benificence of the law? It has rid this country of a class of young bummers who adopted vagrancy as a profession and inflicted no little hardship upon the worthy poor, honestly traveling in search of employment.—Georgetown Advocate.

Stephen N. Stockwell, well-known as one of the editors of the Boston Journal, died recently at his residence in Boston Highlands. Mr. Stockwell was born in Hardwick, Mass., in 1823. He began on the Boston Journal as a compositor and reporter and became one of the editors and proprietors. He had served in both branches of the legislature and held other positions of trust.

The newly-elected officers of the Salem Cadets are: Treasurer, Lieutenant Walter C. Harris; Finance Committee, Major Edward Hobbs, Capt. J. Frank Dalton, Sergeant E. C. Battis, Privates W. E. H. "Hawkeye" Burdette was hired by the Kappa society of Franklin, Pa., to lecture in that place. The society is composed of girls, and they took him out riding and showed him all the usual honors—excepting, perhaps, the whiskey. And he is so proud that he wears his hat entirely on his left ear and spits on the floor with absolute recklessness. Elmira Free Press.

It is officially announced that Mrs. Sallie Hunter, "the last of the servants of George Washington," is dead.

And is it true? And can it be
That never more these eyes shall see
That old familiar paragraph
That made the empty-minded laugh,
But never fail to moist the eyes
Of patriotic men and wise,
Which told of George's Afric nurse,
Or George's coachman (which is worse)?
Shall we no more be told of her
Who held the youthful prattler
So fondly to her dusky breast,
And soothed the President to rest:
On him who held the ribbons proud
When George rode thro' admiring crowds?
And are they gone? Can it be true?
Excuse these gushing tears—boo-hoo!

We give space for the following original article from the Salem Evening News of the 19th inst:

What is that on the table? That is cake. What are those things looking at it? Those things are children. Do children like cake? No, children do not like cake. Does cake like children? Yes, cake likes children. Where have the children gone? The children have gone up stairs. Where has the cake gone? The cake has gone with the children.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

"How patiently the speckled hen
Brings out her little brood;
How recklessly the owner then
Stuffs them with mealy food;
How gingerly the prowling cat
Selects the choicest chicks.
And then, again, the long-tailed rat
Is up to just such tricks."

A SPECIAL TOWN MEETING was held last Monday, to see if the town would accept the Act of the Legislature, entitled "An act to enable the town of Peabody to improve its water works and increase its water supply." Also to see if the town would authorize the Town Treasurer to hire money in accordance with the same. Mr. John E. Herrick was elected moderator. The result of the balloting was 234 for and 27 against the act.

The adjourned Town Meeting was called to order by the Town Clerk, the moderator being absent. Mr. John E. Herrick was elected moderator pro tem, and voting upon the question, Shall the Report of the Committee for furnishing water at high service, as amended March 21, 1881, be accepted, and its recommendations adopted? commenced. The number present at any time during the day was not very large. The polls closed at 4.30 o'clock; in a few minutes the following was declared the result: Yes, 398; No, 78.

On motion of Mr. Amos Merrill, $85,000 were appropriated to carry out the recommendations of the report as adopted.

Mr. Wm. H. Little was elected one of the water committee, in place of Mr. Nathan H. Poor, who declined serving.

It was voted, on motion of Mr. F. E. Farnham, to reconsider the vote relating to the by-law in regard to truancy, and substitute in its place the by-law as it appeared in the call for the annual town meeting.

Mr. Charles B. Farley declined as a member of the committee on new Town Hall, and Mr. C. Warren Osborn was elected in his stead.

Mr. W. A. Osborne declined as Field Driver, and the vacancy was filled by electing Mr. Henry Farnum.

A MILLINERY OPENING. — Messrs. Fernald & Sawyer, having leased the store No. 60 Main Street, have opened a first class millinery store. The opening takes place to-day and to-morrow, and the display of flowers and bonnets is a marvel of beauty and elegance. None of our lady readers should miss this opportunity to see the largest display ever shown in town. Some of the bonnets and hats are trimmed with steel and jet lace, with wreaths and handsome steel ornaments, feathers that shade beautifully, making a fine contrast. Miss S. J. Dimond of Boston has been engaged as milliner, and the whole will be under the direct management of our popular store keeper, Mr. W. F. Sawyer.

POLICE NOTES.—April 14. Timothy Donovan of Salem, for an assault, was fined $3 and costs, $8.55. He appealed.

Baird's Minstrels appeared before a full house at the Institute for the second time last evening, under the auspices of Union Post 50, G. A. R. THE PARISIAN.—The Advertiser says that in point of size, speed, completeness of equipment and adaption of all the requirements of modern ocean steamship navigation, the magnificent vessel stands in the very foremost rank; and until the Inman City of Rome, the Cunard Servia, and the Williams & Guion Alaska are completed, as they are to be this year, the Parisian will stand before the world, as the finest vessel sailing the North Atlantic. Mr. Chas. D. Howard is the Peabody agent for this line.

The latest man who has been made happy through the use of this valuable liniment is Mr. James A. Conlan, Librarian of the Union Catholic Library of this city. The following is Mr. Conlan's indorsement:

UNION CATHOLIC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION,
204 DEARBORN STREET,
CHICAGO, Sept. 16, 1880.

I wish to add my testimony as to the merits of St. Jacobs Oil as a cure for rheumatism. One bottle has cured me of this troublesome disease, which gave me a great deal of bother for a long time; but thanks to the remedy I am cured. This statement is unsolicited by any one in its interest.

JAMES A. CONLAN, Librarian.
—Chicago Western Catholic.

A movement is on foot in New York to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the birth of George Stephenson, the father of railroads, which occurs on the 9th of next June. Stephenson's discovery worked a great revolution in this and other countries, and his memory should be kept green in the minds of the great public, who owe so much of their progress and advancement to the workings of his mighty brain.

☞ Nervous and general debility overcome by Malt Bitters because nourishing and quieting.

Boucicault declares that he really means to form a dramatic company of sons and daughters of successful actors. He has engaged two sons of Jefferson, a daughter and two sons of Sothern, a daughter of Lydia Thompson, and his own offspring. The project seems risky, for none of these has yet achieved much success on the stage, unless it be Lytton Sothern, who has played a season in Australia as Dundeary.

☞ BRACE UP.—There is serious meaning in this expression. That tired step, languid eye and feeling of general lassitude, come from "spring sickness." Be assured, a serious, and, perhaps, fatal disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of winter impurities; the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. "Favorite Remedy" will do this; it will give a new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance and elasticy to the step. One dollar a bottle. Every druggist has it. Dr. David Kennedy, Proprietor, Rondout, N. Y.

Q.—Why is love always represented as a child?" A.—Because it never reaches the age of experience." Q.—"Still, old men have been known—" A.—"Yes; but they were in their second childhood."

☞ HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES AT LAST.—From official record, we learn that over sixty thousands persons die annually in the United States from pulmonary consumption. In each of these cases there was a first and incipient stage of the disease, when all the life-forces and organic structures were yet unimpaired by its encroachments. If at this time an agent had been found which could give to the system a higher degree of vitality, and so enable it to resist the deadly assault, this perilous crisis would have been safely passed. And not this one only. In every subsequent assault of the enemy, especially where there existed some hereditary taint, a prompt resort to the same revitalizing agent would have given a like relief and immunity. Now it is confidently claimed, and the claim is substantiated by the results of over twelve years' experience of its use, that just such an agent has been discovered in Compound Oxygen, the use of which is rapidly extending. If you wish to learn all about this new treatment, address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, Philadelphia, Pa., and they will promptly mail you their Treatise on Compound Oxygen.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT,

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism. Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache. Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflamatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

We have received a story, entitled, "A Dark Deed," which is respectfully declined. The first chapter opens with "It is midnight." That is all right. AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thigh-bone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Anecdotes.

A TOUCHING STORY.—One rarely meets a more touching romance than is found in the following story which comes from Wales:

"A number of years ago, some Welsh miners in exploring a pit that had long been closed, found the body of a young man dressed in a fashion long out of date. The peculiar action of the air of the mine was such as to preserve the body so perfectly that it appeared asleep rather than dead. The miners were puzzled at the circumstance; no one in the district had been missed within their remembrance, and at last it was resolved to bring the oldest inhabitant—an old lady, long past her eightieth year, who had lived single the whole of her life. On being brought into the presence of the body a strange scene occurred; the old lady fell on the corpse, kissed it, and addressed it by every term of loving endearment, spoken in the language of a by-gone generation. He was her only love; she had waited for him during her long life; she knew that he had not forsaken her. The old woman and the young man were betrothed sixty years before. The lover had disappeared mysteriously, and she had kept faithful during that long interval. Time had stood still with the dead man, but had left its mark on the living woman. The miners who were present were a rough set, but very gently and with tearful eyes they removed the old lady to her house, and the same night her faithful spirit rejoined that of her long-lost lover."

Bob Burdette thinks it would save a great deal of embarrassment to clergymen and add to their revenues if they were to charge a fixed rate for marriage, say five dollars for the first offense, ten dollars for the second, twenty dollars for the third, and so on.

THE PARIS MORGUE.

The Morgue has become an institution in which all Europe is interested. Every capital has its dead house—in London almost every parish; but none of them have the peculiar interest, rules and influence of the Parisian mortuary. The obscure little building by the banks of the Seine, close under the shadow of Notre Dame, is unique in the morbid history of city life. It gives the sombre tints to the bright landscape of Parisian gaiety, and shows suicide and murder side by side with luxury and frivolity. The name sounds as if it had a curious derivation. And so it has. Morgue, in old French dictionaries, is given for the equivalent of haughtiness and pride; but it had yet an older signification. It meant scrutiny and investigation. We are going back some centuries in the history of French prison life, when it was easier to get into jail than it is now, and also easier to get out. The whim of a king might take the form of a lettre de cachet, and confinement followed with little further ceremony. But then in those days there were no photographers to make detection easy, and no telegrams to make it almost sure. So when a prisoner was brought into jail one of the first steps in the prison discipline was to send in all the turnkeys to stare at him. He might escape and it would be well to provide for contingencies. Now this scrutiny was called La Morgue, and thus the room itself got the same name. But sometimes the dead bodies of malefactors would be brought in, and this especially took place at the great prison of the Chatelet. The Morgue of the Chatelet gradually swallowed up the similar institutions of other Parisian prisons, and became the great depository for human waifs and strays who had lost or forfeited existence. The bodies were exhibited there, and if friends cared to claim them, the State was very willing to surrender possession. The new building of the Morgue was erected in 1804, and its rules drawn up and made public. For three days the bodies remained exposed to view, and then, if unclaimed, were buried at midnight under an order of the Prefect of Police. All the papers connected with the case were deposited with the officer, only the clothes were publicly exhibited to assure identification, and yet, notwithstanding all these facilities, more than two-thirds of the bodies so exposed remained unidentified or, at least, unclaimed.

LAWSUIT OVER A SIGN-BOARD.

There is an old sign-board of the "Old Oak Tree" public-house, over which a great fuss is being made in England. It has found it way to the Court of Appeal, after passing through bankruptcy and chancery. One might fancy an ordinary sign-board not worth this flurry, but this is not an ordinary one. It was painted fifty years ago by David Cox, of the Royal Academy, and is valued at £1,500. It represents an old oak tree, after which the public house where it hung in Bangor was called. The point at issue is whether a sign-board is a fixture or a piece of furniture. It was seized as the latter. But the two decisions already given go the other way.

Sloth makes all things difficult, but industry all easy; and he that riseth late must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night; while laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him.—Franklin.

I have been very sick: I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. Overworked Business Man,

STOP!

You need a mild stimulant to tone up your system. Faith Whitcomb's Bitters will sooth your nerves, give you peaceful sleep and an appetite that will astonish you. Sold by all druggists.

HOW TO JOIN THE SHAKERS.

Three copies of the "Illustrated History of the Shakers," from the time of their leaving England in 1774 until the present time, with garden, village, church and other engravings, conditions of membership, government, etc., mailed postpaid for one 3-cent stamp; 75 copies sent to schools and societies for 50 cents in stamps. Address Faith Whitcomb's Agent, Boston, or get it of your druggist free.

It is an undisputed fact that pure Shaker goods are popular everywhere, the public only requiring proof that the goods are genuine. Ample proof is given that Faith Whitcomb's remedies are genuine, and probably no medicines ever grew so rapidly in public favor as Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, which is the best spring medicine; Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, which cures coughs, colds and consumption, and her Shaker Liniment, which surely cures neuralgia and rheumatism, as thousands will testify. FAITH WHITCOMB'S REMEDIES are sold by all dealers in medicines.

A Brave Woman.

Everybody has read of the brave woman, who, when alone in her room one evening, caught a glimpse of the brawny hand of a desperado who was concealed under a table, and who, with magnificent courage, went calmly on sewing until the servant girl entering the room she sent the latter with a note to her absent husband, and then fainted in his arms when he came, after an hour of suspense, to the rescue. Everybody, we say, who takes a paper has read this anecdote a few thousand times, and has it by heart, even to the compliment paid by the villain on the scaffold to the bravery of the lady. Mrs. Garrey, out on Western Avenue, had just laid down a paper containing the same old anecdote, the other night, when, as she stooped to pick up a thimble from the floor, she beheld the huge hand of a burglar underneath the bed. As she sat trembling in the chair she recollected that the cook had gone out for the evening, and that the nurse was asleep with the children upstairs, while Mr. Garrey was down at the office getting up the yearly balance sheet. Her heart froze with horror as she contemplated the situation. If she attempted to leave the room or raise an alarm the murderer would be out upon her in a moment. Ha! there was the telephone, thank heaven! She crossed the room with the cold perspiration trickling down her back, and clutched the mouthpiece eagerly. But how to apprise Mr. G. of her peril without warning the listening burglar! She turned the handle.—"Well, what now?" growled Garrey from down in Front street. "Mr. Dusenbury has been here, my dear, and he wants you to call at 1446 Chowder street right away." "1446 Ch —— Why, that's our house! What do you mean?" "So it is—how stupid of me!" went on the agonized woman, trying to steady her voice. "I understand the whole square No. 1462 is on fire. Hadn't you better step round and see about it?" "Square 1462? Why, that's the one we live on! What on earth do you mean, talking in that way? Is anything the matter?" "No, no," hurried on the wretched female; "I just wanted to let you know that Amelia Ann Boggs—was dying, and wanted to see you right away." "Amelia Ann Bo—— Are you going crazy anyway?" But Mrs. Garrey did not answer, and after confiding to the head clerk his conviction that his wife had been out to supper at some place where they put whiskey in the tea, and that he had better go home and see that she didn't give baby laudanum for paregoric, Garrey got on a car and repaired to his house. He found Mrs. G. on the floor in a dead faint, and when she had come to and explained matters, and Garrey had fished out an old boxing glove from under the bed, Mrs. Garrey sat up and made some general remarks concerning publishers of sensational papers which would have made even those unfeeling wretches blush with shame.

As illustrating the power of the press, he Oil City Derrick says: "A little Oil City boy, whose father gave him a printing press the other day, has already discovered the dangers and pitfalls which surround the path of the printers. He set up and printed a little gilt-edged card, with the warning phrase, "Paint, look out." By some means this card became fastened to his sister's hat, and hung just above her left ear, where he who ran could read. And when she went down street there was a grin extending clear from Pearl avenue to the Exchange. And that night the boy traded off his printing press for a yellow dog and a pog-gun, with a chew of gum thrown in."

What Woman Invent.—Some one who has taken the trouble to count the patents issued to women finds that the number for the year ending July, 1880, was seventy, or ten more than the average. Most of the inventions of women have to do with household appliance. Among the past year's are a jar-lifter, a bag-holder, a pillow-sham-holder, dress-protector, two dust-pans, a washing-machine, a fluting-iron, a dress-chart, a fish-boner, a sleeve-adjuster, a lap-table, a sewing-machine treadle, a wash basin, an iron-heater, sad-irons, a garment-stiffener, a folding-chair, a wardrobe-bed, a weather-strip, a churn, an invalid's bed, a strainer, a milk-cooler, a sofa-bed, a slipper, a paper dish, and a plaiting-device.

Twin Burglars.—Two brothers, Arthur and Luther Foster, attempted to commit a burglary in Andover, Wednesday morning, when Arthur was shot and died instantly. The other brother subsequently confessed that the two had conspired to rob the house. The scamps were members of Phillips Academy, of Andover, we suppose.

Libby Prison, Virginia, is now a fertilizer manufactory. The tobacconists who previously occupied it had to give up because the numerous visitors interrupted their work, and were carrying away the building piece-meal for relics. Now the smell of the fertilizers keeps the crowd away.

Jury Excuses.—Few men, not belonging to the legal fraternity, know the difficulties of obtaining twelve good men and true, competent to sit as jurors to try one of their peers on a criminal charge. The man who knows too much will not do; the man who knows too little is worse. Men cry out that justice is lame, halt and blind, and that a low grade of jurymen is too common. Some of the excuses those men offer to avoid sitting on juries, are good enough to print.

One, smoothly combed, hair dyed, quite a beau, comes up smiling and says he is over age.

Another, thin chested, stoop shouldered, says he is a militia soldier. He attends drill. The son of Mars skips.

Another public spirited person, long in business, well-known, says he is not a citizen of the United States. He steps down and out in season to celebrate Washington's birthday.

Another man cannot hear evidence. He is too deaf; and he puts his hand up to his ear when he is called. The court, in a low whisper, says the man may go. The deaf man thanks the judge immediately, and goes.

Another man has fits; and still another shows a doctor's certificate that he is under medical treatment, and of course does not expect to be well for a long time.

Another man has conscientious scruples on the subject of capital punishment. He thinks he will not do, and the counsel for the defendant thinks the same way.

Another will not swear. He has adopted the new version of the New Testament, which omits hell, and has no use for an oath, except it be a profane one in common conversation.

Another is a swearer; but he will not be sworn on a crucifix Bible. He is a Protestant, if he knows himself.

Another good man keeps a beer saloon. He reads the newspapers and has formed an opinion on the case. He even remembers that he said the prisoner at the bar ought to have been lynched when the crime was committed. The lawyers let the man with such an opinion go very quick.

Another man keeps a popular restaurant. Business is good, and he brings a certificate from a doctor, who is a family physician, to the effect that the said restaurant juror's wife would in all probability add the fifteenth son or daughter—as the case may be—to the family of the aforesaid jurymen before the trial in court could possibly be finished.

And so the world wags and jury duty is dodged.—N. O. Picayune.

Carlyle's Reminiscences.—"By special arrangement" with the American public, the Literary Revolution will issue immediately a beautiful Acme edition, elegant cloth binding, of the "Reminiscences of Thomas Carlyle," price 30 cents, postage 6 cents, and it can be had of the nearly 2,000 booksellers who are agents of the Literary Revolution in all parts of the United States.

Thomas Carlyle, more than any other man of the nineteenth century, taught the American public, and people of good sense throughout the world, to despise pretense and humbug, whether exhibited by monarch or menial. Sensible people who want a good book at an honest price will buy it where they find it. There is in this country no law which gives to a foreign author, as it gives to an American, the right of the monopoly of the publication of his book. If publishers choose to pay a foreign author anything, they can do it only as a "donation," because he can give them in return no protection from competition. Readers have the privilege of making such donation, if they choose to do so without paying it to the publishers and trusting to the possibility of their paying it to the author for them. There is no donation included in the price above named. Readers who want to combine a possible donation, and a positive price, can get an edition of this same book from other publishers at from two to eight times the price. Address for catalogue, American Book Exchange, Publishers, New York.

Says Dr. J. Rhodes Buchanan of the infamous medical laws now being passed in many States: It is as fundmentally wrong in principle to attempt in any manner by force or law, to restrict popular freedom of choice in medicine, as it would be to restrict the freedom of choice in religion. Medical freedom and religious freedom stand on the same ground, and the Medical College has no higher right than the Theological Seminary to determine who shall save body or soul. It is shocking to think that descendants of those who left the Old World to escape from religious bondage should engage in the establishment of medical bondage, which has been far more cruel and oppressiv than that of the hierarchy."

Rev. Daniel Wait, who has been pastor of the Church here for the three years last past, goes to Brookfield to take charge of the parish there, and the Brookfield people are to be congratulated on their good fortune in that they are to receive the ministrations and services of so eminently a christian minister and gentleman as Rev. Mr. Wait. The expressions of sincere regret by our people at his departure are very general.—Beverly Citizen.

The Tonnage of the District of Gloucester for the three months ending March 31, included 471 vessels, 27,026.29 tons. The number of enrolments, including three steamers, was 382; permanent, 379—24,819.73 tons; temporary 3—774.10 tons. There were 280 schooners, 16,158.31 tons, and 76 boats, 893.22 tons, engaged in fisheries; and 97 vessels, 9,062.68 tons, and 8 boats, 96.79 tons, in the coasting trade. The number of yachts enrolled was three, 227.06 tons. Four vessels, 226.11 tons, were built in the district, and three vessels, 168.39 tons, lost or wrecked during the quarter.—Advertiser.

A professional beggar with $20.45 in his pocket was arrested by Marshall Neal Friday afternoon, while following his avocation on Railroad street. A search revealed the fact that he had rooms at 139 Essex street, where several large bags filled with provisions were found. —Lawrence American.

Business Failures.

According to the figures of E. Russell & Co., of the Mercantile Agency, under date of April 9th, the number of failures in the United States for the quarter ending March 31, 1881, is 1,761 against 1,432 for the first quarter of 1880. The liabilities $24,447,250 against $12,777,074 in 1880. The increase of failures is not so large, but the increase in the amount of liabilities is somewhat significant. The doubling up of loss in this direction is rather a startling indication in view of a supposed highly prosperous condition of the country; and it is somewhat confirmatory of an impression that has been gaining ground in a good many quarters, that little or no money has been made in the past three months in proportion to the magnitude of the business transacted, far less than in any three months since September, 1879, from which time it is supposed the return of prosperity may be dated. There are, however, special causes to account for the increased number of business casualties in certain sections. Thus, in the Southern States, the weather has been unfavorable for business and for agricultural operations, the autumn purchases were far in excess of subsequent wants, and there is no manner of doubt that the mode and cost of production of cotton are such as to make the possibility of profit for the producer very remote. In the Western States, the excessively severe winter has, no doubt, contributed to swell the increase in the number of failures, and in the amount of liabilities, but, beyond this, it is difficult to discover any special causes for apprehension in that section. It remains to be seen how far the crops will be affected by the quantity of snow which has fallen, and which has remained such a length of time, but it is certain that the season for agricultural pursuits will be an unusually late one everywhere. In the country generally, however, while the failures have not been specially numerous, the above figures indicate that the average indebtedness is much higher than in the previous years, and it is evident that the lines of credit are being extended with very much the same rapidity with which business generally is expanding. The anticipations of another good crop, increased mineral production, and continued large arrivals of immigrants, are, perhaps, justifications for the expansion visible on every hand. But the indications for the future need to be closely watched, especially with regard to whether or not the productive sources of the country continue to yield in proportion to the extension of business, and the marked development of the tendency to increased lines of credit.

Muscular Christianity is the leading theological tendency of our great Universities. So closely is the development followed that if a chap does not graduate in arts, law, medicine, or the other minor branches, he can at least knock down any ordinary man of twice his weight, and make a most elegant appearance in a boat. We know a fellow at Harvard who can run one hundred yards in less than ten seconds; but who will get left on his graduating examination next summer, as sure as eggs.

There is no better remedy for spring biliousness than nature's own remedies in the shape of ripe oranges, bananas, and such other fruits as the season provides.

Album Verses.

BY FRANCIS NUGENT.

The friends of youth you'll ne'er forget
In th' aftermath of time;
You'll ne'er forget thy peaceful bliss
In days o' lang syne.

For then this book—memento sweet!
Will bring them all to min'—
The grave, the happy and the gay,
True friends o' lang syne!

Long be thy years of life, dear friend,
A blessed lot be thine!
May love and friendship, for thy good,
With health combine.

God bless thy dwelling and thy store!
May all good things be thine!
And unto Jesus, for His love,
Thine all consign.

What time thine eyes on earth doth close,
May light of Heaven shine!
And there may meet the friends you knew
In auld lang syne.

Comedy.

They parted, with clasps of hand,
And kisses, and burning tears.
They met, in a foreign land,
After some twenty years.

Met as acquaintances meet,
Smilingly, tranquil-eyed—
Not even the least little beat
Of the heart upon either side.

They chatted of this and that,
The nothings that make up life;
She in a Gainsborough hat,
And he in black for his wife.

Ah, what a comedy this is!
Neither was hurt, it appears;
She had forgotten his kisses,
And he had forgotten her tears.

Selected Story.

GRIZEL COCHRANE.

When the tyranny of the last King James drove his subjects to take up arms against him, one of the most formidable enemies to his dangerous usurpation was Sir John Cochrane, one of the most prominent actors in Argyle's rebellion. For ages a destructive doom seemed to have hung over the house of Campbell, enveloping in a common ruin all who united their fortunes to the cause of its chieftains. The same doom encompassed Sir John Cochrane. He was surrounded by the king's troops—long, deadly and desperate was his resistance; but at length, overpowered by numbers, he was taken prisoner, tried, and condemned to die on the scaffold. He had but a few days to live, and his jailer only waited the arrival of his death warrant to lead him forth to execution. His family and his friends had visited him in prison, and exchanged with him the last, long and heart-yearning farewell. But there was one who came not with the rest, to receive his blessing—one who was the pride of his eyes and of his house—even Grizel, the daughter of his love.

Twilight was casting a deeper gloom over the gratings of his prison-house, he was mourning for a last look of his favorite child, and his head was pressed against the cold, damp walls of his cell, to cool the feverish pulsations that shot through it like stings of fire, when the door of his apartment turned slowly on its unwilling hinges, and his keeper entered, followed by a young and beautiful lady.

"My child! my own Grizel!" he exclaimed, and she fell upon his bosom.

"My father! my dear father!" sobbed the miserable maiden, and she dashed away the tear that accompanied the words.

"Your interview must be short—very short," said the jailer.

"Heaven help and comfort thee, my daughter! I had feared that I should die without bestowing my blessing on the head of my own child, and that stung me more than death; but thou art come, my love—thou art come—and the last blessing of thy wretched father——"

"Nay, father, forbear! not thy last blessing! not thy last! my father shall not die!"

"Be calm, be calm, my child!" returned he. "Would to heaven that I could comfort thee! my own! my own! But there is no hope; within three days, and thou and all my little ones will be—"

Fatherless, he would have said, but the words died on his tongue.

"Three days!" repeated she, raising her head from his breast; "then there is hope—my father shall live!"

"Nay, nay, my Grizel," returned he, "be not deceived; there is no hope. Already my doom is sealed, and the messenger of death is now on the way."

"Yet my father shall not—shall not die!" and turning to her father, said calmly, "We part now, but we shall meet again!"

"What would my child?" inquired he, eagerly, and gazing anxiously on her face.

"Ask not now, but pray for me, and bless me—but not with thy last blessing."

On the evening of the second day after the interview we have mentioned, a wayfaring man crossed the drawbridge at Berwick from the north, and proceeding along Marygate, sat down to rest upon a bench at the door of an hostelrie on the south side of the street, nearly fronting where what was called the "main-guard" then stood.

In one hand he carried a small bundle, and in the other a pilgrim's staff. Having called for a glass of wine, he took a crust of bread from his bundle, and after resting a few moments, rose to depart.

"Heaven help thee if thou intendest to travel far in such a night as this," said the sentinel at the English gate, as the traveler passed him and proceeded across the bridge.

In a few minutes he was upon the wide, desolate and dreary moor of Tweedmouth, which for miles presented a desert of furze, fern, and stunted heath, with here and there a dingle covered with thick brushwood. Still the stranger pushed onward until he had proceeded two or three miles from Berwick, when, as if unable longer to brave the storm, he took shelter amid some crab and bramble bushes by the wayside.—Nearly an hour had passed since he sought this imperfect refuge, and the darkness of the night and the storm had increased together, when the sound of a horse's feet was heard hurriedly passing along the road. The rider bent his head to the blast. Suddenly his horse was grasped by the bridle; the rider raised his head, and the stranger stood before him holding a pistol to his breast.

"Dismount!" cried the stranger, sternly.

The horseman, benumed and stricken with fear, made an effort to reach his arms, but in a moment the hand of the robber, quitting the bridle, grasped the breast of the rider and dragged him to the ground. The stranger seized the leathern bag which contained the mail to the North, and flinging it on his shoulder, rushed across the heath.

Early on the following morning the inhabitants of Berwick were seen hurrying in groops to the spot where the robbery had been committed, and were scattered in every direction over the moor, but no trace of the robber could be obtained.

Preparations were making for the execution of Sir John Cochrane, and the officers of the law waited for the arrival of the mail with his second death warrant to lead him forth to the scaffold, when the tidings arrived that the mail had been robbed.

"It is good—the hand of heaven is in this!"

"Said I not," replied the maiden, and for the first time she wept aloud, "that my father should not die?"

The fourteen days were passed, when the prison doors flew open, and the Earl of Dundonald rushed to the arms of his son. His intercession with the confessor had been successful, and after twice signing the warrant for the execution of Sir John, which had so often failed in reaching its destination, the king had sealed his pardon.

He had hurried with his father from the prison to his own house; his family were clinging around him, shedding tears of joy; but Grizel, who, during his imprisonment, had suffered more than them all, was again absent. They were marveling with gratitude at the mysterious providence that had twice intercepted the mail, and saved his life, when a stranger craved an audience. Sir John desired him to be admitted, and the robber entered. He was habited, as we have before described—with the coarse cloak and coarser jerkin—but his bearing was above his condition. On entering, he slightly touched his beaver, and remain covered.

"When you have perused these," said he, taking two papers from his bosom, "cast them into the fire."

Sir John glanced at them—started, and became pale. They were his death warrants.

"My deliverer!" he exclaimed; "how—how shall I thank thee—how repay the saviour of my life? My father—my children—thank him for me!"

The old earl grasped the hand of the stranger—the children embraced his knees. He pressed his hand to his face and burst into tears. "By what name," eagerly inquired Sir John, "shall I thank my deliverer?"

The stranger wept aloud, and raising his beaver, the raven tresses of Grizel Cochrane fell on the coarse cloak.

"Gracious heaven!" exclaimed the astonished and enraptured father, "my own child—my savior—my own Grizel!"

It is unnecessary to add more.—The imagination of the reader can supply the rest; and we may only add that Grizel Cochrane, whose heroism and noble affection we have here briefly and imperfectly sketched, was the grandmother of the late Sir John Stewart, of Allanbank, in Berwickshire, and great-great-grandmother of Mr. Coutts, the celebrated banker.

Book Notices.

LIFE OF ALLEN W. DODGE.—Gail Hamilton has published a volume in memory of the late Allen W. Dodge, of Hamilton, so long the treasurer of Essex county. Miss Dodge, who is a relative, was a frequent companion of Mr. Dodge, and an appreciative admirer. She has produced a very excellent memoir, which will afford much gratification to the friends of the subject of it. Mr. Dodge was a man of considerable ability, and his career in the law, in the ministry (very brief) and in political life, are graphically delineated by Miss Dodge, and the copious extracts from his journal afford an admirable insight of his intellectual tendencies and moral sentiments. Two likenesses of Mr. Dodge embellish the volume. Published by the Appletons.

"BOSTON INSIDE OUT."—Rev. Henry Morgan says he has ordered two sets of type and engaged two of the largest printing houses in Boston, to print the next edition of "Boston Inside Out," up to 20,000. Over 1000 agents are canvassing for the work, 50 ministers and nearly 1000 students. They have the profits, as the book is for reform, and not for gain.

But few books have met with more diverse criticisms, and a more checkered fate. Attempts were made to suppress it but failed. Suits were brought against Mr. Morgan. Morgan Chapel was attached for $10,000, but the suits were nonsuited. Gamblers "pooled their issues," to "Turn Morgan Inside Out," but withdrew their stakes. Leading papers and ministers have expressed opposite opinions. Those who have praised, have not praised by halves. They make the Author a John the Baptist, a Jonah crying against the sins of modern Nineveh. Mr. Morgan thinks it the crowning reform effort of his life. He expects to print 100,000 volumes. Address, REV. HENRY MORGAN, Boston.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW for May contains a striking article by the Hon. David Dudley Field on "Centralization in the Federal Government." That our policy is rapidly advancing in the direction of centralization is demonstrated by the author; but whether centralization is really a formidable evil or only a bugbear is a question which men will probably continue to decide according to their several political predilections. The second article is upon the new revision of the Bible, by the Rev. Dr. Schaff, of the American Committee of Revision. Mr. Justice Strong writes of "The Needs of the Supreme Court," and advocates the establishment of a court of appeals, intermediate between the U. S. Supreme Court and the circuit courts. The Hon. George Q. Cannon, the first advisor of the President of the Mormon Church, and delegate to Congress, makes a vigorous defence of "Utah and its People." The question, "Shall Americans build Ships?" is considered by Mr. John Roach, the shipbuilder, who brings forward a large number of facts to prove that the people of the United States must build ships if they would hold a place among maritime nations. The other articles are "The Life-Saving Service," by the Hon. S. S. Cox; "The Ruins of Central America," by M. Charuay; and finally an attack on evolution philosophy, written in a vein of the finest irony, and entitled, "What Morality Have we Left."

LITERARY NOTE FROM SCRIBNER & CO. Sir Julius Benedict, the famous London composer who, as pianist and director, accompanied Jenny Lind in her American tour in 1850, has written a biographical and critical paper on "the Swedish nightingale" for the May SCRIBNER'S. The article is said to contain interesting comparisons of her with Malibran and other contemporary artists. The accompanying portrait of Jenny Lind, engraved by Closson from an old daguerreotype, taken while she was in America, will be a striking feature of the number. At the end of his article, Sir Julius hints that he may follow this paper with another, upon the subject of musical conservatories in this country.

BALLOU'S MONTHLY ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE.—The May number of Ballou's Illustrated Magazine opens with an illustrated article on Constantinople, written by an officer of the United States Navy, who has recently visited that famous place, and saw the sultan and some of the wonders of the city. Then there follows an illustrated article on Liverpool; and the thrilling Indian story of "The Crimson Trail" is continued, and becomes more complicated than ever. Take it all in all, there is more good, solid reading in Ballou's than in any other magazine in the country, because there is not a dry article in it, as in other serials, and this is what the people want. As a family publication, Ballou's is unsurpassed, because it is only $1.50 per annum. For sale at the Peabody News Co.'s.

THE ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC NEWS. The April number of this interesting magazine contains among the various subjects illustrated in this number an engraving of the late Emperor of Russia's steam yacht Livadia; a series of views illustrating wood working attachments for foot lathes; Prof. Secchi's solar photographic apparatus, with six distinct views of the sun taken by this instrument; engravings of the boats and apparatus used on Lake Geneva for determining the velocity of sound in water; a new machine for decorating enameled surfaces; engravings of several curious animals and objects in natural history, and an elaborately illustrated article on Bee Culture. Published by MUNN & Co., 37 Park Row, New York.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE. — The May number of this excellent periodical contains, as usual, an abundance of interesting and edifying reading-matter. Among the articles of particular excellence are a seasonable one entitled "May-day Observances," by Josephine Pollard, with nine illustrations; "Ancient and Modern Church Music," by Alfreton Hervey; "Egyptian Houses and Homes," by Sara Keables Hunt. The essays are by Parsonicus, Rev. Alexander McLeod, Rev. James M. Whitten, D. D., Hattie N. Morris, Thomas L. Chase, LL.D., etc., etc. The poems are numerous, besides a large amount of entertaining and instructive miscellany. There are 128 quarto pages in each number, and nearly 100 illustrations. Price of single copy, 25 cents; annual subscription, $3, postpaid. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

BARNES' INTERNATIONAL REVIEW MAY, 1881.—The table of contents of the May INTERNATIONAL REVIEW embraces a number of articles of interest and value. The place of honor is accorded to Mr. A. V. Dicey, who writes about England's Chief Justice, who died last year—Sir Alexander Cockburn. Though the article gives but a meager idea of its subject's life, it is valuable as showing the great advocate and Judge's legal career. Mme. Z. Ragozin concludes her paper upon "The Last Trial of Russian Nihilists," the first part of which has been so well received and favorably received by the press. Mr. W. Fraser Rae discusses "The Life and Writings of George Eliot," in a manner that will be found to be interesting and instructive, notwithstanding the great amount already written about her. An article by a bright young Japanese student in America, Mr. K. Mitsukuri, upon "Recent Changes in Japan," may be called the novelty of the number, and it will also be found to be a piece of literary work worthy of the pen of men who have not been obliged to learn a foreign language as a preparation. The number is meaty, and contains an unusual amount of interesting reading. New York: A. S. BARNES & CO. Five dollars a year; fifty cents a number.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY. The May number presents an excellent display of Articles, Stories, Sketches, Poems, etc. The contents are exceedingly varied, and will be found most entertaining and instructive. The leading article is by George Alfred Townsend, entitled "President Garfield and his Cabinet," with eleven illustrations. Among other profusely illustrated articles is "The Last Conquest of Peru." In the department of fiction are a continuation of Benedict's great serial, "A Late Remorse," and short stories by popular writers. There are some admirable poems, and the miscellany embraces all sorts of subjects—interesting, amusing and instructive. There are 128 quarto pages, representing every department of literature, and with embellishments in the best style of art. The subscription is $3 a year; a single copy 25 cents, sent post paid. Address, Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

LITERARY NOTES FROM SCRIBNER & CO.

DOES SCIENCE KNOW HOW TO BUILD A CITY?

Sometime last summer, while the health of New York was being discussed in the newspapers, the proprietors of SCRIBNER raised the question: Whether Science knows how to build a perfectly drained and healthful city? The answers seemed to make it appear that science does not yet know, or, if it does, its votaries certainly differ widely in the methods to be adopted.

As the result of that inquiry, Col. Geo. E. Waring, Jr., has undertaken to set forth the Disease of Cities in the May SCRIBNER, and in the June SCRIBNER, the Remedies, taking New York City as the chief example. A lively discussion may be looked for among the sanitarian scientists when Col. Waring's very radical views are exploited.

POST-OFFICE SAVINGS BANKS.

The recent declaration of Postmaster James in favor of the establishment in this country of Postal Savings-Banks, gives timeliness to a brief paper on "Post-Office Savings-Banks in Great Britain" in the forthcoming SCRIBNER, written at the request of the editor by an official of tha English General Office, and presenting some facts and figures not heretofore published.

"A NAMELESS NOBLEMAN" is the title of the first volume of the "Round-Robin" series of anonymous novels, which is to contain works of prominent American writers. This initial story is one of the most picturesque and thrilling of the productions of our recent literature, and will win thousands of delighted readers. The tendency of the best novel-writers of late years has been towards special analyical studies of society and manners, with slight plots and little incident. The nameless author of "A Nameless Nobleman," however, while outlining the characters of the story with delicate precision and consummate art, has given them free life and movement in the most ingenious and complicated plot, equally removed from sensationalism and from dullness. The scenes are laid in Paris and Provence, Quebec and New England, and the actors are French nobles and Puritan rustics, moving in the most quaint and picturesque years of the colonial era.

Without obtrusive definition or ostentatious analysis, the chief characters—the wily, but well-meaning, abbé, the gallant young barron, the lovely Valerie, the sweet Puritan maiden — are clearly indicated, and are combined in situations full of intensity and pathos. The book is full of charming description, stirring dialogues, and dramatic situations, and the veteran reader of romances will fail to guess the denouement. The interest will not be diminished when it is known that the plot is founded on the actual traditions of an honorable family in the Old Colony of Massachusetts—a region where ancestral legends are handed down for centuries, with religious care.

The binding of the "Round-Robin" Series is very quaint and pretty, and seems to promise the originality and versatility of contents which the initial volume certainly shows, and which we hope may be continued through the subsequent issues. The second volume, "A Lesson in Love," is now in press. The publishers are James R. Osgood & Co., of Boston; and the price is one dollar a volume.

The Score for April presents an attractive list of contents. The earnest side of musical literature is represented by an article on the old German song-form. The criticism on current musical events are of musical length, but not pedantic or dull. The dramatic and other departments are brimful of spicy matter, while the music of the number is varied enough to suit everybody.

A valuable paper on the organ, fully illustrated, is the opening article in the April Musical Herald. The number is unusually interesting, its notes, news and reviews being particularly bright, chatty and piquant, while the musical selections are far above the average of similar publications.

Miscellaneous.

The "little hatchet" man of the Philadelphia News says the newspaper men of that city spend so much of the day and night in sleigh-riding in twelve dollar teams that it has been necessary to hire New York journalists to come over and get the papers out. Just so. We have noticed a marked improvement in the Philadelphia press since the sleighing season commenced. But how do you manage to "Jew down" the livery men to such a ridiculously low figure? Norristown livery men won't fall a cent for editors, and pretty often on Saturday nights the latter haven't over two hundred dollars of their week's salary left.—Norristown Herald.

A Hartford gentleman has nearly completed a carriage for use on ordinary roads, to be propelled solely by compressed air. The shafts, of course, are omitted, but otherwise the carriage will resemble in the main, those commonly used. The machinery, in every compact form, is under the rear axle, and the air will be taken into it from a reservoir in sufficient quantity to furnish motive power for a run of many miles.

Handle her gently,
Lift her with care,
She swallowed a hair-pin
While banging her hair;
The curling-iron slipped
And burned her fair brow,
She uttered a shriek,
But weeps no more now.

ANOTHER coal-cutting machine is described in the London papers, which cuts on what may be termed the circular system, the saw, or cutting disk, being supported by a strong jib or bracket. Among the advantages mentioned in favor of this device are the following: The machine cuts into the face at the bottom or under side of the sleeper supporting the rails, that is, flush with the thill or bottom; the height of the machine being under sixteen inches enables it to be employed in thin seams, which would otherwise be expensive to work; the arrangement of the four adjusting screws at each corner by which the cutters can be made to work at any required angle; the axle boxes are also so adjustable as to allow the machine, when progressing at an angle, to operate irrespective of the level of the rails or sleepers; and, finally, the arrangement for holding the teeth or cutters is such that any number and any shape may be employed, according to the nature of the material.

ONE of the advantages pertaining to the new method of engraving by electricity—an electric spark pen having been invented for the purpose in Paris—is that the artist does all parts of his work, and with no more trouble than if working with an ordinary pencil, and can even operate in a dark room, without any other light than the glare from the induction spark. If a sheet of thin paper be attached to a plate of copper or zinc, it is said that an engraving may be made with extraordinary facility by this device. If one of the poles of a Ruhmkorff machine be attached to the plate, and the other to the upper end of the instrument, the current will run through, and in drawing the paper is perforated; when the drawing is finished, ink is laid on with an ordinary roller in the usual manner; and the greasy fluid penetrates through the holes. The plate is then plunged in water, which detaches the paper, and is ready for immersion in the acid.

COMPOUND steam boilers for utilizing light fuel matters have been still further improved, so as to combine peculiar efficiency and economy, and are being largely introduced abroad. The boiler is composed of a single flue or Cornish boiler and a multitubular boiler, placed end to end, leaving a space between them; at the top these boilers are connected together by a steam drum, and at the bottom by circulating pipes. The Cornish boiler is set directly over the furnace, with the end next to the tubular boiler over the grate, the firing being done at the side. The products of combustion and flame pass backward under this boiler and forward through the single flue, across the space between the two boilers, and through the tubes of the tubular boiler to the chimney. A portion of the heated gas and flame is made to circulate under the latter boiler before passing to the chimney—a feature of special value in this arrangement.

A VERY sensitive fire damp indicator has been invented in Germany—so sensitive as to show the presence of 0.25 per cent. of marsh gas in the air of mines, while the ordinary safety lamp only begins to disclose the danger when the gas is in the proportion of two per cent. As now arranged, a magneto-electric current is sent through two fine platinum wires in one circuit, and maintains them in a state of incandescence. One of these wires is protected from the influence of any fire damp, but the other is fully exposed to the action of that substance; the latter will, therefore, glow brighter than the former when the marsh gas pours into the air. A movable photometric screen is placed between the wires, and, when it is shifted until the reflection of the wires upon it are equal, the difference of the intensity of the light of the wire is shown on a scale, and this difference is the measure of the proportion of fire damp in the air.

IN experiments made recently at the Alleghany Observatory by Prof. Langley, on the measurement of radiant heat, it is stated that use was made of a thermo-electric apparatus, a product of the American iron industry. Observations made with such instruments have shown that iron in extreme thinness is the most suitable material to be used with them; and, in order to supply the demand for this purpose, some of the mills have succeeded in manufacturing rolled iron, which is so that from ten thousand to twelve thousand sheets laid on each other equal only one inch in thickness. An instrument made of this material has almost the same responsiveness to radiant heat which the eye has toward light, and its employment in this and similar relations may lead to valuable results.

"SLAG wool," as it is called, is being successfully employed abroad for covering steam boilers, and for other purposes where it is desired to prevent the radiation of heat. To obtain this "wool," a jet of steam is made to strike against the stream of viscous molten slag as it runs off from the blast furnace. This jet scatters the molten slag into a stream of shot which is projected forward near the mouth of a large tube, in which steam jets cause an induced current of air; this tube opens into a wire-gauze receiving chamber, and as each shot leaves the stream of slag, it carries a fine thread or tail with it; the shot, being heavy, falls to the ground, while the woolly fibres are sucked through the tube and deposited in the chamber.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.

Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufactuter, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,

A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

In Flowers we show a very attractive stock in buds, roses, wreaths, sprays, etc., in every desirable color. We are sure we can suit any one in color, style and price. A pretty full-blown rose for 3 cents and up. Our stock of Straw Goods cannot be excelled. We have all the new shapes at our usual large discount from milliner's prices. Frames in the best styles. We have made especial effort to make our stock very attractive, and confidently invite examination and comparison.

TRIMMED.

We shall show to-day a stock of Trimmed Hats and Bonnets that will attract attention for their beauty and moderate price—from $5 to $8 will buy of us as good a trimmed hat as you can get made for from $8 to $12. Come in and look them over, and you are sure to buy, as you will see just how they look and avoid all the annoyance of waiting, and disappointment when the work is done—at PEABODY'S.

CORSETS.

Our 31 cent Corset is extra good in shape, and is the same as is sold about town for 50 cents. We give a set of nice Cards with every pair of Corsets we sell—no matter what price. We have a 50 cent Corset—long waist, double busk, side steels, embroidered in fancy colors, finished in good style, and taken in all it will beat anything offered for that price—fifty cents. We also sell Dr. Warner's flexible hip gore Corsets, which fit better than the usual style, because it is constructed after the analogy of the human body, the bones upon the sides passing like the ribs around the body. It is a perfect fitting Corset. Dr. Warner's Health Corset is a favorite corset; it is made with the Tampico bust, as soft and pliable as velvet, and yet so elastic that they retain their shape perfectly until the Corset is worn out. We also keep on hand a stock of woven imported Corsets, as some prefer them to the domestic article. Dr. Gray's Back Supporter and Shoulder Brace is so constructed that it gives a perfect support to the back, drawing the shoulders so as to expand the chest, and hold the body in an erect position, thus avoiding all tendency to stooping or round shoulders. We have them in all sizes.

CHILDREN'S

Corded Waists—a new and desirable article for Children and Misses before they put on stiff corsets—with shoulders and skirt holders; all mothers should examine them, as they are the thing that manufacturers have been trying to invent for years—now perfect in every way—full line just opened—at PEABODY'S.

This scouring and cleansing soap is the best soap for the purpose in the market. We are authorized to refund the money where it does not do all that is claimed for it. Try it, and you are sure to use no other soap for scouring, cleansing, etc. Five cents buys a large, solid cake, and for this week we give a very handsome fancy card.

This soap is made by H. K. & F. B. Thurber & Co., of New York, and this fact is a strong guarantee of its being just what it purports to be.

License.

Next Saturday the Selectmen of this town will probably take some action in relation to the liquor traffic. As we stated last week, meetings of our prominent citizens, consisting of gentlemen who have the best interests of the town at heart, have been held. The result of these deliberations seems to be a desire to suppress, to some extent at least, the present wholesale license of dram shops. These meetings were not called to supersede or interfere with the ladies' organization, which has always accomplished so much good, neither has it anything in common with that class of temperance fanatics who know nothing else but prohibition, and who have done more injury to the temperance cause in this town than good, but was called into existence to urge upon the Selectmen the necessity of enforcing the laws and a reduction in the number of licenses issued. We think it is about time for the town authorities to step in and put a stop to the Sunday sale of liquors, the selling to minors, etc. The day has do doubt passed when the stern and rigid rules practiced by our fathers in the observance of the Sabbath day are to prevail, but it is to be hoped that we are not yet ready to sanction or tolerate that desecration of the Lord's day as will permit the sale of liquors at open bars, and turn the day into one of revelry and carousing.

And in regard to the sale of liquors to minors, a case came under our observation only last week, in which rum was sold to a boy who was but a few years in his teens, and when in an intoxicated condition he stole a team, but was unable to manage the horse, who ran away, damaging the team to a considerable extent. If the temperance people desire to win in the end they have plenty of work before them.—They must educate public sentiment in that direction. But let us, if we are to have license, confine it to responsible parties—parties who would be above enticing a reformed man into his saloon, or one who would sell to a minor or an intoxicated person. We hope the action of the Selectmen will be such as will reflect credit upon the town and themselves.

THE NEW CZAR.—The change of Czars has occasioned as much perplexity at the Vatican as at any other court in Europe. Alexander II. had almost come to terms with the Pope when the Nihilist bomb abruptly interrupted the negotiations between St. Petersburg and Rome. A Russian diplomatist was on the point of starting for the Vatican when the Czar was killed, and the Pontifical court is anxiously speculating as to the policy which Alexander III. is likely to pursue. The difficulty between the Czar and the Pope was twofold. The first, a mere matter of form, relating to the standing of the Russian Legation at the Vatican, would probably be arranged without much trouble; but the other is more serious. Russia wants the Pope to fill the sees vacated by death since the rupture with the Papal See; and Leo XIII. insists as a condition of his consent that the bishops now in exile should immediately be amnestied and re-established in their dioceses. As the bishops were exiled for the support they accorded to the Polish insurrection, the question is somewhat complicated; but sanguine hopes are entertained that the new Czar may be able to put an end to the hostilities, both political and religious, which have been carried on for seventeen years against the Poles.

The substance of the following from the Lynn Bee is something which frequently comes under the observation of newspaper men—that is, that Christianity and cheek are synonymous terms. For instance, a society sends a job or advertisement of an entertainment to one paper, and pays for it. The same entertainment is sent to another paper in the form of a local notice, and its free insertion requested. Naturally enough this is refused, and the latter paper is denounced as mercenary and disobliging. This may be Christianity, but it is also cheek.

We are indebted to Mr. A. T. Folsom, the city clerk of Springfield, for a copy of the Municipal Register of the city of Springfield for 1881, containing the Mayor's Address, report of the School Committee, a map of the city and reports of various officers and committees, making a thick volume of 404 pages.

SALEM ITEMS.—The anniversary of Odd Fellowship in America was commemorated by an entertainment given at Mechanic Hall, last evening, under the auspices of Essex Lodge, No. 26. The exercises were of a varied literary and musical character, and were well executed, the large number present testifying their approval by frequent encores. The organ solos by Mr. Chas. A. Clark, were finely rendered, as were the vocal selections by Misses Hatch, Coffin and Jackson, and Mr. Lewis Fisher, the zylophone solos by Mr. Plaisted, Mrs. A. H. Taylor, accompanist, also receiving marked appreciation.

The illustrated lecture, entitled "Colonial Days," delivered by Mr. John F. Deland of Boston, was a pleasant feature of the evening, and the readings by Miss Jenny F. Hinckly were remarkably fine, and called for frequent repetition.

A miniature imitation of the Hose Carriage used by Lafayette Co., No. 5, is on exhibition at Almy, Bigelow & Webber's, and is a very pretty piece of work.

Mahn's Comic Opera Company appear in "Bocaccio" at Mechanic Hall this evening. This company consists of sixty persons, and they give one of the best operatic performances that has ever come to this city; and on Friday evening, the "Widow Bedott" will visit Salem, and will no doubt be greeted by a full house.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the Young Men's Christian Association of this city, a large number of young men having joined quite recently. The gymnasium connected with the association is also very popular and serves to draw in many young people.

W. C. Packard & Co. occupy too much space in our paper to-day to need a notice from us. We hope our readers will not depend upon us for an account of this grand opening, but will attend it, and secure some of the great bargains.

Mr. David Conrad's 27th Annual Opening will take place on Thursday and Friday. This opening will surpass all former attempts. The millinery and suit department will form a leading feature. Having the best windows for a display in the city, they will present a sight such as is seldom seen. Ladies, don't miss this opening.

Reith, at 204 Essex street, is offering rare bargains in Millinery. Ladies will be delighted at the new Parisian spring bonnets they will find there.

The New England conference of Methodist churches when in session at Worcester had the matter of theatre-going under consideration, somebody having offered a resolution denouncing the practice on the part of young local preachers and candidates for the ministry. A committee was appointed to consider the resolution and the subject matter and report. Probably the Methodist clergymen do not support the theatres very extensively, but the query will naturally suggest itself to many persons if it is well to impose any restrictions of this kind upon either the clergy or the laity, and if it would not be better to leave all such questions to each person to decide for himself. No conference and no church can properly decide whether or not it is wrong for a person to attend a theatre, or to dance, or attend a circus, but every person can answer that question for himself. A justly distinguished Massachusetts divine, now deceased, used to sometimes tell his people in the later years of his ministry, by way of illustrating that many lines of action were neither sinful nor otherwise in themselves, that many years before he assented to the action of his church in excommunicating a member for playing nine-pins, "and yet," said this honored trustee of an Andover seminary, "nobody now knows or cares who plays nine-pins or ten-pins. The vital question," he added, "is, do you play nine-pins or enter into any other amusement in a right spirit? If so, the act is not necessarily harmful, though there might be circumstances attending it that would render it unwise." Common sense and a right motive will tell people when to go and when to stay away."—Lawrence Eagle.

For brazen-faced impudence commend us to a United States Senator of the Bourbon stripe. After abusing Mahone and his Readjusters all summer and fall, and moving heaven and earth to defeat them, they coolly turn about and call the independent senator a traitor because he sees fit to vote against them.

Dr. Dio Lewis says that, though five out of six students in Harvard College use tobacco, yet, in fifty years, not one of them has graduated at the head of his class. The best scholarship has invariably been with that sixth of each class which did not use tobacco.

Mr. Charles G. Folsom is building a very substantial looking barn and carriage house for Mr. R. G. Nelson. Mr. Alfred Berry is doing the mason work.

From M. O. Stevens.

EDITOR OF PRESS,—Personally I regretted very much that our March town election could not have been a direct anti-license struggle—not the silly trial of strength between Citizens and Independent Citizens, without a bit of principle at issue,—but an earnest struggle, with a living and important issue to rally for and against. As the weeks pass on I regret it still more. The Women's Union petition has gone in to the new board of Selectmen. By their election they are untrammeled, unadvised and uninstructed; entirely free to act their own pleasure, and according to the individual conscientious opinion of their official oath. Three of this board determine the moral status and tendency of the town for the whole year. There is no small responsibility.

The text of this W. C. T. U. petition you have given in your columns. It is plain, simple and conclusive; just "the cry of the women." There is not a single vote behind it, only the prayers of women who have been praying to God, and petitioning officials for five and a half years, in sincere faith that God is with them to strengthen and support.

Three Selectmen are to decide for or against granting this request. They are to recognize strength and conscience in the petition, or weakness and fanaticism. Now, sir, I am looking and listening for a rally of voters in support of this petition. Are we not to have it? Are the voters all demoralized? Has the baneful influence of this accursed license system befogged all minds? Has our whole town (except a few tender-hearted women) gone over to the protection of this infamous traffic? Must "public opinion" in Peabody forever continue making drunkards and outcasts by law and with official protection?

Men of Peabody! whence are we drifting! I beg of you stop and think. Is it easier to deal with this evil to-day than it was five years ago? Is it going to be any easier next year or the year after? Where are the 313 men who voted "no license" last year? Will none of them, not even "a corporal's guard," come to the support of the women's petition? Have they all been "gobbled up" by the demoralizing influence of this license system? Call the roll, somebody; let us stand up and be counted once a year on the side of God and right, and if Peabody is to become a Sodom, the last standing "righteous" one may have a chance to flee for his life.

Yours, truly,
M. O. STEVENS.

Cards given away with oranges, at George Stevens'.—Adv.

MR. EDITOR,—The Board of Engineers, it is understood, have voted not to adopt a Telephone Fire Alarm at the price voted for that purpose by the town—$400. The town voted to appropriate a sum not to exceed $400, provided satisfactory arrangements could be made with the Telephone Exchange. The question is, what is the "satisfactory arrangement" considered to mean? The Telephone people were given to understand that it meant six stations, which included all the department houses, the chief's and one assistant's residences, with the office open at all hours by night as well as by day, and agreed to give it, although they had to go to the extra expense of hiring another operator. But it seems now that the Board of Engineers are not dissatisfied with the arrangements but with the price. They think that as Salem a year ago paid only $400 for ten stations, that Peabody ought to be charged correspondingly, and refuse to arrange for 6 stations at that price. The Telephone people claim that they put in ten stations for Salem a year ago at cost, or even less than cost, to introduce it, and that they ought not to be called on to give Peabody a circuit at same rate. Salem now pays the same ($400) for the second year, without the cost of construction, to the Telephone Exchange.

The question is, were the Board of Engineers instructed to arrange for the price or for the Telephone service. If the latter, is it right that the people of the town should be deprived of its benefits?

A CARD.

I wish to correct a report which seems to be quite generally circulated around town, that I have sold out my Rendering Works and given up the business. This is not so. The buildings advertised to be let, as recently occupied by me as Rendering Works, have never been used by me for that purpose since they were built, but merely as a store house during the remainder of my lease. HOME HAPPENINGS.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.—On Monday evening a pleasant surprise party was held at the Unitarian Chapel, to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the marriage of the Pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Hudson were requested to call at the Chapel on their way home from a visit to one of their parishioners, when they quite unexpectedly found a large part of the society gathered in the church parlors, who greeted them warmly with congratulations and good wishes. Upon a table in one of the parlors was displayed a number of beautiful presents suitable for the occasion of a wooden wedding, and later in the evening the company were invited to the Chapel below, where a table was found laden with choice viands, to which ample justice was done, after the hearty singing of Auld Lang Syne. An elegant loaf of wedding cake graced the centre of the table, which was sent uncut to the Parsonage, probably to be shared with future brides and grooms who shall repair thither on their own errands. The company dispersed to their own homes about ten o'clock; but the surprises were not ended, for when Mr. and Mrs. Hudson reached the Parsonage, they found that entrance had been made there also, and that an elegant sofa and easy chairs had been thrust into their parlors. These goods were of the Turkish pattern, made at the factory of Shaw & Applin, Boston, and procured through our furniture dealer, C. H. Goulding. Altogether it was a delightful occasion, and most finely arranged and carried out from beginning to end.

HOGS.—A few days ago our attention was called to the fact, that the celebrated "Hog destroyer," Mr. R. G. Buxton, had been endeavoring to excel himself, by purchasing a pair of pure bred "Lincolnshire" pigs four months old, a male and a female, for breeding purposes. It is well known to every one, that Mr. Buxton has been for the past few years the champion breeder of "Yorkshire" pigs, both large and small bone, of Essex county, securing all the Agricultural Society's first premiums awarded in those years. He again comes to the front, determined to maintain his supremacy with his new breed, which, upon close inspection, prove to be perfect in every point.—They have short, broad heads with turn-up noses of the genuine bull-dog stamp, long, square bodies, short legs of medium coarseness; in fact, their general make-up cannot be excelled. We are of the opinion that there is not a better pair of pigs in the State. Mr. Buxton had these pigs direct from the breeding establishment of Charles C. Chase, Esq., of Manchester, N. H., who imported this breed last year.—These pigs, that our friend has purchased at a high figure for the purpose of improving our breed of swine, are the first of his imported stock Mr. Chase has sent away from his place. Mr. Chase is well known throughout New Hampshire as a connoisseur in that department of stock husbandry. He has bred and imported more hogs and better ones than any man in that State, having been in that line of business more than twenty years. He now proposes to beat himself and the world with his last importation of "Lincolnshire" swine. We are confident it would be for the interest of every person engaged in the improvement of our breed of hogs, to call upon Mr. Buxton, and examine his pure bred Lincolnshire pigs.

The old Board of Engineers of the Fire Department held a meeting last Monday evening, and finished up the business of last year, and then organized and appointed the sub-committees for the ensuing year. They decided that as no satisfactory arrangements could be made with the Telephone Company, they would not put in the telephonic fire alarm. The resignation of Mr. William H. Pingree, who has held the position of Janitor at the brick engine house since it was built, was received and accepted, and Mr. John Sumner appointed to fill the vacancy.

Mr. William Berry, who was well-known to a wide circle in this vicinity, died at his residence on Elm street last Thursday afternoon. Mr. Berry has carried on the wheelwright business in this town until within a short time, when he retired on account of ill health. He was an honest, conscientious and liberal man. He was 72 years of age. His funeral took place from his late residence last Sunday. He leaves a wife and two daughters.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Ladies' Benevolent Society will be held at Upton's Hall, on Wednesday evening, May 4th.

Go to Ames' Rendering Works on Liberty street, if you desire a pure article.—Adv.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The twelfth meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, April 15th, at 7 1-2 o'clock, the President presiding; it was opened by a selection from the quartette. The subject for discussion, "Our Social Relations as Farmers," was to have been opened by Mr. James P. King; in his absence, Mr. J. S. Needham and Mr. J. F. Ingraham occupied the time. The speakers referred to the improvements of the age since the early settlement of our forefathers, reviewing the many inconveniences of travel, and of the exports to markets of their products, etc., as is the benefits derived by the farmers of the present day; also, referring to the many conveniences and opportunities for social relations of the present time as that of those of former times, which is only a want on the part of the people to improve the present opportunities so that all good citizens can be benefited, one by another's society.

The thirteenth meeting of this Club was held Friday evening, April 22d, at 7 1-2 o'clock, the President presiding. The meeting opened by a selection from the quartette, followed by the introduction by the President of Judge Robert I. Burbank, who gave a lecture upon the subject of practical farming. The speaker touched upon the many important points of the subject in a brief, clear, impressive, and in some instances, jovial manner, giving much credit to the subject, and adding much to the good humor and character of the Club, and in return, a vote of thanks was tendered the speaker for his presence and excellent favors.

The last meeting of this club for the season will close with an entertainment at the West Peabody School House, next Friday evening. A supper will be furnished, and there will be entertaining exercises appropriate to the occasion. Ladies and gentlemen are invited.

F.

POLICE NOTES. — April 22d, Wm. Hayes appeared to answer to two charges—selling liquor to a minor and for an assault. On the former charge he was acquitted, and was let off by paying costs for the assault.

23d, John Shea, after a liberal dose of liquor, took it into his head to drive off with Erastus Ware's team, which was standing on Aborn street. Not being in a fit condition to control the horse, the animal ran away with him, doing some damage to the team. He was fined $10 and costs—$21.15.

25th, Everett B. Goldthwaite, for drunkenness, paid $1.00.

26th, Edward Crosby, of Woburn, up for drunkenness, not being able to pay his fine was committed to Salem Jail.

Bridget Malady, for drunkenness, paid $1.00.

Mr. Arthur Elliot, being the first from a club of young men to enter the blessed state of matrimony, entertained the others at his home on Chestnut street, last Friday evening. An excellent oyster supper was served, which received the whole attention of the company, after which the evening was socially spent. At a seasonable hour the company departed, wishing Arthur and his wife prosperity, and for many pleasant returns of this reunion.

There will be a Union Ladies' Meeting in the Vestry of the Congregationalist Church, Thursday afternoon, Apr. 28, at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of the "New England Moral Reform Society." There will be a public meeting in the evening at 7 1-2 o'clock, at which the gentlemen are invited to be present. The meeting will be addressed by interesting lady speakers from Boston.

One night last week a pet cat laid down quietly to sleep inside the big fly wheel at Pinder & Winchester's currying shop. In the morning the engine was started, and so was puss. For eleven hours the great wheel turned round and round, with the cat still inside it. When it was stopped puss jumped out apparently unharmed. It is estimated that she traveled 276 miles.

The alarm of fire shortly after five o'clock last Saturday afternoon, was caused by a slight fire on the roof of Mr. Joseph H. Poor's bark mill on Foster street. It is supposed to have caught from sparks from a chimney. The chime whistles sounded the alarm, and the department promptly responded. The damage was small.

A select musical entertainment will be given in the Unitarian Chapel, this evening, by the "No Name Club," the members of which are pupils of Mrs. George Upton. The programme will include selections by the club, and by Mrs. Blake, Miss Joy, Miss Osborne, Miss Kehew and Mrs. Upton.

Workmen have been engaged for the past week replacing the wooden awning at the depot, the old one having been in an unsafe condition for some time. The new awning and a new coat of paint will be an improvement.

DID HIM GOOD. — Mr. Charles H. Bauer, editor of the New York Union, and Notary Public, in a late issue mentions the following: Patrick Kenny, Esq., some time ago, suffered much from rheumatism and tried almost every means to rid himself of this painful evil, but in vain. He was advised to use St. Jacobs Oil, which he did so successfully, that all pain has left him and he is as healthy and strong as ever before. Mr. Kenny is an enthusiastic advocate of St. Jacobs Oil, and it has done him good.

☞ WHAT A CLERGYMAN SAYS ABOUT THE VITALIZING POWER OF COMPOUND OXYGEN. — A clergyman, Rev. W. B. Hines, of Waynesboro', Miss., writing to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says, referring to an advertisement of Compound Oxygen in that paper: "Please allow me a few words of commendation. My wife being in feeble health, and having been so for many years, I persuaded her to use it, which she did. She began very soon to improve in strength, and continued to improve, and passed through the unusually hot summer of 1878 and the fall, attending to all her domestic duties with more strength and less fatigue than she had done for ten years preceding; then during the winter nursed the sick day and night, with more than usual loss of sleep and exposure and effort, and all without breaking down, which she could not have done at any period during ten years past up to that time. In order to have some experimental knowledge of the effect of this Treatment, I used it several times myself. In all my life I never used anything that produced so soon such a pleasant, healthful naturalness of condition.—Gave a glow of youthful buoyancy by increasing the vital forces of mind and body. It gave a compass and power to my voice that it never had before." Drs. Starkey & Palen, of Nos. 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa., send their Treatise on Compound Oxygen free to all who write for it.

The embalmed head of Oliver Cromwell is in the possession of a daughter of the Hon. Mr. Wilkinson, an English gentleman. It is carefully preserved, wrapped in costly envelopes, in a strong antique box. At the Restoration the embalmed body of Cromwell was taken from Westminster Abbey and hung at Tyburn. The head was cut off, a pike driven through the neck and skull and exposed at Westminster Hall. The head is said to be almost entire, the flesh black and sunken, the hair remaining, and even a large wart over the eye. The splintered pieces of a pike and rusted iron are attached to the head.

We never saw any one joyous when suffering from pain:—neuralgia for instance. In relation to this malady Mr. George Guyett, Prop. Guyett House, thus informed our representative: I have used St. Jacobs Oil for neuralgia, and can confidently recommend it to any one similarly affected.—Sheboygan Falls, Sheboygan Co. News.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I anvise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

Maud's Cousin.

Mrs. De Vere Davenport finished reading the letter that a servant had just brought in. Then she folded it slowly, and returned it to the yellow envelope, that was addressed to her in a coarse, sprawling hand. Then she looked at the gentleman sitting at a window reading the morning Herald.

"Maud's summering is settled most conclusively by the news in this letter, Mr. Davenport. Sister Cynthia writes that her son Willard, Maud's cousin, will spend the summer between Newport and Saratoga, and, as a natural consequence, he would join our party. So that poor little Maud must not go with Leo and me."

Mr. Davenport looked sharply up from his paper.

"What's the reason? I don't suppose Maud's cousin can hurt her, and it seems a shame to deprive her of her season."

Mrs. Davenport's thin, handsome lips relaxed into a cold smile.

"I dare say—men never think of such things; but, my dear, it would be sheerest idiocy on our part to expose Maud to the society of her cousin. He may be handsome—all the Maurices are—and he certainly is poor. Suppose—just suppose—Maud took it into her head to—to fancy him?"

"Well, suppose she did?"

Mrs. Davenport gave a little, impatient exclamation, that her liege knew, from long experience, meant that she fully intended to carry out her own arrangements, in spite of his views and preferences.

"Well, he won't—that is one consolation. Maud shall not meet Williard Maurice—at least this summer, while she is so young, and romantic, and impressionable. She will have to give up Newport and Saratoga, and spend the time we are away with her grandmother, up at the farm in Jefferson county."

So all because Williard Maurice's dear old mother had written to her elegant, wealthy sister, who lived on Fifth avenue, New York, that her son Williard would join his aunt and cousins at the fashionable resorts, poor little Maud Davenport was forced to give up her anticipated round of pleasure and gaiety.

"I think it is too bad, mamma—just too bad for anything," she said, her pretty eyes, blue as forget-me-nots, filling with rebellious tears.

"You must make the best of it," Mrs. Davenport said, chillingly. "It's quite a shame, but unavoidable. And really you will find that, up in Jefferson county, there are most charming places—the Thousand Islands, the fishing, the boating, the picnics, the views, the air. You will not have such an unenviable time."

"But I want to go with you and Leo. Mamma, I just hate Williard Maurice for spoiling my summer so!"

But, despite Maud's vexation, and disappointment, and pretty little rebellion, when her mother wrote to the farm, saying that, if agreeable, she would send her youngest girl out for the summer, when the time of departure came, two days after Mrs. Davenport and Leo left for their outing, Maud was in good spirits, and went off quite reconciled.

"I shall like it, up on the St. Lawrence River, after all," she assured herself.

And then, when her father had kissed her good-by, and left her safe and satisfied in Grandma Cleveland's charge, Maud was quite positive that she would enjoy it all vastly.

And so she did—for a week or two, and then she began to get lonely, and dear old grandma racked her brains for amusements and diversions, and at length was seized with a happy thought, that resulted in an announcement, a week later, that was most acceptable to Maud.

"I've just had a letter from one of the girls, and she's going to send one of the children out for a spell. It'll be quite company for you, Maudie."

"Oh, dear, yes! I hope auntie—which auntie is it, grandma? Aunt Cynthia, or Aunt Samantha?—anyhow, I hope she'll send somebody that knows how to have a good out-of-door time. And I am so glad it's one of the younger ones. I believe a grown-up girl or young man would be a nuisance, instead of a relief."

Grandma peered over her silver-rimmed glasses.

"I wrote pertickeler to have one of the children sent. I knew you'd rather have it so. You must be all ready by to-morrow, Maud."

Maud laughed.

"I don't know how to get ready, grandma. I don't know whether to get out my dominoes and jackstraws for a boy, or my fancy work and my autograph album for a girl."

"Oh, well! it won't make much difference either way. Grandpa'll hitch Nellie up to the carriage, and you might drive down to the landing and bring up whoever comes—girl or boy."

The idea was delightfully exciting to Maud, and she entered into the spirit of it with all her girlish enthusiasm; and when she drove over to the steamboat-landing, at Alexandria Bay, the next day, she was gaily important.

"There's no telling who or what I will bring back," she thought. "And how ridiculous it seems to think I cannot tell who to look for! I suppose I must be governed by appearances and the general strange awkwardness my cousin from the country—be he boy or be she girl—will manifest."

So, when the boat landed her passengers—there were not so many but that Maud, standing a little aside, could scrutinize every possible cousin among them—there was no boy or girl of any kind, awkward or polished, among them. A little feeling of disappointment went over her as she turned away.

"I think it is very singular that nobody came. I wonder if—"

She never finished the thought, for she suddenly discovered a pair of the handsomest gray eyes she had ever seen, looking cautiously and admiringly at her; and they belonged to a young gentleman who was dressed in the most nobby of traveling suits, with tiniest diamond studs in his linen, and an immaculate, pale-gray tie.

"I beg your pardon, but I would like to inquire if you know where the Cleveland Farm is?"

What a charming voice it was, and how gracefully he lifted his hat, and how—oh! how handsome those half-smiling gray eyes were!

Maud looked demurely up in them.

"Cleveland Farm is just about two miles in that direction, where the clump of trees are."

The handsome gray eyes followed the direction indicated, and then came back to the sweet, girlish face.

"I expected somebody would meet me, but I dare say the detention was unavoidable."

All at once it flashed over Maud, this was "one of the children" invited to come over to the farm. It seemed absurd to think of making such a mistake; but if Grandma Cleveland always called her married daughters "the girls," why should not the self-same "girls" speak of their family as the "children."

Then a roguish little snap of mischief flashed up in Maud's eyes.

"Who did you expect to be here?"

He laughed.

"I didn't know exactly whether my grandfather would come, or send my little cousin to direct me—a stranger to me, although she is my cousin. Perhaps you may know her—her name is Davenport."

Maud frowned thoughtfully. This handsome young man was her cousin, beyond a shadow of a doubt.

"Davenport? Davenport? The name sounds familiar. Oh, yes; that's the little girl up at the Cleveland Farm. Yes, I know her quite well."

"I suppose she is a very nice little girl? Grandmother has sent for one of us to come amuse her. I'll try anyhow."

"I dare say you'll succeed."

He laughed, and lifted his hat again.

"I am afraid I have bothered you very much, but I am sure I am greatly obliged to you. Good-morning."

And, as he went away, on foot, he decided that he would search out the little beauty before long.

While Maud, inspired by her wicked little brain, made Nellie fairly fly home, and—was in the parlor, demure and proper, when the young man was ushered in by grandma, so proud and surprised.

"I never thought your mother'd send you," she said, delightedly.

"Well, you see, I was so awfully disappointed in my calculations for the summer, grandma, that they concluded a trip up here would heal my wounded heart," and he laughed very cheerily for a fellow with a sorrow.

"Do tell!" grandma said.

"There's nothing to tell, except that all my arrangement were made to visit Newport and Saratoga with Aunt Davenport and the girls; but Herrick, at the office, had to change his plans, and could not spare me at the time."

A look of sudden amazement finished his sentence, for he saw Maud sitting by the window, fair and sweet, dimpling and flushing with roguish satisfaction, as she stepped demurely up to him.

"I am Maud Davenport," she said, laughing.

"And I am Williard Maurice! But, why didn't you tell me so down at the landing?"

"Why didn't you ask me?" she retorted, saucily.

"Because I was so heart-broken at the deep disappointment of not spending the summer at Newport with you," he answered, quickly, with a look in his eyes that brought the warm blood charmingly to her cheeks.

And her mother had sent her away up here to avoid this splendid fellow, with the gray eyes and curling, golden-brown hair! Well—

* * * * * * *

"You can't help what fate has ordained," Mr. Davenport said, consolingly, when the news of the engagement came to them.

"Don't talk such nonsense!" she answered, hysterically. "If you were a resolute, positive man, you would put your foot down against it—"

A merry, sarcastic twinkle came into his eyes.

"My dear, if I had put my foot down against many things, I am convinced we would all be better off. But in the present instance, I'll be resolute for once—and—let Maud marry the man she loves."

And Maud's summering was most blessed after all.

A good day for advertisements, was Sunday to the New York Herald, which issued a sextuple sheet, containing one hundred, ten and a half columns of classified business announcements, out of a total number of one hundred forty-four; this is doubtless the largest amount of advertising ever reached in a single issue by any newspaper in the world; but the Herald anticipates exceeding even this before the busy season is over.

Crime in Maine.

Peabody, April 19, '81.

MR. EDITOR,—There has recently been in active circulation through the country a printed letter of Judge Goddard, showing great increase of state criminals in Maine since the enactment of the Prohibitory law in that state, thirty years ago. Like the Rev. Dr. Crosby's "Calm Views of Temperance," endorsing moderate drinking, the statements of Judge Goddard are quoted everywhere by the rum power. They are as misleading as it is possible for any statements to be, because they seem to show the failure of prohibition and are so used by the foes of temperance, whereas the contrary is true, as may be seen by the statistics of crime in Maine furnished by ex-Gov. Dingley. I will give the statistics of both, believing that a candid comparison of them will serve the cause of temperance in our own locality at the present time.

The following are the statistics of Judge Goddard, quoted from the State Prison report of Maine and printed in the Portland Prsss, showing an increase of State criminals of over 200 per cent. since the enactment of the Maine Law, in 1851:

	1851.	1880.	Percentage of increase.
Murders,	4	21	425
Manslayers,	1	5	400
Murderous Assaults,	3	7	133
Arson, etc.,	4	9	125
Rape,	1	9	800
Attempts to Rape,	1	6	500
Felonious assaults,	0	4
Robbery,	0	4
Piracy,	0	2
Total high crimes,	14	67	379
Other Felonies,	73	200
Total S. Pris. con.,	87	267	207

The following is ex-Gov. Dingley's reply, as printed in the Lewiston Journal:

"Statistics have been published and extensively circulated which, it is alleged, show that crime has increased in Maine more than 200 per cent. within twenty years, and that Maine now stands in the front rank of crime of all the States in the Union. The only statistics presented to sustain this alarming conclusion have been the number of convicts in the State prison and jails in 1880 and 1881, incorrectly stated in several particulars, and so marshalled as to ignore the fact that since the war the judges, under the discretion given them by statute, have gradually enlarged their terms of sentence, by which the number of convicts has been increased without an increase of crime, and also the fact that since 1866 there has been a large number of persons in jail for attempting to keep dram shops, whereas before that time no one was sent to jail for this offence. It is evident, therefore, that comparative statistics of persons in prison and jails before and since the war can give little idea of the extent of crime at these two periods. What will measure it exactly is the number of sentences to prison and jails for offences outside of violation of the liquor law. We take, therefore, from the reports of the Attorney-General the following figures of such sentences for the years mentioned below:

Year.	Sentence. Prison.	Sentence. Jail.	Sentence. Violating Liquor Law.
1860	42	46	0
1861	65	36	0
1862	38	36	0
1863	40	40	0
1864	16	32	0
1865	30	41	0
1866	104	94	0
1867	60	85	3
1868	43	53	9
1869	87	81	15
1870	54	73	20
1871	59	58	25
1872	49	20	30
1873	24	36	30
1874	67	51	50
1875	40	108	60
1876	70	140	75
1877	73	113	51
1878	72	104	86
1879	74	69	78
1880	59	73	70

"It will be seen that at the close of the war there was a large and sudden increase of crime in Maine, as there was in every other State. This increase was caused by the return from the war of a large body of camp-followers—not the soldiers who had faithfully done their duty—who had been in training in crime by their operations during the war. But it will be seen that since 1869 there has been, on the whole, a reduction in crime, notwithstanding increase of population, when offenses against the enforced liquor law are separated from ordinary crimes. During the hard times sentences for larceny largely increased, but it will be observed that in 1879 and 1880 there was a reduction of sentences, indicating a very decided improvement since 1866.

"There has been an attempt to create the impression that crime is more prevalent in Maine than in other States, when the fact is the reverse of this.—Take first the criminal statistics of Massachusetts. In 1860 there were 2,631 convicts in Massachusetts State Prison and jails; in 1879 there were 4,962 or one convict to every 460 population. In 1879 there were in Maine prisons and jails, exclusive of those imprisoned for violation of the liquor law, 400 convicts, or one to every 1,600 population. In other words there are three times as many criminals proportionately in Massachusetts as in Maine.

"Compare the number of convicts in the Maine State prison with those in the prisons of other States in 1879, and the official statistics give us the following:

NO. OF CONVICTS IN STATE PRISONS.

Alabama,	873,	one to	1,400 pop.
California,	1,318,	"	600 "
Connecticut,	278,	"	2,100 "
Maine,	191,	"	3,200 "
Massachusetts,	757,	"	2,200 "
New Hampshire,	189,	"	1,900 "
New York,	3,488,	"	1,400 "
Vermont,	176,	"	1,800 "

"It will be seen from such statistics as these there is less crime proportionately in Maine than in any other State in the Union. Comparing 1860 with 1880, crime has increased all over the Union in consequence of the influence of war, tendency of population to cities, and increase of wealth and luxury; but Maine has resisted these influences better than any State in the Union. That our prohibitory laws have aided in resisting these influences is evident to those who have given the subject a careful consideration."

The proportion of the national drink-bill for Maine, according to her population, would be $13,000,000. Instead of this sum $500,000 covers the drink-bill of Maine, which is less than $1.50 per capita to her entire population.—And for individual, mechanical and illegal purposes combined, the traffic does not equal $2 per capita. This the enemies of the cause admit. Before the existence of the Maine Law the liquor bill of Maine was $20 per capita.

Concerning the present status of the Maine Law, Hon. Neal Dow recently said:

"The business of the State and of Portland has never at any time been better than since the Maine Law, and never at any time so good as it is now. The reason of this is that we save fully twenty-four million dollars annually, directly and indirectly, through the law, which, but for it, would be spent and wasted on the liquor traffic. By the law every distillery, brewery, and wine-factory has been suppressed; there is not one now in the State.

Formerly we imported vast quantities of molasses to be converted into New England rum by our numerous distilleries; and at the same time we imported great quantities of West India rum, by the cargo—many cargoes. This rum made its way into the interior of the State—no town, village, hamlet, or rural district being too small or too remote to be free from it—and 'its course through the country was as distinctly marked as the track of a conflagration through a forest,' as a gentleman said to me a few days ago, who was formerly a very large dealer in liquors. Now no liquors go into that country, and the whole face of it is wonderfully changed for the better.

The volume of the liquor-traffic in Maine has been reduced fully nineteen-twentieths; and the fraction remaining is confined to the cities and large towns, and is carried on exclusively by the worst part of our foreign population."

Yours for the truth,

L. L. WOOD.

A Musical Event.

The Unitarian Chapel was filled to its utmost on Wednesday evening by a select audience, who gathered there by invitation of Mrs. George Upton, to listen to a concert by the musical coterie who surround and are led by that lady. This concert was the means of introducing to our musical world several of Mrs. Upton's pupils, and was the occasion of the first appearance of the "No Name Club"—an association of some of our best vocalists, who have joined themselves together for the singing of glees, and for the furtherance of their musical interests.

This club, under the conducting baton of Mrs. Upton, sang five of the eleven numbers of the programme, showing that great care had been taken in the preparation of their parts, and gave unqualified pleasure to their hearers. Their first number, "Awake, Awake," by Leslie, was so rendered as to confirm the hopes of their friends, and to give them a secure place as a musical club. "The Peasant Wedding in Karinthia," by Koschat, as sung by the club, and Bargiel's "Spring," by its lady members, were among the most pleasing numbers, and received the applauding approbation of the audience.

The solos of the evening—except the last—were sung by ladies, all pupils of Mrs. Upton, the first of which, "Angel at the Window," was sung with great tenderness and sweetness by Mrs. Blake.

Miss Joy, who sang "Flowers," by Bradsky, was suffering from a severe cold, but in spite of this disability gave pleasure to her hearers, and showed a voice which, in its right condition, must have much clearness and brilliancy.

The song, "Unspoken," as sung by Miss Osborne, was one which was adapted to showing the peculiarities of her voice, and was rendered with an evident appreciation of its sentiment.

To Miss Kehew were assigned three songs, which she sang in one number. They were "Autumn Blossoms," by Weil, "Morning Song," by Rubenstein, and "La Calandrina, by Tomelli. This lady possesses a voice of great brilliancy, and her rendering of these songs showed that she has been in careful training, in which she has learned to use with great skill her wonderful gift.

Mrs. Upton gave as her contribution to the feast of the evening, "The Raft," by Pinsuti, which was a story of a wreck and rescue, and was sung in such a manner as to delight her audience, and to call for long continued applause. These parts were all highly appreciated by the audience, who called for encores, but "no encores" seemed to be the order of the evening.

Mrs. Upton will receive the congratulations of all upon the success of her scholars and of the "No Name Club," all of whom in their parts at this concert showed that their training had been in careful hands.

MR. CONRAD'S OPENING. — Mr. Conrad's opening on Thursday, was characterized by great attractiveness and a fine display of goods. The display of taste in the arrangement of his mammoth windows certainly surpassed any previous efforts, and is certainly artistic. Upon one side is a rich central double arch or coronal of flowers so like their prototypes that it is hard to persuade one's self that they are not freshly plucked exotics from the greenhouse. Costly laces, real thread ties, fichus and delicate collars, with most exquisitely decorated fans and dainty gloves are upon either side of the piece de resistance, while beneath it is a choice selection of elegant bonnets and wonderful proofs of the milliner's art. On the other side there are several magnificent suits in black satin with over garments to correspond in elegance, and superb sun umbrellas and shades in every variety of exquisite ornamentation. The whole is a display which would immediately draw its throng of fair gazers upon any fashionable thoroughfare in Boston. The view is one of the finest of the kind we have ever seen. The millinery and cloak room is charming. The great display of hats and bonnets, rich silk costumes, and children's garments, with an abundance of hot house plants, make the rooms very attractive.—Gazette.

Quite a number of residences are being beautified at the hands of Mr. J. M. Ward, the landscape gardener and florist.

Eagle Hose Company have in contemplation the re-furnishing and "fixing up" of their room at the brick Engine House.

Mr. J. N. McLean, a former resident, now in Eureka, Nevada, gives us a newspaper intimation of his whereabouts semi-occasionally.

The average time consumed by men in buying hats is seven minutes. The average time of the other sex is one hundred and seventy-seven minutes.

They say the Eagle Hose Company kind of took the lead from the Hooks and left them some ways behind, while going to the fire last Sunday morning.

Mr. H. O. Upton's afternoon dancing school held an assembly at Upton's Hall, last Monday evening, which was very successful and thoroughly enjoyed.

The estate on Washington street, known as the John S. Torr estate, was sold at auction by L. B. Nichols, yesterday, to Mr. P. H. O'Connor, for $3150.

A social entertainment was given at the Baptist Vestry last evening, consisting of readings, solos, singing by the choir, etc. The evening was very pleasantly spent.

Last Saturday was the ninety-second anniversary of Washington as President of the United States. Our present form of government can be said to date from the 30th of April, 1789.

The owners of Buxton's Hill ask $1000 an acre for it. The hill contains twelve acres. "Too much for it," the Committee will undoubtedly decree; but then they only want a small part of it.

Somebody who knows says that Peabody must contain many military veterans. When a man enters a saloon and shouts, "let's take a drink, Colonel," every old stiff in the room falls into line for muster.

The visiting water committee to Plymouth report that the streets in that town would not compare favorably with our own. Our streets are always in excellent condition; there are a very few towns that have as good.

Don't be discouraged over the unseasonable weather of last month. The old saw says: "A cold April the barn will fill."

"When April blows his horn
It's good for both hay and corn."

The entertainment by Mr. J. Frank Baxter, at the Institute last Thursday evening, was attended by about one hundred people. It was deserving of a better house, being a very enjoyable entertainment, as those present will testify.

Last evening a number of our prominent citizens waited upon the Selectmen, and requested that they restrain the sale of liquor, either by prohibiting the sale or by limiting the licenses. The Board adjourned without taking action.

The bonnets of last spring are as much out of fashion as those of thirty years ago.

A live grasshopper is one of the curiosities that has come under our observation this week.

While the Torrent was going to the fire last Sunday morning, one of the wheels came off just after passing the Peabody Hotel, but fortunately no damage was done.

The Assessors of Peabody will soon begin business, for whose visits taxpayers should hold themselves in readiness. Their annual spring calls are not altogether so pleasant as some, but they are necessary.

Workmen have been busy raising the stone wall on Oak street hill. This place was filled in a few years since against the wooden fences, and it has now become necessary to build up to the grade of the side-walk. A new fence will be built, a needed improvement.

The combined weight of the sixteen members of Excelsior Steam Fire Engine Company is 2785 pounds, or an average of 174 pounds to each. That's a solid crowd. We published the weight of a Lynn company a short time ago, which was much lighter. Score one for Peabody.

Services at the Baptist Church, beginning next Sunday, will be changed, the preaching service will be held at the usual hour in the morning, instead of the afternoon, Sabbath School immediately following the morning service. Friday night prayer meeting at quarter before eight.

Our townsman, Mr. Daniel A. Caskin, of the firm of D. A. & F. L. Caskin, was united in marriage last Sunday to Miss Mary A. Noonan of Lynn.—The ceremony took place at St. Mary's Church in Lynn, Rev. Father Strain officiating. The church was crowded, and the couple received many valuable presents.

Mr. L. F. Moulton, dealer in flour, meal, grain, etc., has taken Mr. Walter Baker into the firm, to be known as L. F. Moulton & Co. Mr. B. is a young man of considerable business ability. He was employed by the old firm of J. G. Moulton & Co., and since Mr. L. F. Moulton started for himself has been in his employ.

The hair, glue compost, etc., has been burning ever since the fire at Mr. Upton's on Sunday morning, and the atmosphere in that vicinity has been anything but pleasant. The S. C. Bancroft hand-engine company played upon it last night, and Chief Littlefield sent Steamer No. 1 to finish up the job and put the fire out, this afternoon.

Mr. Charles Poor (Chub), a teamster with Munroe & Arnold, met with an accident last Friday. While at work near the freight office on Mill street, his horse suddenly started; he slipped and was dragged a short distance, injuring his leg so badly as to cause it to swell, since which time he has been confined to crutches, but at last account was improving.

Three years ago spring was so far advanced that lawns were mowed on the 9th of April, and on the 1st of May peach trees were in bloom. In 1879, the season was late, the grass just showing green on the 24th of April. Last year, blue-birds were lively before the end of February, the frogs were peeping on the 4th of March, the birds were all back and the grass was green.

We have used Heylingberg's Eureka Dandruff Remover, and can recommend it as the best preparation of the kind we have ever used. It is prepared by Mr. Heylingberg at his barber's shop on the Square, and contains no ammonia, oils, sulphur, sugar of lead, or dye stuffs that will injure the hair. He can furnish first-class references of parties who have used it. It is recommended for Dandruff, Salt Rheum, or any scalp diseases, and he will guarantee a cure or no pay.

A meeting of the New England Moral Reform Society was held in the vestry of the Congregational Church, on Thursday afternoon, April 28th, under the auspices of that Society. Thirty ladies formed themselves into a society. As auxiliary to them, they nominated for President, Mrs. L. L. Wood; for Vice President, Mrs. Daniel Steele; for Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. James Buxton. All those wishing to help in this missionary work will please send their names to the Secretary.

Never before was there such an elegant display of rich millinery goods in town, as exhibited by the Peabody Millinery Store, 60 Main street.

Mr. Wm. Butts has been appointed janitor of the brick engine house, in place of Mr. John Sumner, who declined to accept the position.

Mr. Claxton was on his beer and muscle at the depot yesterday noon, and caused a little excitement for a short time. The arrival of the police had a very quieting effect on him.

Prof. Miller, the sleight of hand performer, had an audience of about thirty-five at Temperance Hall, last evening. His card tricks were many of them very fine, even wonderful. It is his intention to come again, when we hope he will be greeted with a full house.

Mr. H. N. Batchelder, the ice dealer, has an advertisement to-day. The ice furnished by him from these ponds is the purest ice sold. Mr. Batchelder gives his personal attention to the delivering, and his prices are the lowest. Now is the time to engage your ice, and contracts can be made with drivers.

Mr. Bowman Viles was very much distressed a short time ago, at the loss of his pocket-book in Salem, containing some $200. After making every effort to find it, he inserted an advertisement in a Salem paper, but for once advertising did not find it for him. After returning home, he went to the pocket of another coat and there was his pocket-book and money just where he had left it.

Poet's Corner.

The Ships That Sail Away.

I think of the ships that sail away—
The white-winged ships that sail away,
Freighted with fears and wasted tears,
And joys we gathered for long, long years,
For the possible rainy day.

I steep and dream of the white-winged ships
That glide from the shores of life away!
That swiftly glide with the ebbing tide,
Bearing my joys to the farther side,
Into the twilight gray.

Oh, ships that vanish into the past!
Are none to return to the port at last?
Shall I vainly wait at the seaward gate,
Beatened and bruised, and scarred by fate,
Chilled by the winter blast?

The ships that carry my griefs, alas!
Have hulls of iron and shrouds of brass!
The storm's impact leaves them intact,
Though hurled on the jagged rocks of Fact,
Where fearful breakers mass!

Four O'clock.

The work of the day is ended,
And thankfully I stay
To watch the last tardy straggler
Depart on his noisy way.

The wind is lifting gently
The yellow window blind,
And idly turning the pages
Of the books that are left behind.

And faintly the merry voices
Float in the half-open door,
And glints of the westering sunlight
Slant over the dusty floor.

And I sit and tiredly wonder—
For the room is very still—
How my words have wrought with the children,
Whether for good or ill!

Anecdotes.

Spoopendyke's Speech Upon "Woman."

"Now, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he drew writing materials toward him, "now I want your woman's wit. Those fellows insist that I must respond to the toast, 'Woman,' to-morrow night, and I must prepare a few remarks. If we both go at it, we'll get up something nice."

"What you want?" argued Mrs. Spoopendyke, entering into the spirit of the undertaking, and tapping her teeth with her thimble. "What you want is woman in her various phases."

"What I want is a speech," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "They haven't put me down for a panorama. I want a short address, full of good points and pleasant things about the ladies. Now I shall begin: 'Fellow citizens—'"

"But women ain't fellow citizens. I should say—"

"You'd say, 'fellow back hair,' that's what you'd say. I'm addressing the people, and they're all men; don't you see? I've got to commence somewhere, and then I go on. "Now, fellow citizens, regarding women, our origin, our companions, our posterity, our mothers, our wives and our daughters, what more can we say than that they give us life, make it happy and soothe its decline? How's that?"

"Is that the same woman?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke bending over the table. "It don't strike me that she would care to have it put in that way. Why not say: 'Fellow citizens; we are assem—'"

"What's the matter with you?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "I've got to open with a sentiment, and you can't find anything more graceful than that. Then I will go on:—'She rises in the cradle, reaches her meridian at the altar and goes down in a flood of dew at the grave.' Can you grasp that?"

"I don't like that as well as the other," remonstrated Mrs. Spoopendyke. "You make her a mother while she's a baby, and as for the grave part, you don't stop to think that she may be another meridian by getting married again. I would say something like this: —'Fellow citizens we are assem—'"

"No, I won't either. Who's going to get married? Can't you see that I'm only carrying out the first idea of origin, companionship, and posterity?—Rising in the cradle means giving us birth. Now you hold up. Suppose I say next:—'We revere her as mother, adore her as wife, and—and,' say what we do for her as daughter?"

"We provide a home for her.—Wouldn't—?"

"Yes, of course!" raved Mr. Spoopendyke. "That's the idea! That fixes it! All you want now is two 'prolonged laughters,' four 'continued applauses,' one 'enthusiasm' and 'a voice' to be an oration! 'Fellow citizens, we furnish her with poached eggs and beans! Fellow citizens, we pass her the gravy! Fellow citizens!'" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, gesticulating like a horse-chestnut tree. "Fellow citizens, if she wants her beef rare, we give it to her! Fellow citizens, we give her all the dod gasted butter she can paste on her bread!' is that what you want me to say? Expect I'm going to stand round and make a measly ass of myself? 'Fellow citizens, as mother we revere her! Fellow citizens, as wife we adore her! Fellow citizens, to help a man to get up a speech she's the dod slamdest donkey that ever raised a family!' wah-h-h-h," shrieked Mr. Spoopendyke, purple in the face. "Got any more suggestions? Know any more eloquence?" and the worthy gentleman leaned back in his chair speechless.

"Couldn't you leave her out altogether?" recommended Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Can't you just revere her as mother and adore her as wife? As for the daughter, you might pass it over without saying:—'Fellow citizens, we are assem—'

"Yes, or I can cut her throat!" proclaimed Mr. Spoopendyke. "I can take her to the pound! I can salt her down for winter use! Dod gast the speech!" and Mr. Spoopendyke danced on the fragments of his notes. "Tomorrow night I'll answer that toast by telling what a dod gasted old mule you'd make of any man that would listen to you," and Mr. Spoopendyke banged himself into bed like a beer spigot and went to sleep.

"Well," thought Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she took down her hair and put it up again, "I don't see why he couldn't say something poetical about women, and the best I can say is we show her when we don't always love her, and we love her when we don't always show it.' That's sensible and it's so," sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke falling over her husband's boots, and then the good woman opened the window on her spouse's side of the bed, and sticking a few pins in the pillow in case she should want them in the night, she went prayerfully to sleep.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A MASONIC LEGEND.—Many years ago, in the parish of Carpshairn, in Golloway, a rude and sequestered district, there were only three free-masons—a minister, a tailor and a mason. The mason being desirous to introduce his son to the same mystery, caused a lodge to be called for that purpose at a lonely cottage, where the ceremonies were proceeding when a knock was heard at the door. The mason, whose name was Dun, went to see who it was, and found an old woman, who addressed him as follows:—

"The masons are met, the nicht?"

"Yes."

"Weel, ye ken my web was stolen last week?"

"Yes, Janet; but what business has that wi' the mason meeting?"

"Oh, ye ken, ye'll be raising the de'il, and I wad just like if ye wad ask him, since he's there at any rate, wha stole the web."

"Oh, ay, Janet; just you gang awa,' then, and we'll see what we can do."

Mr. Dun then returned to the interior of the cottage, and mentioned to the minister what had passed between him and the old woman. The clergyman rebuked him severely for conceding to the superstitions of the aged crone, and said he feared it would "affront them a'."

"Nae fear o' that," answered the mason; "just leave it al to me."

Next day when Janet called upon Mr. Dun, he told her that "the d'el" had not exactly communicated the name of the thief, but he had mentioned that if the goods were not returned before Thursday next, the house of the guilty person would fall upon him in the night time, and the whole family would be killed. This, he said, was a great secret, and he strictly forbade her communicating it to more than one person.

Away went Janet, quite satisfied, although it might have been expected to occur to her that the prediction of punishment to a thief was not exactly a characteristic piece of conduct on the part of Old Nick. The secret was speedily imparted to her next door neighbor, with many injunctions as to the propriety of letting it go no further. As a matter of course it was known to the whole neighborhood before night.

On the third night thereafter Janet's web was found lying at her door, with the part which had been cut off attached to the main body of it with pins.

Miscellaneous.

LEAD PENCILS.—Probably there is nothing so universally familiar in use, and also so utterly unknown to the users in its nature and origin as the common lead pencil, the consumption of it in this country alone being estimated by the most competent authority at seventy-eight millions per year. Its very name, purpetuating the old leaden plummet familiar among the treasures of the boy's first pocket, is a misnomer and a mistake, "black lead" having no more resemblance to lead than chalk has to cheese. Many people suppose the "lead" is melted and poured into the hole in the pencil wood, but it is ground to an almost impalpable powder, mixed to a paste with water, made into a long coil like wire by being forced through a small hole, (just as water issues from a syringe,) straightened, and cut in lengths, and baked like pottery. The hardness is due to an admixture of clay. The pencil is made in two halves by machinery at a cheap and rapid rate, and the process which cannot be related here at length, is among the most interesting in American manufactures. The material called "black lead" is as marvelous as india-rubber, although less protean. It is simply carbon, and is an enigma and bundle of inconsistencies. Its unlikeness to lead is suggested by saying that its weight is less than one-fourth that of lead, and that while lead fuses at a low temperature, graphite is not friable at any temperature known; on the contrary, no substance known surpasses it in resisting heat. Carbon in ordinary anthracite burns; carbon in graphite refuses to burn. A crucible of graphite, buried to the top in a mass of burning anthracite—carbon in carbon—not only refuses to burn, but melts its metallic contents. The diamond, as is commonly known, is nearly pure carbon; not so is graphite. The latter is the softest substance dug from the earth; the diamond is the hardest substance known. Subject the diamond to sufficient heat, and it parts with a mysterious something, leaving a bit of soft and dissimilar carbon; but it has not yet—unless we accept recent stories—been found possible to reverse the process and add to the carbon that mysterious something. The purity of graphite is extraordinary. It is sometimes refined until less than one-twentieth of one per cent. of other matter than carbon is left—merely a trace. The finest specimen of gold ever found, probably was one from the Ural Mountains, which was 98.96 per cent. fine, thus having 1.04 per cent. of foreign substance, against 0.20 per cent. in the finest graphite; or, stating it in another way, the finest gold had more than five times, and the average gold produced has twenty to fifty times as much impurity as the finest Ticonderoga graphite. Assuming that the diamond is perfectly pure carbon, this mere trace of impurity is all that separates the rare, hard, translucent, costly diamond from the common, soft, dull, comparatively valueless graphite, scarcely one-half as heavy as the gem, and yet the two are closely alike and almost equal in their resistance to fire. How these things are so is yet among the secrets of nature's laboratory.

HEREDITARY DESCENT OF BEAUTY. Mr. Darwin believes that the general beauty of the English upper class, and especially of the titled aristocracy, is probably due to their constant selection of the most beautiful women of all classes (peeresses, actresses, or wealthy bourgeoises) as wives throughout an immense number of generations. The regular and fine complexions of the mothers are naturally handed down by heredity to their descendants. Similarly it would seem that we must account for the high average of personal beauty amongst the ancient Greeks and the modern Italians by the high average of general taste, the strong love for the beautiful, diffused amongst all classes in both those races. The prettier women and the handsomer men would thus stand a better chance of marrying, other things being equal, and of handing down their own refined type of face and form to their children. If this be so—and evolutionists at least can hardly doubt—then we should expect everywhere to find the general level of personal beauty highest where there was the widest diffusion of æsthetic taste. Now, our own squalid poor are noticeable, as a rule, for their absolute and repulsive ugliness, even when compared with those of other European countries. Gaunt, hard-faced women, low-browed, bull-dog looking men, sickly, shapeless children people the back slums of our manufacturing towns.—Their painful ugliness cannot all be due to their physical circumstances alone; for the lazzoroni who hang about the streets of Naples must lead lives of about equal hardship and discomfort; yet many of them, both men and women, are beautiful enough to sit as models for a Lionardo. On the other hand, ever traveler speaks in high admiration of the beauty and gracefulness displayed by young and old among the æsthetic Polynesians; while in many like cases I note that Europeans who have once become accustomed to the local type find decidedly pretty faces extremely common in several savage races whose primitive works of art show them in other ways to possess considerable æsthetic taste. In India, where artistic feeling is universal, almost every man or woman is handsome. On the whole, it seems fairly proved that the average personal beauty everywhere roughly corresponds to the average general love for beauty in the abstract.

MARRIED PEOPLE WOULD BE HAPPIER if home trials were never told to neighbors.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days.

If each would try and be a support and comfort to the other.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were as kind to their husbands as they were to their lovers.

If fuel and provisions were lain in during the high tide of summer work.

If men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweethearts.

If both parties remembered that they married for worse as well as for better.

If there were fewer "please darlings" in public, and more common manners in private.

If there fewer silk and velvet street costumes, and more plain, tidy house dresses.

If masculine bills for fancy Havanas and feminine ditto for rare lace, were turned into the general fund, until such times as they could be incurred without risk.

If wives and husbands would take some pleasure as they go along, and not degenerate into mere toiling machines. Recreation is necessary to keep the heart in its place, and to get along without it is a big mistake.

If men would remember that a woman can't be always smiling who has to cook the dinner, answer the door bell half a dozen times, and get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the playthings of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old on skates, and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, dusting, etc. A woman with all this to contend with may claim it as a privilege to look and feel tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy wouldn't be too much to expect from the man, who, during the honeymoon, wouldn't let her carry as much as a sunshade.—Saturday Evening Mail.

☞EXHAUSTION FROM BRAIN WORK.—Few of our business or professional men reach the age of forty-five without brain and nervous exhaustion—often to an extent that forces them to relax effort, or abandon work for a time, if not altogether. An occasional use of that vitalizing agent, now so widely known as "Compound Oxygen," would give nature the power to restore these wasted forces in a large number of cases. Rev. D. D. Reed, of South Amboy, who was greatly run down by overwork, and consequent waste of nervous energy, after being restored to health through the use of this agent, gives it this voluntary and strong endorsement: "After a most thorough and continued trial of its worth as a remedial and restorative agent, I pronounce its value to be above that of gold and silver. I freely and voluntarily commend it to all brain-workers as the best thing they can use to secure a restoration of exhausted energies." Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 and 1111 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa., send their Treatise on "Compound Oxygen" free to all who write for it. It contains a record of many remarkable cures.

POLITE BARBARIANS.—Kaid Maclean, a retired English officer who commands the Moorish army, said recently: "If I were to publish half the things I have seen in this extraordinary country, I should be branded as a liar for the rest of my life. The Moors of Morocco are described by Captain Colville in his new book of travels there as barbarians, but their barbarism is concealed by a politeness 'genuine and gentlemanlike.' Yet the Raid or Pasha with whose polite manners and lavish hospitality one has been so struck may just have been watching a slave flogged to death, or may, at the very time he is talking to one, be starving a man to death in an upper chamber, or planning some new and horrible torture by which he may extract money from his subjects." The Arab tortures men and animals most cruelly, "but always for a purpose."

Rupture

ITS RELIEF AND CURE AS CERTAIN AS DAY FOLLOWS DAY, WITHOUT ANY OPERATION OR HINDRANCE FROM LABOR.

Since the reduction of Dr. Sherman's terms, thousands are crowding upon him for treatment, gladly throwing away their griping, irksome, disfiguring and life punishing trusses. His treatment for this affliction makes the patient comfortable and safe in the performance of every kind of exercise or labor. It is a grand thing, and those who are ruptured and do not provide themselves with it, must endure the dangers of the precarious affliction and the use of trusses all through life. Thousands of those cured give the most flattering testimonials of gratitude to Dr. Sherman. He is the author and inventor of his popular system; he imparts his secret to no one; it is applicable to all classes, and, under his reduced rate within the reach of almost every one.

Patients can receive treatment and leave for home the same day. Dr. Sherman's Book on Rupture gives convincing proofs from professional gentlemen and others of his success ful treatment. It is illustrated with photograph pictures of bad cases before and after cure and is sent to those who send 10 cents. Principal office, 251 Broadway, New York. Branch office, 43 Milk street, Boston. HOW AFGHANS FIGHT.

An English correspondent in Asia, referring to the fighting qualities of the Afghan soldiery, says: "An Afghan never thinks of asking for quarter, but fights with the ferocity of a tiger, and clings to life until his eyes glaze and his hands refuse to pull a pistol trigger or use a knife in a dying effort to maim or kill his enemy. The stern realities of war were more pronounced on the battle-fields in Afghanistan than perhaps they have ever been in India, if we except the retributive days of the mutiny. To spare a wounded man for a minute was probably to cause the death of the next soldier who unsuspiciously walked past him. One thing our men certainly learned in Afghanistan, and that was to keep their wits about them when pursuing an enemy or passing over a hard-won field. There might be danger lurking in each seemingly inanimate form studding the ground, and unless care and caution were exercised, the wounded Afghan would steep his soul in bliss by killing a Kaffir just when life was at its last ebb. This stubborn love of fighting in extremis is promoted doubtless by fanaticism, and we saw so much of it that our men at close quarters always drove their bayonets well home, so that there should be no mistake as to the deadliness of the wound. The physical courage which distinguished the untrained mobs who fought so resolutely against us was worthy of all admiration; the tenacity with which men, badly armed and lacking skilled leaders, clung to their positions was remarkable, to say nothing of the sullen doggedness they often showed when retiring. But when the tide of the fight set in fully against them, and they saw further resistance would involve them more deeply, there was so sudden a change always apparent, that one could scarcely believe the fugitives hurrying over the hills were the same men who had resisted so desperately but a few minutes before. They acted wisely; they knew their powers in scaling steep hills, or in making their escape by fleetness of foot, and the host generally dissolved with a rapidity which no one but an eye-witness can appreciate. If cavalry overtook them they turned like wolves and fought with desperation, selling their lives as dearly as men ever sold them; but there was no rally in the true sense of the word, and but faint attempts at aiding each other. The regular troops were but little amenable to discipline, by reason of deficient training, and they resorted to the tactics they had pursued as tribesmen when once they were forced to retire."

BRAVE BAGGER AND THE FENCING-MASTER.

There was one Austen Bagger, a very tall gentleman, clever of his hands, not standing much upon his skill, but carrying the valiant heart of an Englishman. Upon a time being merrie amongst his friends, said he would go fight with Signior Rocco, the master of fence, presently went to Signior Rocco his house in the Black-friers, and called to him in this manner: "Signior Rocco, thou that art thought to be the only cunning man in the world with thy weapon, thou that takest upon thee to hit anie Englishman with a thrust upon any button, thou that taketh upon thee to come over the seas to teach the valiant noblemen and gentlemen of England to fight, thou cowardly fellow, come out of thy house, if thou dare for thy life; I am come to fight with thee." Signior Rocco, looking out at a window, perceiving him in the street to stand readie with his sword and buckler, with his two-hand sword drawne, with all speed ran into the street, and manfully let fly at Austen Bagger, who most bravely defended himself, and presently closed with him, and stroke off his heels, and cut him over the breech, and trode upon him, and most greviously hurt him under his feet; yet, in the end, Austen of his good nature gave him his life and there left him. This was the first and last fight that ever Signior Rocco ever made, saving once at Queen Hith he drew his rapier upon a waterman, where he was severely beaten with oars and stretchers, but the oddes of their weapons were as great against his rapier, as was his two-handed sword against Austen Bagger's sword and buckler, therefore for that fray he was to be excused.—Old Chronicles.

UNWILLING TO BE A PAUPER.

A curious case has recently come to light in Salem, Mass., involving the right of a person to support himself or herself by honest work. A girl fourteen years old escaped from an almshouse and obtained work for $1 per day. The authorities discovered her whereabouts and returned her to the almshouse, where they insist upon keeping her as a pauper. The persons who gave her work declare their willingness to provide her with a home and steady employment, and they intend to bring the case into court to see whether a strong, healthy girl can be compelled to remain a pauper against her will,

See the boys in blue are marching,
Bearing sweetest flowers of May;

For the busy world moves on.

And his price is very low.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

THE so-called Grant "subscription" is rather absurd than otherwise, and we would be glad to see the General refuse, in his quiet way, to have anything to do with it. If a public man in this country is able to so far distinguish himself above his fellow-citizens as to make them deem it fitting to pension him, it would apparently be far better that that pension should come through the people as represented in Congress, than by "passing round the hat." Gen. Grant is far from being in poor circumstances pecuniarily, and the taking up of a collection in his benefit can hardly be regarded as otherwise than impertinent. Gen. Grant is not a pauper, and it is believed by those who like him best that he is able to go to work like any other plain American citizen and earn his living. The N. Y. Times undoubtedly meant well in passing around the plate and raising $250,000 for the ex-President, but the taste of the proceeding was more questionable. The fact is, people ought to begin by this time to get themselves down to a capacity to grasp the fact that Grant is simply a good American citizen and not a demi-God.

YORKTOWN. — The programme for the Yorktown Centenary Celebration is as follows: The festivities will commence Oct. 6, the anniversary of the day on which the allied forces of France and America erected the first parallel of breastworks on the Yorktown fortification. On this day all the descendants of the promulgators of the Declaration of Independence will be invited to attend. On the next, the government authorities will receive the representatives of the French republic, which will, in all probability, consist of a visiting fleet and regiment. During their stay they will be entertained by the colonial states with target practice in the morning, a grand dress parade in the afternoon and a ball at night. This entertainment will last throughout the twenty days of the celebration, each feature being appropriately varied on each day of the affair. If this plan be adopted by the government, special historical interest will be attached to it, as the gun practice will be carried on from day to day by ordnance representing the various stages in the progress of gunnery and gun manufacture from the revolution to the present day. The music will be furnished by P. S. Gilmore's 22d regiment band.

IF we thought that we could rightly be classed as man or woman we would strive to exhibit some of the characteristics of the race; if we were a professing chrisrian we would try to practice what we professed, if the attempt should kill us; and, finally, if we had a particle of generosity of temper, we would not ascribe a bad motive to acts which we cannot explain, when there is not the slightest evidence that these acts were the results of unworthy promptings. Mankind is wicked enough as we all know, and there is not the least necessity that we should seek to make it out worse than it really is. As we hope for a generous judgment of our own failures, let us accord to our neighbors equal generosity in judging their short comings.

The Cadet Band will furnish music at Packard's Opening, to-morrow (Thursday) evening.

MURDER.—Yesterday morning Marblehead was thrown into a high pitch of excitement by the discovery of the body of Frank Hathaway near the powder house, and showing every evidence that a foul and premeditated murder had been committed. The skull of the murdered man was bruised and showed that he had been struck across the head with a heavy club or some other deadly weapon. He was a man about 34 years of age, inoffensive and respected; he had recently come into possession of $6,000 left him by his grandmother, and he went to Salem on Monday to get it. He did not receive the money but was promised it by his lawyer on Tuesday. He returned to Marblehead and in the evening he was on his way to his home about 11 o'clock, in company with a young man by the name of Wm. Stone. This young man left him at his own home, while Hathaway proceeded on his way.

It is thought that some one who knew of his going to Salem for the money, lay in wait for him near the powder house on Green street, and, approaching him from behind, dealt him a foul blow on the back of his head which stunned him but did not kill him. The murderer then dragged him by his legs to a ditch about 200 feet, where there was about eight or ten inches of water, and threw him into it face downwards, after having first stopped about half way to the ditch and rifled his pockets, scattering the papers about the field.

The property which Mr. Hathaway was to have received was his father's portion of his grandmother's estate.—It is also said that he had been paid about $300 that same day by his father-in-law, and as he most always carried his money about with him it is thought unless he deposited that amount when in Salem on Monday, the murderer may have secured that although failing to secure the $6000. On examination of the body Dr. Carlton found gravel stones and grass in the lungs of the body, showing conclusively that Mr. Hathaway was not killed by the blow he received, but was drowned in the ditch.

POSTAL CARDS.—Postmaster General James has issued the following order, which was received at the Portland post office Saturday: On and after June 1, 1881, no printing or writing will be permitted upon the address side of postal cards, except that imprinted thereon at the manufactory, and such as may be necessary for the proper direction of the same. All postal cards bearing any other writing or printing upon the address side are declared unmailable, and must be returned to the sender by the postmaster at the office where they may be mailed. Such cards may be treated as "spoiled" and redeemed by any postmaster upon application of the holder, as prescribed in section 171, postal laws and regulations, 1879. Future supplies of postal cards will be printed on the address side with the words, "Nothing but the address can be placed on this side."

One of the provisions of a bill prepared for introduction into the Massachusetts Legislature makes it the duty of every hotel or restaurant using oleomargarine on its tables to put up a notice, in a conspicuous place, "Oleomargarine served here." This ought to satisfy those people who, it is claimed, like the product of beef fat and acids better than dairy butter. They can transfer their patronage to the restaurants and hotels where their favorite delicacy is served, and enjoy it with full knowledge of what they are eating.

Liquor licenses expire on the 1st of May, and in this town they can not be renewed. That rum will be sold here during the current year nobody doubts; but if the authorities make honest efforts to carry out the will of the people as expressed at the ballot-box, as we have reason to believe they will, it is confidently expected that there will be a marked falling off of sales from last year.—Woburn Journal.

The red-skinned bananas come from Baracoa, on the north-eastern coast of Cuba; the yellow ones from the island of Jamaica. Pineapples come from the Bahama Islands. For further particulars about these delicious fruits, ask Mr. George Stevens, dealer in foreign and domestic fruits, Peabody.

According to the reports of the census bureau, the net indebtedness of Beverly is 11.74 per cent. of the town's assessed valuation; of Lynn, 8.86; of Lawrence, 7.1; of Newburyport, 5.74; of Salem, 4.9; of Peabody, 4.42; of Haverhill, 3.69; of Gloucester, 2.39.

The money lenders have "got" the Legislature hard and fast, and so the bill to exempt from taxation money loaned on mortgage seems likely to become a law. Real estate owners may prepare for higher taxes next fall, and tenants may consequently look out for increased rents.—Cambridge Press.

With the exception of the S. C. Bancroft company, the old foremen have been re-elected. Capt. Mitchell, the new fereman for this company, never belonged to the department until this company was formed. He has always taken an active interest and will, no doubt, make a good foreman. Mr. P. L. Winchester, who retires from the position of Treasurer of the Volunteerf has faithfully performed the duties o, that office since 1867.

We visited recently the extensive hennery of Mr. Clarence S. Beckett, on Holten street. Mr. Beckett makes a specialty of Light Brahma fowls, his stock is unsurpassed, and has always won the highest prizes wherever shown. They are of mammoth size, of extra fine color, and superior layers. The house in which they are kept is a model of neatness for a hen house, being lathed and plastered, with roosts, nests, grain-boxes, drinking fountains, etc., very conveniently arranged.—There is in front of the house a large yard in which the birds are allowed to run. The following are among the premiums won: 1st and 2d premiums, at Lawrence, Mass., 1878; 1st, 2d and special premiums with Diploma for the best collection, at Lynn, Mass., 1879; 1st and 2d, at Lynn, Mass., 1880; 1st and 2d, at Concord, Mass., 1880; 2d on Fowls, 2d on Chicks, at Haverhill, Mass., 1880, (scoring within 3-4 point of first prize pair); $5.00 special for the best breeding pen, at Brockton, Mass., 1880.

Mr. Beckett has about sixty small chickens just hatched. This stock is so well-known that he is constantly receiving orders from all parts of the country for eggs, and in numerous cases his customers secure prizes by exhibiting birds raised from his stock. A great deal of interest is being taken in hens in this town, and an exhibition this fall is talked of.

The Water Committee has rented the room in Warren Bank Building recently occupied by the Checker Club, and here the Committee and Water Board will transact their business in future. The Committee visited Plymouth last Thursday, and were received and cordially entertained by the Water Board of that town, and shown the works, which are after the same style as those contemplated here, but on a smaller scale. They brought home with them a piece of pipe which had been under ground twenty-five years, and was apparently in as good condition as when new. It was made of wrought iron and cement, the same kind as the Committee will probably put down here.

It was a sad but disgusting sight to the residents of Washington street to see last Sunday, between four and six o'clock, the large number of young men who had got themselves outside of so much "bug-juice" as to make them hopelessly drunk, reel along the street, and to hear their maudlin vulgarity, profanity, and snatches of song. Last Sunday was no exception, for it occurs nearly every Sunday.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The fourteenth regular meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, April 29th, the President presiding. This was the closing meeting for the season. During the opening exercises Mr. Bowman Viles extended to the members of the club and invited guests an invitation to meet at his house on the 17th of June next, afternoon and evening, for a social reunion and picnic, which invitation was accepted by a unanimous vote. After the opening business the exercises for the evening consisted of songs, readings, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Gray, of Lynn, gave very entertaining songs, some of a comic nature, all of which were highly appreciated. The readings were by Miss Belle Cushman Eaton, of Lynnfield Centre, which gave much credit to her ability as a public reader. Success must surely crown her efforts to become one of the leading public readers of the present time. To all appearances the audience was well pleased with the exercises of the evening. There does not seem to remain a chance for a doubt but what there is an inclination on the part of this club that it shall succeed, and it is certainly very desirous that no element shall exist to cause any depression of interest or discord to so noble an enterprise.

POLICE NOTES.—April 27th, George Chandler, George P. Kimball and Abram C. Grover, of Lynn, arrested for setting fire to the woods, were discharged.

28th, Ellen O'Connell, for assault, was fined $10.65; appealed.

Catherine F. Fitzpatrick, an insane person, was committed to Danvers Hospital.

May 2d, William O'Brien, of Salem, for drunkenness, paid $1.00.

James Holland, for drunkenness, fined $1.00.

May 3d, Charles Dekin, drunkenness, $1.00.

Dennis Roach, of Danvers, also drunk, fined $1.00.

May 4th, Wm. Thomas and Edward Johnson, claiming to be from Boston, were arraigned for drunkenness, and for non-payment of fines were committed to Salem Jail.

Shortly after midnight on Saturday a fire was discovered in a building situated on the border of "Sidney's Pond" in South Peabody. The building was owned by Mr. E. W. Upton, and occupied by George Upton as a store-house. It was totally destroyed with its contents, some two hundred tons of hair, such as is used by masons in making plaster. The department promptly responded to the alarm given. The property is insured for $2500 in the Queen's Insurance Company of England. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, making the third one within a month.

Fires in the woods are becoming altogether too frequent, and should the parties setting them get caught they should receive the extreme penalty of the law. Last Sunday the woods this side of the Alms House were set on fire, and upwards of one hundred acres of woodland were burned over; about forty or fifty acres belonged to the town, and the rest to Samuel Brown and others. The damage was not very heavy, as this same same ground was burnt over some two years ago. The inmates at the Alms House turned out and by hard work saved a fine grove of pines from the flames.

Mr. Frank A. Bragdon, Peabody's popular baker, has added to his rolling stock a handsome wholesale team. It is at the carriage manufactory of Mr. C. W. Brine on Foster street; is elaborately painted in gold letters with a monogram of the owner in the center. On the body of the wagon landscapes and marine scenes are painted, with the running parts painted light and striped; in fact, the whole turnout does credit to Mr. Brine, and the owner must feel proud in possessing the finest looking team on the road.

Memorial Day services will be changed somewhat this year from previous years. In the forenoon the members of the Post will visit South Peabody, and decorate the graves there, and in the afternoon the address will be delivered at the Institute at half past two, after which the line will form, and the Post will proceed to decorate their comrades' graves in this part of the town. The Salem Brass Band has been engaged to furnish music.

By earnest request Rev. L. L. Wood will repeat his lecture on "Jehuism" in the Baptist Vestry, on Thursday evening, May 12th. At the close of the lecture a social time will be enjoyed, and ice cream and cake offered for sale. It will be remembered that it was a very stormy evening when Mr. Wood delivered this lecture before, and the large number who were unable to hear him will now have an opportunity.

With the exception of the S. C. Bancroft company, the old foremen have been re-elected. Capt. Mitchell, the new fereman for this company, never belonged to the department until this company was formed. He has always taken an active interest and will, no doubt, make a good foreman. Mr. P. L. Winchester, who retires from the position of Treasurer of the Volunteerf has faithfully performed the duties o, that office since 1867.

We visited recently the extensive hennery of Mr. Clarence S. Beckett, on Holten street. Mr. Beckett makes a specialty of Light Brahma fowls, his stock is unsurpassed, and has always won the highest prizes wherever shown. They are of mammoth size, of extra fine color, and superior layers. The house in which they are kept is a model of neatness for a hen house, being lathed and plastered, with roosts, nests, grain-boxes, drinking fountains, etc., very conveniently arranged.—There is in front of the house a large yard in which the birds are allowed to run. The following are among the premiums won: 1st and 2d premiums, at Lawrence, Mass., 1878; 1st, 2d and special premiums with Diploma for the best collection, at Lynn, Mass., 1879; 1st and 2d, at Lynn, Mass., 1880; 1st and 2d, at Concord, Mass., 1880; 2d on Fowls, 2d on Chicks, at Haverhill, Mass., 1880, (scoring within 3-4 point of first prize pair); $5.00 special for the best breeding pen, at Brockton, Mass., 1880.

Mr. Beckett has about sixty small chickens just hatched. This stock is so well-known that he is constantly receiving orders from all parts of the country for eggs, and in numerous cases his customers secure prizes by exhibiting birds raised from his stock. A great deal of interest is being taken in hens in this town, and an exhibition this fall is talked of.

The Water Committee has rented the room in Warren Bank Building recently occupied by the Checker Club, and here the Committee and Water Board will transact their business in future. The Committee visited Plymouth last Thursday, and were received and cordially entertained by the Water Board of that town, and shown the works, which are after the same style as those contemplated here, but on a smaller scale. They brought home with them a piece of pipe which had been under ground twenty-five years, and was apparently in as good condition as when new. It was made of wrought iron and cement, the same kind as the Committee will probably put down here.

It was a sad but disgusting sight to the residents of Washington street to see last Sunday, between four and six o'clock, the large number of young men who had got themselves outside of so much "bug-juice" as to make them hopelessly drunk, reel along the street, and to hear their maudlin vulgarity, profanity, and snatches of song. Last Sunday was no exception, for it occurs nearly every Sunday.

WEST PEABODY FARMERS' CLUB. The fourteenth regular meeting of the West Peabody Farmers' Club was held on Friday evening, April 29th, the President presiding. This was the closing meeting for the season. During the opening exercises Mr. Bowman Viles extended to the members of the club and invited guests an invitation to meet at his house on the 17th of June next, afternoon and evening, for a social reunion and picnic, which invitation was accepted by a unanimous vote. After the opening business the exercises for the evening consisted of songs, readings, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Gray, of Lynn, gave very entertaining songs, some of a comic nature, all of which were highly appreciated. The readings were by Miss Belle Cushman Eaton, of Lynnfield Centre, which gave much credit to her ability as a public reader. Success must surely crown her efforts to become one of the leading public readers of the present time. To all appearances the audience was well pleased with the exercises of the evening. There does not seem to remain a chance for a doubt but what there is an inclination on the part of this club that it shall succeed, and it is certainly very desirous that no element shall exist to cause any depression of interest or discord to so noble an enterprise.

POLICE NOTES.—April 27th, George Chandler, George P. Kimball and Abram C. Grover, of Lynn, arrested for setting fire to the woods, were discharged.

28th, Ellen O'Connell, for assault, was fined $10.65; appealed.

Catherine F. Fitzpatrick, an insane person, was committed to Danvers Hospital.

May 2d, William O'Brien, of Salem, for drunkenness, paid $1.00.

James Holland, for drunkenness, fined $1.00.

May 3d, Charles Dekin, drunkenness, $1.00.

Dennis Roach, of Danvers, also drunk, fined $1.00.

May 4th, Wm. Thomas and Edward Johnson, claiming to be from Boston, were arraigned for drunkenness, and for non-payment of fines were committed to Salem Jail.

Shortly after midnight on Saturday a fire was discovered in a building situated on the border of "Sidney's Pond" in South Peabody. The building was owned by Mr. E. W. Upton, and occupied by George Upton as a store-house. It was totally destroyed with its contents, some two hundred tons of hair, such as is used by masons in making plaster. The department promptly responded to the alarm given. The property is insured for $2500 in the Queen's Insurance Company of England. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin, making the third one within a month.

The Salem Brass Band has been engaged to furnish music.

By earnest request Rev. L. L. Wood will repeat his lecture on "Jehuism" in the Baptist Vestry, on Thursday evening, May 12th. At the close of the lecture a social time will be enjoyed, and ice cream and cake offered for sale. It will be remembered that it was a very stormy evening when Mr. Wood delivered this lecture before, and the large number who were unable to hear him will now have an opportunity.

"A Stylish New Spring Bonnet."

A girl may be both young and fair,
A sweet and winning creature,
She may have hair of golden hue
And loveliness of feature;
She may be dressed in silk attire—
Of such I write my sonnet—
But to be perfect she must wear
A stylish new spring bonnet.

Satin its strings, modest its plume,
A poke of broad dimensions,
Thus should the bonnet fairly match
Its wearer's sweet pretensions;
And when she shines, with all her charms
Casting their glow upon it,
Our hearts and hands are all bewitched
By this fine new spring bonnet.

Although a lady may be plain—
Yes, ugly to a feature—
Her hair bright red, her eyes light green—
In fact a homely creature;
Yet if her bonnet is in style,
The ladies, dear, they're human!
Will all exclaim as with one breath,
Oh! what a charming woman!

We see bright bonnets here and there
Peep out like sweet spring flowers;
Well they combine the lace and gold,
These dainty hats of ours!
And, husbands, would you have on earth
The happiest woman on it?
Take home from JOHN P. PEABODY'S,
A stylish new spring bonnet.

A female spider eats her husbands. If Mormon women lived on husbands, there never would be enough left to warm up in hash.

An Ohio girl sued a man for breach of promise, and proved him such a mean scoundrel that the jury decided that she ought to pay him something for not marrying her.

The habit of American girls marrying Italian Counts has slackened up a little of late. A life of following around a hand organ and passing the tamborine for pennies is not as attractive as formerly.

When about twelve years old said Mr. Geisman, of the Globe Chop House to our represenative, I met with an accident with a horse, by which my skull was fractured, and ever since I have suffered with the most excruciating rheumatic pains. Of late I applied St. Jacobs Oil which has given me almost total relief.—Fort Wayne (Ind.) Sentinel.

The Michigan Legislature proposes to make hugging a girl against her will a penal offence. The girls will now either have to submit gracefully and not assume to object, and scratch and fight, or they won't get hugged. This is as it should be.

A Galveston widow is about to marry her fifth husband. Her pastor rebuked her for contemplating matrimony so soon again. "Well, I just want you to understand, if the Lord keeps on taking them, I will, too," was the spirited reply.

☞ Try Carter's Little Nerve Pills for any case of nervousness, sleeplessness, weak stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., relief is sure. The only nerve medicine for the price in market. In vials at 25 cents.

In the year 1880 America issued seventy patents to women, and not one of these was an indicator to be attached to a bedpost to show if there is a man under the bed. And yet, think how much getting down on hands and knees such a thing would save women.

A young lady at a ball called her beau an Indian, because he was on her trail all the time.

☞ A purely vegetable medicine, containing all the virtues of calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. Simmons' Liver Regulator will be found prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any injurious effects. When used as a cathartic, it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nausea or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure.

A Bridgeport man says his wife is only half like a telescope. He can draw her out, but he can't shut her up.

"Fare well my own," said the indulgent husband, as he provided his wife with the best that the market afforded.

☞ The action of Carter's Little Liver Pills is pleasant, mild and natural. They gently stimulate the liver, and regulate the bowels, but do not purge. They are sure to please.

A man built a house worth $10,000 at Andover, Mass., without spending a cent. He bought all the material on six months' credit and at the end of that time refused to pay. All the stuff was fast in the house, which he had sold to his wife. The labor was obtained on the same plan, and even the widow who boarded the workmen was swindled. The man lives placidly in his fine residence, but is not greatly loved by his neighbors.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it to me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

AMPUTATION OF THE LEG.

THE OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN AT FAULT—DR. DAVID KENNEDY THE SUCCESSFUL SURGEON.

Money is the universal necessity, and none but a cynic or a fool will affect to despise it. Mr. Abram Elsworth, of Port Ewen, of Ulster county, N. Y., had realized this truth.—His disease involved the whole of his thighbone, and the suffering man looked forward, not without apparent reason, to death as his only deliverer. His family physician refused to amputate the limb—asserting that the operation would kill the patient on the spot. Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, of Rondout, N. Y., who was consulted, held a different opinion and amputated the limb. The Doctor then administered freely his great Blood-Specific FAVORITE REMEDY to afford tone and strength to the system, prevent the return of the disease, and Mr. Elsworth remains to this day in the bloom of health. This gentleman's disease was the offspring of foul blood, and Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY purified the blood and restored to him the power once more to enjoy his life. Are you suffering from any disease traceable to the same cause? Try Favorite Remedy. Your druggist has it. ONE DOLLAR a bottle. Bear in mind the proprietor's name and address: Dr. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, New York.

A LONDON FOG.

Fifty years ago, when we first became acquainted with them, London fogs were bad enough, but they were on a comparatively limited scale. They have since attained marvelously grand dimensions and intensity, according to the increase of houses and population. What we ordinarily call London, but is more correctly styled the Metropolis, has spread and spread, till it covers a space of about one hundred and twenty square miles. In the winter months every house has a coalfire, some of them two, three, or four, and there are numerous manufactories and public works with furnaces and tall chimneys, all of which less or more emit quantities of smoke. This smoke mingles with what fog there happens to be, and produces a curious mixture, that is now only beginning to be rightly understood. Like every other mist, the fog which rises and is wafted along the valley of the Thames is composed of small particles of water, that ought properly to be dissipated by the action of the sun's heat. Only with difficulty is the sun able to undertake the duty. The smoke poured out from hundreds of thousands of chimneys does not merely mix with the fog. It coats each watery particle with a tarry, oily film, giving it an unnatural character, and preserving it, so to speak, from immediate dispersion. A genuine London fog, therefore, is something more than a fog. It is a prodigiously large volume of mist, held in a kind of thraldom by oleaginous ingredients floated from the tops of chimneys. When we say oleaginous, we, for convenience, take the readiest word to express a condition that would involve some chemical explanations which need not be gone into. Every one will understand that the smoke from the coal fires somehow unites inexplicably with the particles of mist, and keeps the whole thing hovering in a dense cloud over the Metropolis. Not only so. The dingy cloud darkens and pollutes the air, fills the streets, and to a certain extent the houses and lungs of the inhabitants. On such occasions the darkness even at noon is so great that dwellings and places of business have to be lit with gas as at night. As the London gas is more remarkable for its volume than its purity, it adds in deteriorating the atmosphere during fogs, already sufficiently tainted with the exhalations of domestic sewage. At times it is as difficult to get a breath of fresh air as it is to procure a good drink of palatable water.—Chambers's Journal.

BOOKBINDING.

The bookbinders' craft was at its zenith just before the invention of printing; it has waned since, because nobody would care nowadays to give such prices as were cheerfully paid for books in the days when it took twenty-five months of a patient scribe's work to produce one copy of the Bible. The bindings of such costly books were works of art. Milac first, we are told, acquired a reputation for his bindings of Spanish leather, arabesqued and gilt, which superseded the old-fashioned bindings of wood, metal or ivory; but until the close of the fifteenth century the bindings of presentation volumes and of the church books used on high altars of cathedrals were mostly of solid gold or silver. Bruges produced some beautiful works of this description, likewise bindings in cloth of gold wrought with silk of many colors. At Ypres, the great cloth mart of North Europe, were first made plain bindings of cloth, embroidered more or less; but these were used only for small volumes of jests and ballads, and for the horn books out of which the children in noble families learned their letters. Venice had a name for its bindings in ivory and woods, from the East; Florence, like Ghent in Flanders, abounded in brass artificers, and produced brazen bindings gilt or silvered, each one the work of a master craftsman, for none ventured to make book-covers who were not skilled with their tools; but the most gorgeous bindings of all that were made before the invention of printing, came from Rome. Here the guild of Italian goldsmiths had its chief hall; and there was always a sure sale for rich bindings of wrought gold, seeing that the kings and potentates who came to visit the Papal See invariably gave and received presents of splendid books.

THE LION'S TONGUE.

The very peculiar formation of the lion's tongue did not escape the notice of our anatomist, but he does not say much about it. I have now in my hand the dried tongue of a lion; it is covered with sharp-pointed horny papillæ, set very thickly upon its surface. The papillæ on the front portion of the tongue are much larger than those in the rear part of the tongue, but the smaller ones are set much closer together than those in front. Each papilla consists of a horny spine, the point of which is curved and set directly backward, reminding me much of the spines on the tail of the thornback ray. On applying this lion's tongue to the cheek, I find that the roughness is so great that with a little pressure a wound might easily be made in the human skin. The use of this is to scrape off the meat from the bones of the animals, for the lion is not a great bone-eater—he leaves the bones for the hyenas to crack, these animals having teeth especially constructed for the cracking of bones. This peculiar roughness of the tongue is also present, but in a less degree, in the common cat, and it can be seen when the cat is lapping milk, but still better if the tongue of a defunct specimen be taken out, put for a while in spirits, and then pinned out tight on a board. This rough tongue is of great importance to the health of the lion.—Land and Water.

Beauty wins love, but neatness keeps it.

Charles Nelson, Esq., Proprietor Nelson House, speaking to us recently, observed: I suffered so much with Rheumatism that my arm withered, and physicians could not help me. I was in despair of my life, when some one advised me to try St. Jacobs Oil. I did so, and as if by magic, I was instantly relieved, and, by the continued use of the Oil entirely cured. I thank heaven for having used this wonderful remedy, for it saved my life. It also cured my wife.—Port Huron Commercial.

THE ARTIST OF THE MUSIC HALL.

The male singer was a dumpy man, with a swollen head and staring, round, bullet eyes, which he always appeared on the point of shooting at you. You might at any time see how versatile he was by looking into the fried fish shop next door, where his picture hung conspicuously. There he sat, in private dress, surrounded by all his favorite characters, beautifully painted on a huge square of cardboard. The artist had certainly taken a few trifling liberties with the portrait; such, for instance, as embowering his head in a grove of golden curls, whereas, in reality, his hair was a crop of black stubble. His nose was represented as of the most classic mold, while nature had unmistakably given him a snub, to which another painter had added a strongly marked roseate hue, sprinkled with a few corpulent pimples. Yet, all things considered, it was a telling likeness, and easily recognizable with the name written under it; besides, the artist had thrown in such a quantity of rings, breast-pin and gold watch-guard, that every one allowed the jewelry store alone was worth the money, to say nothing of the color and skill expended on it. It was, indeed, a work of art. His appearance on the platform was always a signal for unbounded applause. He appeared at first in evening dress, in which he looked like a dissipated waiter. Turning up the coat collar, pulling his hat over his ears, and assuming an ague-like shiver, denoted genteel poverty, while untying his cravat and pushing his hat to the back of his head was supposed to represent drunkenness. This was considered a very fine performance, and, indeed, was not at all bad, as far as the face and body went; but for the rest, he gave you the idea of a man staggering about with a pair of wooden legs. But ah, these impersonations were nothing to his crossing-sweeper! When he dived into a sort of sentry-box at the side, and, after a few minutes' wait, came out with a red wig, smudged face, ragged dress, and the stump of a broom, the applause was terrific. Each verse bore a reference to some popular man as he was supposed to appear; it might be Napoleon at St. Helena, or it might be Ben Caunt flooring his opponent, but whoever was chosen to the verse invariably wound up with "And he stood just so;" then he went through some mystical pantomime, in which the besom bore a prominent part, finally striking an attitude to soft music, and standing as still and motionless as stone, waiting for the audience to recognize the realization of some shop-window celebrity or well-known statue. But the climax was reached when, in the last verse, he asks, in his character of crossing-sweeper,

"You'll not refuse a mag
To poor Jack Ragg?"

winding up with the usual "He stood just so," assuming to the same soft music an attitude of entreaty, with his hand stretched out. Many a time has a shower of coppers rewarded the effort, Ah, it was grand. His drunken swell was good, his "You shouldn't buy tripe on a Friday," great; but Jack Ragg was the one touch of nature that went home to all hearts. Yet he was not proud for all his ability, for I have heard it said of him, "He was a man as would drink out of anybody's pot."—Tinsley's Magazine.

TAKE CARE OF WILLS.

In the House of Lords, Lord Brougham once mentioned two somewhat remarkable facts, showing the necessity of having a safe place for the deposit of wills. The first case was one in which one of his noble friends, as heir-at-law, lost, and another of his noble friends, as a devisee, gained £30,000 a year. How the first lost it, and the last gained it, was by a will being found in a rusty old box, in an old traveling carriage, and which, therefore, might have been very naturally lost by accident or destroyed from ignorance. The second case was one, also, in which some of his noble friends were concerned, and the sum in question was no less than £160,000. This sum would have been entirely lost to the purposes for which it was intended, if the inquiries relative to the existence of a will with respect to it had been instituted in the winter instead of in the summer. The will was searched for everywhere, but could nowhere be found, until, at last, it was discovered in a grate, and stuffed like a piece of waste paper through the bars; if it had been winter instead of summer, in all probability when the fire had been lighted it would have been destroyed.

Much may be resigned by those who are far indeed from having resigned their will; and the little trials which pass unnoticed by all the world, are often the surest test of our sincerity, and may be the most useful to subdue our perverse inclinations.—Miss Jane Bowdler.

My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.
I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. MRS. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS,

HOW TO JOIN THE SHAKERS.

Three copies of the "Illustrated History of the Shakers," from the time of their leaving England in 1774 until the present time, with garden, village, church and other engravings, conditions of membership, government, etc., mailed postpaid for one 3-cent stamp; 75 copies sent to schools and societies for 50 cents in stamps. It is an undisputed fact that pure Shaker goods are popular everywhere, the public only requiring proof that the goods are genuine. Ample proof is given that Faith Whitcomb's remedies are genuine, and probably no medicines ever grew so rapidly in public favor as Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, which is the best spring medicine; Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, which cures coughs, colds and consumption, and her Shaker Liniment, which surely cures neuralgia and rheumatism, as thousands will testify.
